JUNE BRIDES WILL SOON BE HERE: HURRY WORK ON WEDDING GOWNS

The Month That Always Breaks the Record for Marriages Promises to Bring More Than the Usual Array of Orange Blossoms and White Satins.

June, the month of orange blossoms and wedding rings, is approaching. In a little while there will be a run on the marriage mart that will beat the records of all other months of the year. This is the time that clerks in the marriage license bureau droop exhaustedly from the streuuous demands made on them. Ministers grow pale and wan and full cargoes of newlyweds are wafted daily northward on Reviews to Niagara Falls.

needles frenziedly in an endeavor to make good their promise to have the endless numbers of white satins, tulles and batistes ready in time for the big event.

Already the shops have made everything subservient to the June bride and her countless needs, and the pocketbook of paterfamilias is getting flatter than the proverbial flounder, said to be the flattest of things.

By all the laws of reason and logic the cost of marriage ought to be one of the greatest deterrents. But if love laughs at locksmiths it goes into positive paroxysms of gice at minister's fees, tive paroxysms of gice at minister's fees, trousseaux, outlays and newly-wed house-keeping expenses.

Marriage expensive business? Nonsense. Two can live cheaper than one. And all the sepulchral warnings of those cophisticated beings who have been through the marriage mill make not the slightest impression on the blissfully happy pair over whom Cupid has cast his fatal spell.

From the cynical onlooker's point of view theirs may be only a romance of liney calibre, but who could ever make them believe it was not a high-speed, eight-cylinder affair, made to run world without end, amen?

With no intention of tearing the veil clight-cylinder affair, made to run world without end, amen?

With no intention of tearing the veil of rosy glamour too suddenly aside the Evening Ledges, because it knows that every marriage, be it only an elopement to some nearby Gretna Green, really does cost something, will consider the expense of matrimony in all of its details.
What do trousseaux cost? What does housekeeping cost? Wedding ceremonics? Honeymoons? Wedding rings?
The answers are variable, of course. It all depends on the taste and circumstance in life of the participants. A wedding may be an affair of such inconspicuous simplicity as to fall way below the hundred dollar mark. A trousseau may consist of only a new suit supplemented by refurbished garments of last year's mode, and the bride may be none the less happy. Two or three days at a nearby seaside resort may constitute the homeymoon without love's young dream being in the least shattered.

But, on the other hand, the ceremony may be one of such pomp and splendor that the expenses when totaled run high into the thousands. Bridesmaids, flower girls, a brilliantly decorated church, hundreds of guests, a wedding breakfast, a heneymoon on a private yacht or car, a pretentious home afterward, these are the things that cost.

In a series of articles, girls who are to be married economically and girls who are to the married lavishly tell something of what they have had to spend before being married, and what they figure upon for the expenses of their future household.

In some cases father is the miniater for the married and what they figure upon for the capenses of their future household.

cause each year the number of girls who become self-supporting increases. Providing such a trousseau as a dainty girl yearns for and taking care of one's self in the meantime is no idle joke. Yet thousands do it annually.

In many cases the working girl minithe Honeymoon Express to Niagara Falis, it's Cupid's haleyon time.

Meanwhile, modistes are plying their Meanwhile, modistes are plying their from early childhood with the idea of marriage in back of their heads.

Then there'd have been a hope chest!
A wonderfully capacious box filled to overflowing with billowy, dainty things of lace and ribbons—an accumulation which it takes years to acquire. Sometimes the girls who have hope chests don't ever marry, but to those who do, what a marvelous help it is in lifting the expense burden!

However, if there's satisfaction in having a hope chest, or in having father for a banker, there's just as much, after all, in buying your own things. Each article represents some poignant sacrifice, and is therefore, all the more to be appreciated and taken care of. And so whichever way you look at it the law of compensation mercifully makes itself feit.
