

TIME LIMIT ENDS TONIGHT FOR ENTRIES IN EVENING LEDGER SCHOOL OF COOKERY

Young Folk Competing in Culinary Art for Valuable Prizes Swell Throng That Hears Expert and Sees Her Demonstrate Truth of Her Kitchen Instruction—More Than 1500 Entries by Children Arranged in Exhibit in Horticultural Hall—Large Space on Many Tables for Display of Bread, Cookies, Biscuits and Sponge Cake.

This is the big day of the Evening Ledger Free Cooking School and Cookery Contest at Horticultural Hall, Broad street below Locust.

The entries in the baking contest are being delivered from 9 o'clock this morning to 7 o'clock this evening. The attendance at the lectures has been growing steadily, and the children who bring their exhibits for the contest and those who accompany them are expected to increase the attendance to make a new record crowd.

One of the large rooms on the second floor of Horticultural Hall has been set aside for the exhibition of entries in the cooking contest. Arrangements have been made for the display of more than 1500 separate exhibits. Large tables with the names of the various schools displayed on signs, will make it easy for children, their relatives and friends to locate exhibits.

Just in front of the room in which the exhibits are to be seen and in the main corridor the first, second, third and fourth prizes in the several divisions and fourth prizes in the several divisions are being shown. Large signs make clear for what the various prizes are to be given.

The children who are entered in the contest are invited to visit the hall any afternoon during the remainder of the week. They, with their friends, relatives and any other children are asked to hear Mrs. Carroll's lectures.

During her lecture yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Anna A. Carroll, the cooking expert, lecturer and demonstrator, who is conducting the Evening Ledger Free Cooking School each afternoon, gave the audience some excellent hints about handling the marketing.

Mrs. Carroll said that this feature of home direction is as important in domestic life as the functions of the buyer in a big business institution. In other words, she said, the housewife must be a purchasing agent for the home, and she should be as careful, should take as much pains to learn scientific buying as the purchasing agent of a business concern.

RESULTS BY TELEPHONE.

In this connection, she said, the housewife should learn how to get first-class results from ordering by telephone, as it is not always possible for the housewife to leave her other duties and go to the market. The principal feature of ordering by telephone, as outlined by Mrs. Carroll, lies in the ability of the housewife to impress upon the merchant the fact that she knows her business thoroughly and that every article delivered at her door must be satisfactory. In many instances merchants have sent groceries, vegetables, meats and other kitchen supplies which were not up to standard because they had the impression that they could deceive the woman with whom they were dealing.

Mrs. Carroll suggested to her audience that it is usually not worth while to attempt to buy cheap things without first seeing them, as usually the cheap produce proves to be worth just about what was paid for it. The result of such buying, she said, often is poor meals or meals lacking in nutritious quality.

The following are the recipes for the afternoon's lecture:

NOTES FROM MRS. CARROLL'S LECTURE.
Do not season mutton chops until they come out of the oven.
In broiling it makes no difference whether the oven door is open or closed.
It is not necessary to have smoke from the cooking when using the gas range. It is all a matter of proper cooking.
If chops are thin use the wire broiler, but if they are thick use the rack in broiling.
A piece of suet wrapped around the mutton chop before it is cooked adds much to the flavor of the meat. A piece of bacon wrapped in the chop after the bone is taken out will also help the flavor.
When one is worn out and tired, raw eggs are beneficial. One or two eggs are good if one has been through a nervous strain.
In placing large roasts in the broiling oven to roast keep them far from the fire, so that they roast through instead of quickly burning on the outside.
Young peas should be cooked 25 minutes.

16 STUDENTS RETURN FROM WAR-TORN ITALY

Sixteen Young Men From Augustinian College at Rome Arrive on Liner Ancona.

Sixteen students from the Augustinian International College at Rome and six prospective brides landed at Vine street wharf in the Delaware River today from the Italian liner Ancona from Genoa and Naples. The ship left Italy two days after war was declared, but was halted near Gibraltar by a British cruiser, whose officers inspected the Ancona's papers before permitting the liner to proceed.

The Ancona carried 38 cabin and 120 steerage passengers. On her return she will carry a large number of Italian reservists going home to join the colors, some from this port and some from New York. Captain Pietro Massardo, in command, says the ship narrowly escaped collision with a French steamship in the Bay of Naples.

Four of the theological students, all of whom will resume their studies at Villaanova, are Philadelphia residents. They are Cornelius McGinty, of Chestnut Hill; Walter Gough, of 224 Christian street; John McCloskey, of 300 Princeton avenue, Tacoma, and Patrick Campbell, of 124 Morris street.

The students decided to complete their work in this country because conditions were so upset by the war in Italy. They say money is "tight" in Italy, and the general impression is that Italy was forced into the war by the clamor of the people. Most Italians believe, according to the students, that Germany intended to make war on Italy at the conclusion of the present struggle to get revenge for Italy's failure to join with Germany and Austria against the Allies. Italians, therefore, clamored for war as a measure of self-protection.

Count Beckendorff Killed
PETROGRAD, June 9.—Colonel Count Peter Beckendorff, son of the Russian Ambassador to England, has been killed in action near Kovno. He was attached to the army sent to stem the German advance through the Baltic provinces.

Accused of Trying to Marry Undesirable to Prospective Citizen.
A much-complicated immigration case, in which a marriage broker and a young fortune hunter figure prominently, came up before United States Commissioner Long today. The prisoner, Abraham Feinstein, of 88 East Moyamensing avenue, was held in $1000 bail to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury. He is accused of conspiring to defeat the immigration laws.

According to the testimony, a year ago Feinstein invited his sister, Twore Talol, and her mother, Leja Talol, to leave Russia and come to this country. Feinstein's name before he came to America was Talol. He says he chose the Feinstein name because he liked it.

When his sister arrived here the immigration inspectors detained the young woman. Government physicians concluded that she was feeble-minded, reinstated deposited $1000, guaranteeing that she would not become a public charge.

Months afterward, Feinstein began to play the part of a "Schatchen." He approached Hyman Walavsky, who lives on Wharton street between 6th and 7th streets. He urged Hyman to marry his sister. He also agreed to pay him $100 if the marriage should take place. Just about that time Walavsky was seriously thinking of becoming an American citizen.
