

ITSELF OVER TO JERSEY FIREMEN

City by the Sea Investigated by Brave Laddies, Their Wives, Sweethearts and Friends.

Governor and Mrs. Fielder and Score of State Officials Also Are Guests and Will Review Parade This Afternoon.

WILDWOOD, N. J., July 15.—This city by the sea has been peacefully captured and completely taken over by the score of battalions of volunteer firemen who are guests of the municipality during the celebration of Firemen's Day.

All day yesterday the steady stream of fire-fighters flowed into Wildwood and today there are more than a thousand of them here with their wives, sweethearts and friends.

Nor is this all. Governor and Mrs. Fielder, with more than a score of State Senators, members of the lower house and other officials from Trenton, with their wives, also are guests of the municipality.

Following the motor tour, the party sailed back to Wildwood for a dip in the ocean and a shore dinner afterward at the yacht club.

Shortly before 2 o'clock the Governor and party will take positions in the reviewing stand in front of Epistemon Hall. The firemen, with their apparatus gaily decorated with bunting and led by Lucas Band of Philadelphia, will move at 2 o'clock.

PENROSE SAYS KILL BRUMBAUGH BOOM

The appointment of Mackey came as a distinct surprise to the Vares, as well as to Mackey himself. It also surprised Senator McNichol.

The Vares told them they were as much surprised as he.

Mackey has been considered a good organizer, and with the 10 or 12 referee jobs at $2500 a year and many minor places at the disposal of the board, Senator Penrose immediately saw danger.

A flood of telegrams reached Penrose headquarters a couple of days after Mackey was appointed.

Attending the conference in Philadelphia and at the shore were the county chairman from most of the municipalities in Pennsylvania and a score of other Penrose followers.

That the fight will be carried on in earnest, is shown by the fact that Senator Penrose has arranged his engagements for the summer and will remain in Philadelphia all during the "dog days," after he returns next week.

THIEF STEALS $800 IN JEWELS

Enters Home of Dr. Carl Williams While Family Sits in Garden.

A thief entered the home of Dr. Carl Williams in Germantown while members of the family sat in the garden and stole the worth of jewels belonging to Mrs. Williams. The theft was reported to the police today.

The residence of Doctor Williams, who is famous as a former University of Pennsylvania football star, is at the corner of School lane and Green street.

Her missing jewels include a ring set with a two-karat diamond, a heavy gold bracelet set with seven small diamonds and two sapphires, and an old Roman gold bracelet with one large diamond.

Acting Detectives Curry and McFarland are working on the case. It is believed the thief entered the house either upon finding the front door open or by forcing a window.

Farmer Mangled to Death in Field

LANCASTER, Pa., July 15.—John S. Adair, 65 years old, a farmer, was thrown from a horse upon the knives of a binding machine yesterday and dragged 100 yards. His body, being mangled by the blades of the machine, he was rushed to his home near Wildwood, where he died an hour later.

JUDGE SUSPENDS CITY'S JITNEY LAW

Sulzberger, sitting in the summer court for July, said:

"While the situation is deplorable since the public interests demand proper and speedy regulation of jitney traffic, which, unrestrained, is fraught with danger to the community, at the same time the operation of the ordinance involves serious danger to many jitney men, and would virtually destroy their business, at least cutting it from 100 to 40 per cent."

"If, on final hearing, the ordinance should be adjudged void, the mischief done the jitney men would be practically irreparable, while, on the other hand, if it should be adjudged valid, the mere delay between this time and the final hearing will not involve the city in pecuniary loss, since the bonds received then, as well as at this time."

JITNEY MEN JUBILANT

President S. W. Winner of the Auto Service Association, whose headquarters are at 138 North Broad street, jumped with joy when he received the news.

"It's great, it's bully, that's all I can say," he exclaimed over the phone. "The Auto Service Association finished right at the top, and due credit ought to be given to the West Philadelphia and South Philadelphia boys. They helped us a lot in the fight."

"We will start to issue six-for-a-quarter strip tickets," he declared.

City Solicitor Ryan, who took the side of the city in the hearing yesterday and declared the ordinance constitutional, refused to comment on the granting of the injunction.

Judge Sulzberger, in his report, attacked the ordinance as not providing for the safety of the public. He said:

"With the mere wisdom, or unwisdom, of the ordinance we have no concern. The power has been conferred on another body, and we may not substitute our discretion for theirs. The present ordinance is a case in point. Although it is intended to regulate an important carrying business, it has overlooked some of the simplest precautions necessary for the protection of the public."

"LAW INCOMPLETE"

"In none of its 16 sections is there a provision commanding the drivers of these motorbuses to slow up as they approach a crossing, in such manner that they may have their vehicles under ready and full control. Such a regulation would be at least a partial preventive of the numerous casualties which are often fleetingly described as 'unavoidable accidents.'"

"There is likewise no prohibition of smoking by the driver of the vehicle while on duty. A man driving a locomotive through a busy city street should concentrate all his attention on the management of his machine and the observation of obstacles in the way. If he diverts a part of his faculty to the management of a pipe or a cigar or a cigarette, he withdraws just so much from the quantity of attention which he ought to give to his business. Moreover, there may be passengers to whom smoke and ashes may be disagreeable or injurious."

"In summing up the complaints of jitney men that the ordinance compelled them to run over prescribed routes, forced them to run two and a half times the distance they now run for the same price; compelled them to pay a license fee of $31 and a bond of $200, all of which would virtually drive them out of business; Judge Sulzberger said:

"Their complaint appears to be based on the erroneous theory that the municipality has no function to regulate the use of its streets and that they are to decide which streets they want for business purposes and how great is the use they wish to make of them. As the people have paid for the streets, they are entitled to a reasonable use of them, and their legal representatives are the proper parties to determine how far and under what terms private persons may carry on public passenger traffic thereon."

"The ordinance, however, charges and by affidavit support the charge, that the business which the ordinance purports to regulate was the carrying of passengers for a lower rate than the cost of running with reasonable compensation for outlay and risk."

"STUDENT OF LIFE," HE FINDS IT WORTHLESS

Picnickers Find Young Man Dead and Notebook Telling Odd Occupation.

"A student of life," as he signed himself in a notebook found in a coat pocket, put a bullet through his heart today near the place where a crowd of picnickers chases to camp on Chamounix Hill, Fairmount Park. They discovered the body on a pile of fallen branches.

Besides the statement that he studied M.A. the outside had written in his notebook: "Occupation? Belief in leading a better life and belief in love." The first statement followed the question, "My name?" printed in the book, and both evidently anticipated questions by the police, who would receive the body.

The dead man was about 30 years old and weighed 160 pounds. His complexion and hair were black. The suit he wore had been bought in New York. A new straw hat lay near the body. The body was taken to the morgue.

Bequest to Church Fought in Court

LANCASTER, Pa., July 15.—The validity of the will of the late Mary Herr, of Mt. Joy, will be passed upon by the Supreme Court. She left her entire estate of $60,000 to the United Brethren Church and College, at Dayton, O., to which she had previously been a large contributor. Her will was attacked in the Orphans' Court of this county by J. T. Wilson, a relative, upon the grounds of undue influence. The case is expected to be heard in Philadelphia in September.

OLD BILL LOUGHLIN, IN CONCRETE TOMB, SLEEPS UNDER WILLOWS

Impressive Ceremony and Genuine Grief Mark the Obsequies on the Banks of the Delaware—Friends Pay Tribute as Birds Chant Requiem.

On the banks of the Delaware, under a weeping willow tree, Old Bill Loughlin lay in state today. The body was carried in the arms of his faithful master, Frederick Hess, the silent gathering at the grave, chanted a requiem from the nearby trees in Bridgeport. Outside the little circle of mourners, a few stray farmers with bare heads, and the grief of Old Bill's friends. Never had they attended a more impressive ceremony. Old Bill would have been proud had he been able to see the care with which he was laid to rest. The quiet spot was chosen because Bill was fond of nature and silence. Unlike other parrots, he only spoke when it was necessary.

Through the lines of weeping children his body was carried in the arms of his faithful master, Frederick Hess, the little concrete coffin, which will protect the bird from the ravages of time, was covered with flowers gathered by the little boys and girls in the neighborhood, who loved him. They knew Old Bill well. Didn't they take him home when he used to go out for a walk? And how many times did they drag him from the shadow of death under wagon wheels and trolley cars.

Bill remembered this, too, and often called his little friends correctly by their first names. The name of the parrot spread throughout the entire section. Two of his staunchest friends were William Davis Scott and Lieutenant William Koppel, of the Front and Master streets station. They never passed Old Bill's home at 327 West Grand avenue without leaving him a cracker or a piece of chocolate. And they attended the funeral today together with ex-Councilman Jacob Roth, Dr. Edward Ross, Sergeant Harry Felder and other well-known residents of the neighborhood master, and, after keeping the parrot's friends, gave him to Hess 12 years ago. It was only fitting, therefore, that all these old friends of Bill's should gather when death had taken him from their midst.

The bird was temporarily buried in the yard after his death on Tuesday, and it was subsequently decided that he should rest in a place which would be more in keeping with his life.

All his old friends willingly agreed to be honorary pallbearers and journeyed to Bridgeport with his master. Instead of a sermon the good deeds of Bill were recounted at the grave by his two masters, Roth and Hess.

Hess explained how the parrot used to call him when a customer entered his store and cited instances when the bird prevented robberies. It seems that one day he shouted "police" when a stranger was reaching for the cash drawer. The word had been added to his vocabulary by Roth.

A tombstone will be erected at his grave. It will read: "To the memory of Bill Loughlin, a faithful parrot, loyal to those who loved him."

GERMANS WIN PRZASNYSZ IN POLAND DRIVE

Russian Stronghold, 50 Miles From Warsaw, Is Taken by Teuton Soldiers.

Kaiser's Troops Capture 2400 Prisoners and Eight Machine Guns—Occupy Oleszanka Heights and Kanzas, Near Bobr River.

Slavs Fall Back Five Miles on Vistula—Bobr Line Along a Half Mile Front Covered by Centre of Grand Duke's Army, Opposed by 480,000 Enemy Troops.

BERLIN, July 15.—The Russian fortified city of Przasnysz, 50 miles north of Warsaw, has been stormed and captured by German troops, the War Office announced this afternoon.

This town has been held by the Russians for several months, being situated at the extreme northern point of an angle on which the Czar's troops had been concentrated for the defense of Warsaw from an attack by troops from East Prussia. Directly north of Warsaw, Przasnysz is less than 25 miles from Putusk, one of the chief defenses of the Polish capital.

The capture of Przasnysz marks the second entry of the Germans into the city since the war began. Early in the spring campaign Prussian regiments took the city after a three days' struggle in which both sides lost heavily. The arrival of Russian reinforcements compelled the Germans to retire upon Miawa a few days later.

In addition to the success at Przasnysz where the Germans captured 2400 prisoners and eight machine guns, they have also taken the Oleszanka heights, north-east of Warsaw, occupied Kanzas, south of Kolno and near the Bobr River, and also gained positions to the east of Kanzas. The official report of the General Staff says:

"Near Kalwaria we captured several Russian positions and held them, despite fierce counter-attacks. Northwest of Suwalki, we stormed and captured the heights of Oleszanka.

"South of Kolno we captured the village of Kanzas and the positions east of the town. South of the Tarak-Liknik line we took 1400 prisoners and eight machine guns."

NEW JERSEY GUARDSMEN STORM AND DEFEND TRENCHES

Practical Demonstrations in Modern Warfare at Camp Fielder.

CAMP FIELDER, Sea Girt, July 15.—Troops of New Jersey non-commissioned officers, who are here for a course of military instruction, are this afternoon, engaged in a tactical struggle for the possession of the trenches which they constructed yesterday. The army of the enemy, which landed on the beach last night and advanced early this morning to engage Major Windfeld S. Price's troops, are "storming the trenches with shot and shell" in an effort to rout the non-commissioned officers.

Captain Harold Wakeland, of Newark, the instructor, commanding the first provisional company of the instruction school, was ordered to the trenches, with his troops, late this morning. The other three companies were withdrawn from the scene of the trench-digging and were ordered to make an advance upon the trenches, and capture them, if possible.

Fighting from trenches is a novel experience for the New Jersey men, as it is the first time they have actually got down to trench digging on an extensive scale. They found trench digging interesting from many angles, because, while they could hear the burbling of the imaginary shells from the artillery supporting the advance of the invading party, and watch the enemies as they approached from the point of their landing last night, they were hidden from view by the cunningly-constructed parapets, which had been thrown up in front of the trenches at the time they were constructed.

After the tactical maneuvers are finished for the day the men will be put to work re-filling the lines of trenches, this being a part of Major Price's agreement with the owner of the land.

ANGRY MARYLAND POSSE HUNTS NEGRO ASSAILANT

Hundred Armed Men Threaten to Lynch Fugitive.

FEDERALSBURG, Md., July 15.—A posse, numbering 100, heavily armed, is searching lower Caroline County for a Negro, who, this morning, attacked Miss Mildred Clark, 15-year-old daughter of Enoch S. Clark. The young girl was passing through woods, going from her home to visit her aunt, Mrs. George Carmen, when attacked. The Negro fled. When she regained consciousness the girl made her way to her aunt's home where she told of the attack. The Negro probably will be lynched if caught.

WYCLIFF B. STEWART

Superintendent of Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company.

Wycliff B. Stewart, superintendent of the Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company, died early today at the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital following a protracted illness due to a complication of diseases.

Mr. Stewart, who was 68 years old, entered the employ of the ferry company 25 years ago, as a messenger boy. His death had been a long and painful one. His advancement was rapid and for the last 20 years he had been superintendent of that company. He lived at 25 West Chestnut street, Merchantville, N. J., and for 25 years had been borough clerk of that city. He was a member of the Merchants' Union Board of Health and a 3rd degree Mason.

The deceased is survived by two sons, Alexander and George Stewart, and sister, Mrs. Ernest Stewart. All are residents of Merchantville.

Horses for War, Autos for Farmers

LANCASTER, Pa., July 15.—Lancaster county farmers are selling their horses at top prices to agents of the European Allies, and in their places are buying automobiles. Where not a motor was seen a year ago at the Rheems Meeting House, 12 touring cars were in the yard at a meeting there. A proportionate increase is evident throughout the county.

It is believed that Mack is hiding in the woods and if he is not captured within a few hours it is expected that the Federal Government will conduct an organized search for him. Meanwhile an investigation is in progress to determine how he managed to elude the armed men at the guardhouse. It is learned this morning that the prisoner made no attempt to escape until he learned the Federal authorities, agents of the Department of Justice and of the Internal Revenue Department had been notified of his escape.

Guardmen of the 1st Brigade, most of whom are Philadelphians, said today that the unusual disorder in camp over the last two days was due to the fact that many of the men had been consumed because of the ban put upon company canteens. They declared it to be a fact that more whisky and gin had been consumed this year than ever before for the simple reason that small bottles of such beverages can be carried into camp without attracting attention. Incidentally, the men are angry because with the ending of the canteen company funds decrease.

The report that one guardman was dead from an excessive dose of cocaine, which spread through the camp yesterday afternoon, proved untrue, though several patrons of the "dope" peddler were found seriously ill from indulgence in the drug.
