Architect Has Traveled 18 Miles a Day for 28 Years Between Ardmore and Broad Street - Outdistances Globe Trotter.

Remembers the Days When Volunteer Hosecart Waited at the Railroad Station to Take Tom Wallace to a Fire.

RECORD HELD BY COMMUTER Has commuted twice a day be-tween Ardmore and Broad Street Station for 28 years. Yearly distance traveled, 5544 miles, total distance, 155,232 miles. Equivalent to distance around the world six and a half times.

The real globe trotter is not the man who usually starts a conversation with: Late one afternoon, while I was sitting at a cafe table in Nagasaki, Japan, etc." On almost any train that leaves Broad Street Station or the Reading Terminal for the suburbs late in the afternoon you could find half a dozen men who have traveled the fifteen or twenty thousand miles the Nagasaki fellow has gone and have never even counted up.

But the paragon of all long-distance commuters in these parts, the man who holds the record, who has traveled more miles than there would be in a piece of thread wound around the equator six times, is Henry L. Reinhold, Jr., an architect, who has offices at 1500 Walnut street. He became a commuter 28 years ago, while living in Ardmore, and he has been living there ever since.

Now count up. It is nine miles to Ard-That makes is miles commuting a day.

Mr. Reinhold comes to town every day except Sundays, Christmas Day, Washigten's Birthday, Labor Day, July 4th and Memorial Day. That is 18 miles 308 limes a year, or 5514 miles a year. In 23 years that makes 155,232 miles, and as the world's belt is only a matter of 24,000 at the "corporation" line, this commuter has some the equivalent of nearly six and a half times around the globe.

"Ardmore had many old commuters," said Mr. Reinhold today. "For instance, there was Harry Apple and Tom Wallace, the syrup manufacturer; Bill Reynold's That makes 18 miles commuting a day.

there was Harry Apple and Tom Wallace, the syrup manufacturer; Bill Reynolds and William Jerolemon, but they are all deed. Tom Wallace was our fire chief in the old days at Ardmore. He had a two-wheeled hose cart which used to go out on fires in the borough.

Often when he saw a burning house from the train window Wallace would say he hoped his hose cart would be at the station to meet him. Once the hose cart did meet him at the station—waited there for him—so that he could go to the "Unitil 10 years ago I always sat in the same seat in the smoking car. But I slopped smoking, and now ride in the other cars. Commuters on the Ardmoro train in the old days didn't go in much fer card playing in the smoker. It was train in the old days didn't go in much for eard playing in the smoker. It was usually a question of talk, and a good feal more talk than there is nowadays, all about politics and what the President would do. You see, the President had president those days as well as now. The met more people on the trains that he knew than he does now, and so there was more conversation. The train strike wasn't as good, and there were not many supper parties after the theatre, for that would have meant missing the last train.

BRIEF CITY-WIDE NEWS

"$50 SPRAINED HIS ANKLE"-SCOTT

"Your honor, the defendant never had a sprained ankle until we offered him $56 to soothe his injured feelings." This statement was made by John R. K. Scott, an attorney, at a hearing in an accident case before Magistrate Beaton today, Mr. Scott represented Joseph M. Crawford, Windsor Hotel, whose automobile knocked down Maxwell Seigel, 568 North 2d street, "The shin-plasters of Civil War days had nothing on the $50 ankle bandage of the defendant," Mr. Scott said. "He was able to walk unaided into this office at the hearing a week ago. That $50 turned the trick. As soon as he saw the money coming his way he put $150 worth of bandages around a $50 ankie." Crawford was discharged.

FEARING HUSBAND, WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Fear of her husband impelled Mrs. Eather Cooperstein, of 406 Queen street, mother of three children, to attempt suicide at her home today by drinking acid, according to the story she told physicians at Mt. Sinai Hospital. The woman is expected to recover. Mrs. Cooperstein says her husband was beating the children today and had made threats against her and her relatives. She tried to protect the little ones and, failing, ran into the kitchen and took acid. When she told her husband, she declares, he beat her.

OLD CUSTOMS INSPECTOR DIES Charles P. Jenes, one of the most popular customs inspectors along the river front, died today at his home, 4251 Ogden street, following a protracted illness. Mr. Jones was 45 years in the Government's service, being appointed in February, 1875. He was 65 years old. At an early age he enlisted in the Union army and fought valiantly throughout the Civil War. He was formerly connected with the Sunday Dispatch. He is survived by two sons and daughter. For the past 10 years Mr. Jones was stationed at the Point Breeze plant of the Atlantic Refining Company, where he had charge of exports, Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

MR. BORDORVISH WAS VERY INQUISITIVE

Mrs. Catherine Morchia, of 3173 Almond street, wore her new eyeglasse today. She had never worn glasses before. As she walked down Tilton street, Peter Bordorvish, who lives at 3128, was standing in his doorway. He wanted to inspect the glasses and asked Mrs. Morchia to take them off and hand them to him. When she refused he tried to pull them from her face. Finding this impossible he struck the woman between the eyes with his elenched fist, breaking the glasses and cutting Mrs. Morchia. This was the testimony at a hearing before Magistrate Emory, in his office, Front street and Susquehanna avenue. Nordorvish was held in $500 bail for a further hearing.

ALL PATRONS AT THIS STABLE MUST BE SOBER

All patrons of the livery stable owned by Gerald Kannedy, 1715 Frankford avenue, will be sober from now on, as it cost the proprietor $10 and costs to let a team out to a man that was in such an alleged intoxicated condition that be ran the animals until they fell from exhaustion. Kannedy, who was brought into court on charges preferred by Otto Bruchle, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was fined and reprimanded by Magistrate Borie at the 2d street and Frankford avenue station today,

BRUMBAUGH PRESIDENTIAL BOOM ATTACKED

The Grundy organization has now turned its guns openly upon Governor Brumbaugh as a Presidential possibility. The Bristol Courier, an afternoon newspaper generally reputed to be the official Grundy organ, yesterday attempted editorially to discredit the possibility of the Governor becoming a candidate, and in effect promises "an opposition from Pennsylvania itself which would promptly and effectually suppress him in the national councils."

RESCUED CREW WILL LAND HERE TODAY

The tug Wellington will land the rescued crew of the foundered schooner Mary L. Crosby at this port late today. Members of the crew were rescued Wednesday afternoon by the Government tug Patuxent, and transferred later to the Wellington, of the Cook Cummer Steamship Company. It is believed the Mary L. Crosby has gone to pieces off Hatteras.

Members of the Campaign Committee for the Sisters of Mercy Hospital at 53d street and Cedar avenue expect to reach the desired $200,000 figure by the end of the week. A total of $2000 was added to the fund yesterday, of which $500 was a donation from the J. G. Brill Car Building Company,

GAMBLER GIVES POLICE INFORMATION FOR CRUSADE

A prominent gambler, whose identity police officials will not disclose, today gave Director Porter, of the Department of Public Safety, a complete list of all the gambling houses running in this city. This is the first move in a new campaign to wipe out gambling from Philadelphia. Director Porter gave the police captains and lieutenants addresses of all houses running within their precincts. With the list was a short notice that these gambling houses must be closed up immediately, and that the captains and lieutenants will be held personally responsible for any future infringements of the law.

MAD DOG BITES THREE CHILDREN

Search is being made today by the police in the vicinity of 18th and Hamilton streets for the mad dog which bit three children. The three children bitten last night were John Murray, 10 years old, of 1803 Callowhill street; James MacManigan, 14 years old, of 2443 Meredith street, and Jean McCourt, 4 years old, of 406 North 19th street. All were treated in the Garretson Hospital. Each child was bitten in the left leg.

GIRLS ESCAPE FROM HOSPITAL; ARE RETURNED

The three girls under detention at the Philadelphia General Hospital who walked out of the institution last night were captured early today. Attention of a patrolman was attracted at 15th and Bainbridge streets by the three girls clad in the checked gingham gowns of the hospital. He sent them back to the institution. They are: Agnes Brown, 16 years old; Nettie Dean, 19, and Laura Baker, 20.

BOY HERO RESCUES PLAYMATE

Nine-year-old John Mullaney, of 532 North New Market street, calmly dived into the river after his 7-year-old playmate, Hellek Salinsky, of 608 North Front street, when the latter lost his balance and fell over the concrete abutment at Noble street. He caught the younger lad by the hair and towed him to a ladder. Pedestrians pulled the boys to safety,

RAILROADS CUT RATES TO ATLANTIC CITY

Competition between the Philadelphia and Reading Railway and the Pennsylvania lines to Atlantic City has been ended, as the result of a reduction by the Pennsylvania in the price of the 150-trip tickets to the New Jersey coast. Formerly these cost $75 from this city. The new price is $62.50. The reduction was made by the Pennsylvania at the solicitation of the South Jersey Commuters' Association, Baseball Lotteries Run in All Big Es tablishments, It Is Said.

Ruitreads and other large corporations operating in Philadelphia will be asked to co-operate with the police in their campaign to stamp out baseball pools. Detectives Walters and Ayers, who are onducting war on the lotteries, have received assurances that their efforts will be aided by the officials of these com-Virtually every large business institution, the detectives say, has at least one baseball pool, organized by its employes The interest in the results is so great that the men refuse to go to their homes until the last run is scored, and even then they gather in groups to hold "postmortems" on what might have happened if things had turned out differently. "We want to get these men back to their homes," Detective Walters said. "They become so absorbed in the workings of the pools that they forget all about their other duties. It even affects heir business relations to a large extent Then, too, it takes away a great deal of their weekly earnings, for the basepall pool enthusiast will join several pools, figuring out that his winnings in any one will recoup him for his losses in the others.
