Temorrow marks the opening of the big syent—the ETENING LEDGER Cooking School for all Philadelphia women at Horticultural Hall.

The hour is 2:30 p. m.
Everything is ready. The model kitchen has been arranged and Mrs. Carroll announces today her complete menus for the entire first week. Her lectures will centre around these menus, including comments on other household features side from the cooking.

During her course of lectures Mrs. Carroll will make a specially upon the adcooking, dweiling especially upon the ad-

Carroll will make a specialty of gas-range cooking, dwelling especially upon the advantages of efficient use of ovens. In an interview today she said:

"There is an impression among many housewives that the ovens of a gas range can be used only for baking a cake or rosating meats. Most women do not realize the great quantity of work that can be accomplished by utilizing both can be accomplished by utilizing both the broiling and the baking ovens at one the broiling and the baking ovens at one and the same time.

In speaking on the food subject of housekeeping, Mrs. Carroll will have many interesting things to say about marketing. She will touch on the illusions regarding cheap cuts of meats, on the false ideas of economy, on the proper manner of ordering by telephone and on the necessity of cooking by time. She will speak on means of obtaining efficiency in the kitchen by establishing a standard to work by, on the advantages of the all-gas kitchen from the standpoint of economy of time, energy and money.

Mrs. Carroll does not believe in set rules. She realizes that it is often necessary to adjust one's self to conditions.

"No. I should never dream of making a charge for my classes," she said in her delightful Scotch accent, which not even 25 years' residence in this country has been able to change. "When any one happens to have some gift then I firmly believe they should use it as a means for helping to bring happiness to others. Cooking happens to be the thing I can do best, and I know perfectly well that I ought to assist others to the same end. When I look about me and see some of the married unhappiness I know perfectly well that the majority of it due to poor cooking on the part of the

"Just at first this seems a strange reason for married misery, but you know the old proverb that the 'way to a man's heart lies through his stomach. There really is lots of truth in that. No man on earth likes to come home at night to a badly cooked meal. And lots of men are forced to do so, poor souls.

After a hard day's work, when they have lots of little things to worry them and try them, they do have an idea of returning to some quiet haven, where peace and comfort await them. But they find nothing of the sort. Often there is more trouble in the home than even at business. They will find an untidy, froway-headed wife, badly dressed, unat-

"Yes, I am convinced that women are largely responsible for all this drink and saloon trouble. If modern wives only tried to learn a little more about cooking and home comfort they would be successful in keeping their husbands at home in the evenings, and particularly away from the saloons.

'It stands to reason that if a man isn't going to have comfort in his own home, he'll go where he can get it. Saloons are made very attractive, you know. The wife who realizes this fact has taken the first step toward reformation. For she will know perfectly well that she has something to compete with. "I am certain that Mrs. Carroll's forth-

Schoolgirls, College Women and Matrons in Rush to Enter Contest for Cookery Prizes.

No recent event has stirred up so much activity and enthusiasm among school girls as the Evening Lepger's Cooking chool Contest. The contest is the rincipal topic of discussion at all of he cooking school centres of the city. the cooking school centres of the city. Enthusiasm is running high among the children and it seems now that the entries will run well into the thousands. Many children, who have heard the Cooking Contest Editor of the EVENING LEDGER, have shown exceptional eager-ness to win one of the four prizes which will be given in each of the four di-visions. These children are making elaborate and careful preparations to capture a prize. They are going about their arrangements with pride and determination, and it can safely be said that the prizes will be won by children who will take the contest in an entirely serious manuer. serious manner.

They are being printed daily in the EVENING LEDGER and circulars containing the rules are being distributed to the various cooking schools of the city. Another feature of which children should not lose sight is the value of the various prizes in the four divisions of the contest. The announcement of the sec-is a splendid idea," said Miss Day, head of the domestic science department at Temple College, "for every girl should know all the ins and outs of cooking. So many girls fail adequately to realize the mmense value a cooking course offers. It really doesn't matter what career a girl desires, the gentle art of cooking always proves useful.

The new idea, which some people air, as to domestic science being undignified is the sheerest nonsense. I do not think that any branch of the arts is finer than domestic science. KNOX RETURNS HOME

Lusitania Survivor Vividly Describes Great Disaster.

Samuel M. Knox, president of the New York Shipbuilding Company, a survivor of the Lusitania disaster, has reached his home, 310 West Upsal street, Germantown. He described the last moments of the giant Cunarder with dramatic vividness. Many false impressions are corrected in his narrative and the only story of the Cromptons is pathetically told by him. He fitted a lifebelt on one of the young Crompton girls just before the ship took her final plunge. Mr. Crompton, he says, was at the time fastening a preserver on one of the smallest of the six

Mr. Knox said that England is building battleships faster than she is losing them by German and Ottoman attacks. The prevailing notion that England's navy is being slowly destroyed, he said, is false. England has now as many battleships as she had at the outbreak of the war, if not more. Submarines are also being constructed with great rapidity.

He said the English are desirous of obtaining the moral support of this county in the war. Physical support would, of course, be acceptable, but it is not expected that this will be given.

Hughie Mack, the penderous comedian of the Vitagraph Company, has developed an extreme case of absent-mindenness He was announced to appear in person at a local picture house recently, and, having a dress suit case weighing only about 20 pounds to carry, decided to walk to the theatre, which was only 10 blocks distant. When Hughle arrived at his destination he remembered he had forgotten a particular cost, a necessary part of his costume, and started for home. still carrying the dress suit case.

He did not realize he might have left the suit case at the theatre until its increasing weight attracted his attention, but by that time he was almost home Determined to see the end of the adventure, he again started for the theatre. After walking five blocks on the return trip a settee on display in front of a furniture store invited, and he sat down to rest. Some two hours later Hughle was awakened by a party of his friends, re-turning from the theatre, where they had been to applaud the work of their favor-ite, had he appeared.

Wonderful Italian Films

The Foreign Film Company, of this ity, has imported a number of Ambrosia Italian) films, which, when shown to the public, are likely to cause sensations. At a private screening last Friday, the photoplay editor of the Evening Lengen was amazed and delighted by the ab-solutely marvelous photography, the re-markable acting and the general high standard of these films. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" has been considered the last word in motion picture photography, but even so excellent a master as Griffith has much to learn from "The Lady of the Black Castle," the first of the Ambrosia films to be screened Friday. Such superlative photography is a revelation. American camera men have much to learn, when judged by the Ambrosia film. The foreign reels were not merely wonderfully clear and distinct—they were artistic to the highest degree. And one scene, representing a forest at night, with a number of men with torches searching through the woods, was such a delight to the eye that the hardened film exchange men onsidered the last word in motion pic-ure photography, but even so excellent a hat the hardened film exchange men resent applauded.

In so far as the acting is concerned, merican leading ladies had better take American leading ladies had better take a leaf out of the book of the young Italian girl who played the mysterious "Lady" of the castle. For looks, grace of movement and especially for pantomime, she is head and shoulders above any American actress appearing on the screen. She is the Aguglia of motion pletures. pictures.

Another film shown depicted undersea life at close range. The Williamson sub-marine pictures, recently shown at the Garrick Theatre, caused much comment, but they are not in the same class with the Italian reels. Every fish, mollusc, crustacean—everything that lives in the sea is shown with startling clearness and fidelity. Especially interesting and amusing is a duel to the death of two huge lobsters. They "shake hands" with their claws in the most approved prize ring style, and then, feinting for an opening, they spar, counter and eventually one gets a strangle hold on its opponent and the fight is ended.

the fight is ended. Taken all in all these Ambrosia films are truly wonderful—they show such remarkable improvement over all other films, that regret must be expressed that the war has practically ended the importation of films from Italy. It will be two or more veers before any work. wo or more years before any more film can be made and sent here.

"Her Own Way"-Globe

Florence Reed, whose work in the regular theatre the last season brought her forward prominently in the principal part in "The Yellow Ticket," will be shown at the Globe Theatre the first three days of this week in a screen production of Clyde Fitch's comedy-drama, "Her Own Way.

William Farnum, in "The Plunderer," is the picture that will have its first showing in this city on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Rose Coghlan's View of the Photoplay One of the most remarkable women on the American stage today is Rose Cogh-lan, who will shortly be seen in Lubin's "The Sporting Duchess."

Miss Coghlan played Lady Teamle in "The School for Scandal," the first at-traction presented at Wallack's Theatre, traction presented at Wallack's Theatre, in New York city. That was 30 years ago, and marked the opening of what was then America's most fashionable playhouse. Recently, this famous theatre closed its doors forever, and Miss Coghlan had the honor of being the last star to appear on the stage in the performance that closed its history.

When interview, she was wearing the same gown used at the opening and at the closing of Wallack's Theatre, and it looked new enough to have just come same gown used at the opening and at the closing of Wallack's Theatre, and it looked new enough to have just come from the costumers, and the noted actress appears as fresh and is just as active as when the costume was first used.

Speaking of her picture play experience, in the production of "The Sporting Duchess," she said:

"Everybody at the Lubin studio was perfectly lovely to me, and while the work is all so different to that on the stage, I enjoyed every minute of it. I think I surprised them just a little bit, especially when the scenes were made in which the hunt takes place. Mr. O'Neil, who directed the picture, came to me and inquired if I would 'just sit' on a horse and be photographed. When I told him I intended to ride, he seemed worried about my personal welfare. I will confess that I half regretted this declaration for, I had not been on a horse's back for 25 years. However, I had made the bluff and I intended to make good. The horses were brought sround at 9 o'clock in the morning and until 5 that evening I was almost continuously in the saddle. At 6 o'clock, I was in my bed and I stayed the Western Lubin Studio, at Los Angeles, Cal., who is now in the East on a business trip, has become the owner of a new steam yacht, which is at present being fitted out in New York for a moving-picture cruise around Los Angeles.

Shortly after Captain Melville arrived at the Lubin studio in Philadelphia he received word from Los Angeles that his steam yacht Lucero had been blown ashore during a gale and wrecked. Al-most immediately Melville got into communication with yacht brokers in New York, and the following day he pur-chased the 165-foot steam yacht Vergana. This yacht is especially equipped for deep-sea cruising and at present is being fitted out for the long cruise through the Fanama Canal and up the western coast to Los Angeles. A camera man will take pictures en route, and when the yacht reaches its new home port she will be used extensively in a series of Lubin productions.
