"FLYING SQUADRON" DELIVERS SMASHING BLOWS AT RUM EVIL

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon and Daniel A. Poling, in Speeches at Forrest Theatre, Open 3-day Campaign Here.

Smashing blows simed directly at the root of the liquor evil in this country by famous "Flying Squadron of America" were delivered this afternoon America" were delivered this afternoon at a public meeting in the Forrest Theatre, which opened a three-day campaign in this city. The realization of national prohibition in the near future was prophesied. The secret alliance by which the rum traffic has gained and maintained its supremacy were exposed and five fundamental reasons for the abolition of the liquor traffic were outlined.

The leading speakers at the meeting The leading speakers at the meeting were Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, a prominent author, lecturer and minister, and Daniel A. Poling, president associate of the Christian Endeavor Society of America. Magistrate Robert Carson presided and introduced the speakers.

Magistrate Carson said that his experience on the beach had made it cerperlence on the bench had made it cer-tain to him that the liquor evil was the worst of the evils with which this country had to deal.

PROHIBITION POLITICAL ISSUE. That prohibition is one of the greatest present political issues was affirmed by both speakers. "If the political parties of this country do not get on the water wagon, they will go under it," declared Doctor Sheldon.

'Never again will a Congressman be lected in the United States without declaring himself either for or against national prohibition. There never will be another general election without the recognition of prohibition as one of the great issues before the people," said Mr.

Poling.
The reasons why national prohibition must deal with the liquor traffic were outlined by Doctor Sheldon, as follows:
"First, it is a national issue because the Government draws revenue from the traffic and protects it. "Second, the people are demanding na-tional prohibition because the liquor States do not protect their humanity from the evil of the liquor traffic Cities like New York, Philadelphia, Boaton, Chicago have so far taken no steps to re-move the saloons with all their crime-producing and evil results. Humanity is worth more than property. Humanity is being destroyed by the saloon. If the buildings in these cities were being de-stroyed by gangs of lawless men, the people would be very indignant and do everything in their power to arrest and punish these men. The liquor is depunish these men. The liquor is de-stroying that which is worth more than all the property in these cities. If the liquor States will not protect their hu-manity, the United States Government ought to do it for them. This is not an invasion of State rights, but a protection of them.

"Third. The prohibition States them-selves demand national prohibition to protect their State rights; when the Webb-Kenyon bill, the interstate com-merce measure, was passed by Congress was a great protection to the State rights of Kansas. All the prohibition States are demanding national prohibi-tion, so that they may be protected from the invasion of the liquor States.

"Fourth. National prohibition is demanded in the interest of uniformity of legislation. What is a crime in 16 States ought to be a crime in every other State.

If a man makes and sells liquor in Kansas we put him in jail. If he makes and sells liquor in New York and Pennayl-vania the people send him to the Legislature. Such a condition of things is a legal absundiry. legal absurdity.

"Fifth. The greatest need of national prohibition is the need of humanity. If people are worth more than property the liquor traffic ought to be abolished. By the common consent of intelligent man-kind alcohol is now known to be the great common destroyer. As long as it is made some one will want to sell it, and others will want to drink it. The only real remedy for the world is the complete annihilation of the traffic by forbidding the manufacture of alcohol as beverage and

WHY THE TRAFFIC EXISTS. The five reasons which permit the exstence of the liquor traffic, he said, are: "First. The drinking habit of hu-manty.

"Second. The abnormal profit from the manufacture and sale of liquor.

"Third. The falsehood, which has been accepted as a truth, that alcohol is good for a medicine, a beverage and even a

"Fourth. The falsehood, also accepted as a truth, that the liquor traffic is a necessary evil, and therefore a revenue should be derived from it.

"Fifth. The connection of the liquor traffic with politica."

Mr. Poling dealt chiefly with the so-clal aspects of the liquor question. The cost of drink in suffering among the women and children of the country, he told with figures and statistics he showed what could be done for the working classes of America with the money now expended for intoxicating liquors.

"Put the money invested in the liquor traffic into 20 other honest enterprises that supply the comforts and necessities of life and that same money will employ 3,000,000 more wage-earners than it now employs," said Mr. Poling. "The saloon The connection of the liquor

14-YEAR-OLD GIRL ACCUSES FOUR MEN; ANOTHER, IN STUPOR, MAY BE DRUGGED

Lillian Buckley Taken From Pic- Edna Martin Points Out Youths nic, in Stupor, to Man's Home, and Is Sent to Hospital-Four Held by Magistrate.

Four youths faced Magistrate Harris Lillian Buckley has been unconscious noon, when the girl collapsed at a picnic more than a score of young people spent Memorial Day,

The girl, who is 14 years old, told her nother during one of her brief intervals of consciousness that she was "given something to drink" by one of the young men, and it is thought possible that a glass of lemonade which she drank was drugged.

All afternoon the girl lay in a stupor and at evening the four youths who are under arrest volunteered to take her ome. It appears that they decided to that he started home with her, take her to the home of Jesse Cadwalader, 17 years old, of 1222 Rush street, and there she spent the night. Cad-was called in, said he could not determine whether the girl had been ill treated. She was sent to the Presbyterian Hospital. Cadwalader was held without bail for a further hearing June 6 to await the results of the girl's illness, with William White, 17 years old, of 2525 North Marvine street, and Roy Cimotta, 13 years old, of 5942 Market street. George Hays, of 2539 North lith street, said he was 18 years North 11th street, said he was 18 years old, but his mother said he was only 14, and the Magistrate decided to give him the benefit of the doubt and sent him to the House of Detention.
