RECRUITING RECEIVES NEW BOOM IN LONDON

The picture shows the Lord Mayor of London inspecting the 3d Battalion of the London Regiment at the Mansion House, London. The 1st Battalion is at the front, the 2d in training. Supporters of the new coalition Cabinet declare that new methods of appeal have greatly stimulated the flow of recruits.

WHAT THE ENEMY'S TRENCHES LOOK LIKE TO THE EYE OF AN OBSERVER

The upper photograph shows a territory cut up by the German lines in Northern France as made through a French outpost's periscope. The land is bare except for barbed wire fences, but at a word it would spout a sea of men into the air. The lower picture is a closer view of a Russian trench, showing how easy it is for the men to conceal themselves.

WHAT ONE SHELL DID IN HEART OF CITY OF LILLE, FRANCE

This picture explains why the world's supply of horses is running short. These German mounts fell victims to the English bombardment. The Allies are making a desperate effort to recapture this handsome city, which is the most important in Northern France. It is a big railroad centre.
