FOODS IN SEASON

PEAS

By ELSIE C. McKAY

Slowly the vegetable season is appreaching. The markets begin to be more tempting with their array of fruits and vegetables, being more nearby products and consequently better for the shorter distance they have to travel. Struwberries have been injured greatly by rains and though the price has been quite low it would not be advisable to do any preserving until they are in a better candition. There will be ample time for preserving when the home products. for preserving when the home products of Jersey arrive more plentifully. There are some Jersey berries in now, but they will be lower in price as the season progresses. Most of the berries in market now come from Maryland and Delaware. Pineapples are about as reasonable as they will be. Therefore, the housewife should look over her stock of jelly glasses and Jurs preparatory to canning and preserving of this fruit, together with strawberries and rhubarb.

Delaware and Jersey asparagus is ex-serving of this fruit, together with straw-berries and rhubarb.

Delaware and Jersey asparagus is ex-ceptionally fine and plentiful; also some from Pennsylvania have arrived.
Peas are coming in much better, since they are especially best when picked a short time from the vine, and as Maryland and Delaware have been sending in plentifully there is a good supply at reasonable prices. Jersey peas are clowly coming in.

Fish is quite pientiful and very reasonable, with the exception of shad, which is quite high. Blue fish are coming in larger and more reasonable amount and are special favorite for broiling. New Kennebec salmon in at 45 cents a pound. The first arrival of the peach was made for the benefit of those with unlimited means, who always crave the out-of-season, but are quite high in price and green; there-fore, not inviting and certainly not to be considered by the average purse. Sweet corn from Florida is also in the market, at a high figure. Peas contain next to beaus, the largest percentage of proteid of any vegetables and when young are easily digested. They should always be served with starchy foods or meats.

Peas are one of the most delicate vegetables when properly prepared, but much of flavor depends entirely upon the cook-ing. They should always be thrown into cold water for about a half an hour to until tender. Rapid boiling has a tenden-cy to harden them. When done, season with salt and half teaspoon of sugar if they have lost part of their sweetness. Turn at once into vegetable dish. Season with butter only or add thick sweet cream. New potatoes and peas cooked together with cream dressing are good

PEAS IN POTATO CUPS. Mix cold mashed potatoes with part of Mix cold masned potatoes with part of the yolk of an egg, reserving other por-tion of the yolk for brushing the potato cup. Form potatoes into cups or nests, brush with egg to which little milk was added and place in oven to brown lightly; fill cups or nests with peas, seasoned, and serve at once. PEAS IN BREAD CASES.

Take stale bread, cut into squares and hollow out centre; brush over with egg and toast in oven or fry in deep lard; fill with creamed peas and serve with sprig of cress, lamb chops and mashed potatoes or browned new potatoes.

Any remaining peas from dinner can always be utilized in a salad or vegetable soup, if only a few, while if a number are left they will make an excellent pea

CREAM OF GREEN PEA SOUP. 1 pint water 1 tablespeen butter 1 bay leaf quart peas small onion Shell the peas. Wash pods and place in kettle; cook one-half hour; drain off, saving the water and adding to it the peas, onion and bay leaf. Cook 15 minutes; press through sleve and add milk.

Rub butter and flour together, moisten with little milk and pour gradually into peas, stirring constantly until creamy consistency. Serve at once. PIQUANT PEA SOUP

One peck fresh peas; cook until tender; put through sieve! Chop two onions and fry in butter; add six cloves, one hay leaf and stir all together. Put in a table-spoon of salt and a cup of canned or whois tomatoes. Let all cook very slowly for an hour. If it seems too thick add a little boiling water and let it cook a little longer. Then add pinch of red pepper and tablespoon of butter and just before serving a cupful of squares of bread which have been fried brown in butter.

GREEN PEA PUREE.

GREEN PEA PUREE. GREEN PEA PUREE.

Steam one pint of peas in one pint water until soft, rub through sieve, add sait, pepper and other condiments to suit taste. Boil and then add gill of cream and boil again, and serve with fried bread or toast. And left over peas can be very nicely made into puree peas, which are always associated with roast lamb, chicken or any other meat croquettes, and form a nice garnish around the edge of platter containing any of the meationed dishes.

GREEN PEAS, STEWED.

Shell 1/2 peck young peas, put in sauce-pan, add 1 tablespoon of sugar and suf-ficient boiling water to cover, add 2 ounces of butter and 1 head of lettuce; boil 15 minutes, remove lettuce, add small teaspoon of salt and cook until about dry; add little pepper. Mix 1 egg with 1/2 cup-milk, add to peas; let it remain a few minutes over the fire without boiling, then serve.

PEAS STEWED WITH LAMB. Chop I pound of lamb, cook slowly with I pint of green peas in water to cover # until done. Season with butter, pepper, salt and ½ teacup of cream.

NOVEL WAYS OF SERVING PEAS. Have freshly cooked, seasoned peas hot. Make a nice light omelet, turn out on platter and before folding over place some of the peas on omelet, fold and pour remaining peas over omelet and serve at once. In the same manner mushrooms, asparagus tips, jelly or to-matoes may be used for variety.

SANDWICHES.

Bread should be 1 day old, sliced very thin, crusts cut off after filling and then cut triangular or heart shaped. Various kinds of sandwiches are legion, but if one wants them made of meats it does not necessitate the outlay for meats if there are any left-overs of any kind. Veal, chicken, lamb, beef or any-thing left from the Saturday or Sunday dinner, can be minced, mixed with mayonnaise, and an excellent, tasty sandwich will result.

Cream cheese and pimento should be included in the list, because of their ex-cellent appetizing qualities. Spread layer of cream cheese on buttered bread, cover with ringlets of pimento-stuffed olives and another slice of thin, buttered bread. Potato salad can be packed in wax paper in a paper container, and on serving place several tulip radishes on individual plate and cut skin of red radish to form tulip.

Sweet sandwiches-Very nice are dates mixed with rolled nuts and spread be-tween buttered bread. Any nice fruit syrup made of pineapple, strawberries, oranges or lemons, separate or blended, and placed in bottles, is excellent when a thermos bottle containing ice is taken along. Hot coffee should be in another thermos bottle. Thus apple arguestless thermos bottle. Thus ample refreshing drinks are to be had.

MEMORIAL LUNCHEON. If one has a party of friends gathered together this day it is pleasant to serve a dainty repast out on the lawn or open veranda, if possible. Decorate table with flags at corners and red, white and blue candle shades. In the cold water for about a nation and put them into a kettle of boiling water. Always add salt to water; boil slowly in uncovered kettle all of which are in bloom and significant of the day. Serve at each guest's place a little tiny basket (either knit or of straw) filled with hub flowers and tiny flag; in the bottom of the basket place several bonbons. MENU.
