

NORWEGIAN WOMAN'S TENNIS CHAMPION PLAYS HERE-LOUDERMILK PROVES TO BE STAR

MISS BJURSTEDT, TENNIS MARVEL, HAS TWO VITAL WEAKNESSES

Norwegian Girl Depends Wholly on Ground Strokes; However, Inexperience on Turf Courts Is Handicap-Honor System in Baseball Gives Way to Iron Rule.

Not since the playing days of Mrs. Thomas C. Bundy, nee May Sutton, have Philadelphia tennis followers been as interested in the presence of a woman racket wielder in their midst as they are in Miss Molla Bjurstedt, woman's champion of Norway and woman's indoor champion of the United States.

Miss Bjurstedt Lacks Only Experience on Turf Courts

Taking her all-around work, Miss Bjurstedt is, indeed, a remarkable player. With the experience on turf courts that the other women of this country have had, she would unquestionably be among if not the foremost player in the land.

Miss Bjurstedt, who, by the way, pronounces her name as though it were "Bustedt," is better than the average golfer. So fond of the British game is she that she followed several pairs around the Merion course this week.

Weakness at Net and on Service

Women lawn tennis players are naturally handicapped in their matches with men because of the superiority of the latter in covering the court; consequently it is rare in mixed doubles for women to follow their service to the net.

Rickey Forced to Reverse His Tactics With His Team

Branch Rickey's Browns are here for a four-game series with the Athletics, and it is a much different club, in more ways than one, from the team which had a "joy ride" through the league season last year.

The two players whom Rickey induced to come back at a greatly increased salary were the first to break traces this season. They are Hamilton and Baumgartner, both of whom were suspended a few weeks ago.

Honor System Gives Way to Iron Hand

When Rickey took charge of the Browns he tried to use an honor system in the discipline of the club, but discovered that his men needed more than that to keep them in fit shape to play ball.

Now Rickey is running his club with an iron hand, and though the Browns are not up in the running, they have played well, considering the number of accidents the team has encountered.

Loudermilk One of American League's Real Sensations

Back in 1912, the veteran Ted Sullivan, scout for the White Sox and general handy man for President Comiskey, made the remark that Bill James, then pitching for Seattle, would be one of the greatest pitchers in the game in two years' time.

Last summer Ted Sullivan watched Grover Loudermilk, of Louisville, pitch a few games. He declared Loudermilk had more natural "stuff" than he had ever seen.

Loudermilk is still wild, but not nearly so bad as he was before he was sent to Louisville. When he has control, the big fellow is almost unhittable, as his record of two two-hit and a one-hit game already this season indicate.

A younger brother of Loudermilk is pitching in the Central Association, and is due to come back to the majors this fall if he has finally learned to control the ball.

Doyle's Bonehead Play Recalls Local "Ivory"

Larry Doyle forgot that there was only one man out when he caught a ball thrown toward the plate by Outfielder Moran, of the Braves, who was trying to head off a runner from third who was scoring on the sacrifice.

This play was stupid, but an outfielder now with one of the local clubs once caught a fly ball, with two men on base, one out and his team leading by a run, and to the amazement of the crowd, tucked the ball in his pocket and ran to the clubhouse.

"That Reminds Me" - You are telling a story to those around - All are listening except one - All the others hang on spellbound.

You may be spilling a yarn on soap, Or one that drifts to a monoplane; While the centre of interest in his dope Twines a lady in Portland, Maine;

With the average weather we have been drawing in May and early June, it is no wonder that interest in baseball is a trifle frayed.

Is History Repeating? On at least four occasions in the last five years we have watched the estimable Phillies rise up in April and May and display all the so-called earmarks of a champion.

Two days ago we missed an easy 28-foot putt. Henry Ford is right. A cigarette is no good for a steady nerve.

If the Dodgers continue their winning streak, Mr. Ebbets will be glad to withdraw his charge that "baseball is still in its infancy." The Colonel will then be willing to admit that it has at last arrived as a worthy game.

Even when traveling at an abnormal clip, it was hardly possible to figure the Yanks up with the White Sox, Red Sox or Tigers. The stuff wasn't quite there, barring a supernatural break of fortune.
