THE AIRMAN AND THE PHOTOGRAPHER COMBINE TO PRESENT THESE VIEWS OF ATLANTIC CITY

MAKING THE BREAKERS APPEAR AS MOUNTAIN RIDGES AND THE CITY AS A DREAM-TOWN

These photographs of Atlantic City were made at a height of 2000 feet. A staff photographer of the EVENING LEDGER was taken up in a hydroplane by E. Kenneth Jacquith, and in spite of great difficulties in a gusty day, took these extraordinary pictures. The upper picture shows City Park, the beach and Illinois avenue. The lower picture is of the inlet, looking north, and shows Steeplechase, Steel, Garden and Haines piers, in the order named.
