CIRCULATION MEN DISCUSS METHODS OF AIDING BUSINESS

Readjustment of Relations of Employer and Employe and Vocational Training Discussed by Agents of Curtis Publishing Company.

A readjustment of relations between employer and employe for the benefit of both and a nation-wide system of voca-tional education were among the chief subjects discussed today at the opening sensions of the three-day convention of the circulation agents of the Curtis Publishing Company.

The morning session was held in the Adelphia Hotel, the headquarters of the convention, and the afternoon discussion and open symposium took place in the auditorium of the Curtis Building. M. E. Douglass presided at both sessions.

The afternoon session opened with a luncheon, at which Cyrus H. K. Curtis, president of the company, welcomed the delement.

Formal announcement was made this morning of the plans of the company to provide its 50,000 salesboys with a training in the principles of business that will involve no expense to them and will materially increase their commercial efficiency. The youngsters will be urged to attend the public schools as long as possible under this system and means will be adopted to help them financially.

When it becomes necessary for the

When it becomes necessary for the boys to terminate their public school days arrangements will be made to place them n positions in towns and cities in which they live. An effort will be made to find situations for the lads that will offer promise of advancement and at the same time provide adequate compensation.

BUSINESS MEN LIKE SYSTEM. The "Curtis System," as it is known among educators, will aim to combine schooling with industry and prevent the entrance of the American youth into blind alley" occupations. The idea has ound favor particularly among business men, who have been hiring untrained boys and have been under the necessity of discharging them within a few weeks. The plans are similar in many respects to the proposed continuation school tem, authorized by the Legislature of this State, but not yet placed in operation. CURTIS TO WELCOME DELEGATES.

The delegates to the convention are various points in Pennsylvania, New Jersey. West Virginia, Maryland. Delaware and the District of Columbia. The convention speakers, other than the Curtis agents, will include Meyer Bloomfield, director of the Bureau of Vo-cational Education of Boston, and Carl Schurz Vrooman, First Assistant Secretry of the Department of Agriculture, Wash-ington. The latter's subject will be "The Ideal Farm Publication: The Function of the Agricultural Press in Building Up a More Progressive Agriculture,"

The program of entertainment includes theatre parties and attendance at the Athletics-Washington baseball game Thursday. Similar conventions were held a few weeks ago in Detroit and Minneapolls and the parers read at those meet. oils and the papers read at those meet-ings were devoted largely to the prepa-ration of boys for industrial and com-mercial careers.

CARL FABRY, ESCAPED

Taken at Girard Avenue and Fifth Street-Walked Out of Penitentiary March 24.

Carl Fabry, the convict who dressed immelf in the clothes of a prison guard and walked out of the Eastern Penitentiary with a crowd of visitors on March 24, was arrested this afternoon at 5th street and Girard avenue by two sons of Warden Robert J. McKenty and Guards Sherman and Dutton.

Fabry had been working on a farm at Glassboro, N. J., since the day after his escape. He came to Philadelphia on Saturday. Word that he was here reached Warden McKenty this morning, and at mon John and Reuben McKenty and the two prison guards were sent to 5th street and Glrard avenue on a tip that Fabry had an engagement to meet a friend there.

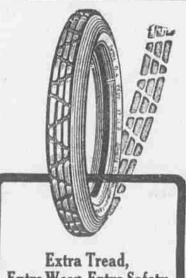

They hid in doorways for nearly two, hours. Then Fabry appeared, walking elsurely toward 5th street on Girard avelessurely toward 5th street on Girard avenue. He were rough gray trousers, a noft shirt, blue coat and gray cap.

He threatened to fight when the guards stepped out on him, but surrendered finally. When he reached the prison he said he had learned from the post-mistress at Glassboro that a farmer named Ivins nearby wanted a mian. Fabry applied there and secured work. He never left the farm for two months. On Saturday he ventured back to Philadel-Saturday he ventured back to Philadel-phia, intending to see a relative. Fabry began a six-year term for housebreaking in December, 1914. He was convicted before Judge Barratt of robbing the home of James Geiger, of 5512 Germantown avenue, and the police afterward connected him with other robberies. When he was arrested Fabry had pawn lickets for jewelry and silver valued at Fabry's escape from prison was one of the most remarkable ever recorded. In broad daylight, while prison guards were patrolling the corridors and eyed their charges through the complicated system of mirrors, Fabry slipped into a locker room and stole the clothing of William Patterson, an overseer. In the new clothes he mingled with a passing group of sightseers and passed with them through the doors to freedom.
