

ATLANTIC CITY, QUEEN OF SHORE RESORTS, A "VACATIONETTE" SPOT

Thousands of men, women and children in Philadelphia are denied an opportunity to get away from the heat and dirt of the city during the summer. Few cities in the East are more advantageously situated for short, refreshing, economical trips to the country than is Philadelphia, and it is in consideration of the two facts that the EVENING LEDGER has decided to give its readers, each week, the outline of a "vacationette".

Representatives of the EVENING LEDGER take these trips personally, in the points of recreation, scenic value and historic interest. Realizing that the expense attached to these jaunts is an important consideration with those who are unable to go to the shore or the mountains, this matter is given in exact figures.

Many owners of automobiles also are kept at home during part of the summer, and for their convenience the automobile routes through the same territory are given along with the trolley trips. A map of both auto and trolley routes, with points of particular interest, accompanies each article. Cut out the articles and the maps, so that when you are ready to take a short trip you will find them of interest and assistance. This is the seventh trip.

Out of the beautiful Pennsylvania hills into the invigorating and delightful shore resorts of New Jersey is the jump taken by the EVENING LEDGER "vacationette" this week. From the rolling country around Doylestown we went on to the rolling expanse of ocean surrounding Atlantic City.

When we say "Atlantic City" practically every one knows at once that it is the best popular bathing place on the Atlantic coast. In fact, its international reputation is equal to Brighton, Ostend, Scheveningen, Trouville, San Sebastian and other popular watering places of Europe. This year it is the most advanced Atlantic resort in the world, for the European centres are either devastated, or isolated because of the war.

Atlantic City is situated on an island 10 miles long and one mile across in the widest part. It is one of the numerous sandbars deposited by the action of the waves on the Jersey coast at distances varying from a few hundred yards to several miles out to sea. Atlantic City is five miles from the mainland, and visitors promading on the Boardwalk can see new bars in the process of formation.

Boardwalk promading and bathing, of course, furnish the principal diversion, but these two healthful pastimes do not exhaust the activities of the island playground. On the Garden Pier, Steeplechase, Steel and Million Dollar Piers, modern theatrical performances, variety, moving pictures, sun parlors and fishing are provided for the entertainment of patrons.

Steeplechase, like its big brother in Coney Island, is a vast covered carnival of fun, built out several hundred feet into the ocean. Heinz's Pier has an interesting exhibit of the "57 varieties" establishment, and valuable art collections. The old Young's Ocean Pier has recently been purchased by one of the hotels as a private pavilion for its guests.

THE BOARDWALK. The most famous thing in Atlantic City is the Boardwalk. The promenade is eight miles long and reaches from the inlet at the extreme northern end of the island to Longport, a beautiful residential suburb at the south. In its central portion the walk is 60 feet wide, and at no point is it less than 50 feet. It is erected about 10 feet above the sand and has cost nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. Recently two side strips, running up and down the length of the walk, have been laid down to make it more comfortable riding in the roller chairs to lighten the work for the "pushers."

THE ROLLER CHAIR is an institution that never grows tiresome. We did not want to get out of them after our ride, and when we finally were able to tear ourselves away it was as difficult a task as trying to stop watching the endless procession. There are more than 2000 of these chairs.

THE BEACH. It is doubtful if there is a better beach anywhere on the eastern shores of the United States than Atlantic City. The beach extends the entire length of the island and at all points is safe for bathing. The sand is soft and absolutely free from pebbles. During the season as many as 50,000 bathers are on the beach at one time, and a warning finger hundreds of feet into the sea. It was wonderfully impressive. The Steeplechase and old Young's Pier followed in rapid succession.

THE HOTELS. The immense, new, 17-story Traymore Hotel was the next landmark. It was really the best thing in Atlantic City's interesting and attractive skyline. The two large, brown domes of the hotel on top of the huge hostelry created a profound impression. Just a short distance further the bright, shining dome of the Marlborough-Blenheim stood out in vivid contrast. Other large hotels followed in rapid succession, until Young's Million Dollar Pier, with the Colonel's residence near the end, is passed. This is the last of the piers.

BETWEEN the piers, however, are a number of pavilions. There are nearly 30 of these pavilions, and even more surf bathhouses.

the hotels gradually disappear until they give way entirely to the beautiful summer residences located at Chelsea, and the suburb Ventnor. Chelsea is laid out in broad, clean streets, restricted to residences surrounded by large plots of land, while the holiday excursions more than 100,000 are in the surf, on the beach or on the boardwalk.

THE BEACH FRONT. But the most beautiful sight we saw was the view of the entire beach front from one of the sailboats that goes along the coast from the inlet to the end of the island. We got on the boat in the sheltered harbor and gracefully took the curve into the ocean. It was not until then that we realized what a big bend the island takes by the Absecon light; it is almost 90 degrees. The lighthouse, which is 167 feet high, and whose powerful light can be seen from 19 miles out at sea, stands at the centre of the curve a few hundred feet back from the Boardwalk.

As we proceeded down the coast we passed Heinz's Pier, jutting out into the ocean at the lower end of the curve. Then came the new Garden Pier, with its semi-Moorish architecture. Then the battered Steel Pier, the end of which is in course of reconstruction as a result of the heavy ground. Rodman Wanamaker's home is located here. Ventnor is fully as attractive. In addition the community has built several public casinos on the Boardwalk. Mere residents and visitors find comfortable chairs in which to rest, and well-kept dancing hall and piano which they may use at any time.

FOR AUTOISTS. Two principal routes are open to the automobilist. One is along the White Horse turnpike, through Haddon Heights and Egg Harbor City; the other is to the south, through Gloucester, Woodbury, Malaga and May's Landing. Both routes join at Pleasantville. For the former route, Philadelphia by the Market and Camden ferries to Camden. Go to White Horse Pike, then to Haddon Heights, Berlin, Ancora and Haddon Heights. Here take Bellevue avenue to Egg Harbor City. Here one road goes to May's Landing and the other to Germania, Absecon and Pleasantville to Atlantic City. This route is 60 miles. To go to Atlantic City by the other route, take Broadway from Federal street, Camden, to Gloucester, or the Gloucester ferry direct. Take the middle road from the ferry straight out of the city to Westville, Fairview, Glassboro, Clayton, Franklinville, Malaga, Downsborough, Landville and May's Landing. Turn left at the hotel and proceed through Clarkstown and Pleasantville to Atlantic City. This route is 55 miles. The trip may be varied by going down one way and returning the other.

POLICE COURT CHRONICLES

"It's Jess' face of habit, dat's all." This was the only explanation Bill Harrison gave when he was asked why he tried to smash up his home and kill a few friends—and his wife. Bill is a quiet Negro usually, but when he's mad he believes in action.

His wife, Jennie, can vouch for this. Everything was going all right at their home at 605 North 29th street until she aroused Bill's temper. Bill, according to the police, then grabbed a chair and broke up most of the new parlor furniture. When Jennie complained he drew a revolver and struck Jennie on the head with it, the police say.

Even this did not appease the wrath of Bill. When he found that the bullets in the "gun" had fallen on the floor, he started the racket all over again. Neighbors who attempted to interfere where Raymond and several other 17-year-olds were indulging in the outdoor and indoor pastime known to the police as "pushing the duck."

The bluscoat raised no opportunity to duck the policeman, but the duck can at him. The can hit the policeman in the ear and his contents, about two inches of lead and soda, splattered all over his head. He had tried to duck without success. Raymond might have escaped, but he stopped to laugh. Magistrate Morris talked to him kindly today, and let him go with a warning.

FIRE AT DARDANELLES FORTS IS CEASELESS

Allied Fleet Continues Tireless Bombardment of Turkish Positions.

LONDON, June 11. A dispatch from Athens states that the Anglo-French fleet at the Dardanelles has been bombarding the Turkish forts almost without cessation for 48 hours. An attack by the allied land forces on Gallipoli Peninsula is being made simultaneously, but that the result of the action is in doubt.

Reports from Paris state that the positions of the Anglo-French Allies in the Dardanelles sphere of operations have been materially strengthened, it is officially announced by the ministry of Marine. Turkish prisoners state that the Turkish losses have been terrific. A correspondent writing from the scene of action says:

"The effect of the appearance of British submarines in the Sea of Marmora," the correspondent continues, "has been that all transport and every communication by sea has ceased. Even small boats have to obtain special permits. Wounded are being transferred from Gallipoli by land and are dying in large numbers during the journey. Further, in Constantinople there is a shortage of surgical instruments. The city is also suffering from a lack of fuel, which is distributed only to Turkish families."

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 11. A great artillery duel between the Turks and the Anglo-French Allies is going on in the Dardanelles sphere. The allied fleet is maintaining a steady bombardment of the Turkish batteries and the latter are replying.

The following official statement was issued today: "Our batteries on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles have again bombarded the infantry position of the enemy on the Gallipoli Peninsula, near Sedd-el-Bahr."

Old P. R. T. Employee Dies. Samuel Heron, one of the oldest employees of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, who was a conductor since the days when street cars were drawn by horses, died suddenly of heart disease, at his home, 1245 Page street, yesterday. He was 74 years old, and retired some time ago. His son, William Heron, survives him.
