Same Excuse Twice
Sergeant (drilling company)—Left—Right—Left—Right—Left—Left—Left—
Mother—We must keep in step, Mollie.
Mollie—Yes, we must. I can do the "Left-Right," but I can't manage the "Left-Left." How do they do it?

Professional Smythe—He made a living by going from bad to worse.
Smith—How could he do that?
Smythe—He was a doctor—Gargoyles.

Would you mind telling my wife that I'll not be home at the usual time?"

Employer—Didn't your grandmother die once before, this year?
Office Boy—Yes, sir. She—she—er—came pretty near bein' buried alive that time!

Eve's horror of the new fashions is rapidly becoming an obsession. She is seen here chanting her daily hymn of hate against them. She feels sure that some Hunnish influence came to work in their design, and that they ought to be interred—or cut up for respirators.

WHEN! THIS'LL DO FINE, THE TENT'LL GO OVER BY THE SPRING.
ANT' LOTS OF FIRE WOOD, WHEE!

JOHN, DOES MY PETTICOAT
SHOW? NO, LOVE!

Remarkable
"Is there anything special in the case?" asked the reporter of the bank president whose cashier had stolen $17.
"Yes," mused the president, "you may say that we did not trust him implicitly."—Exchange.

Mixed Mail
"What is in the mail from daughter?" asked mother, eagerly.
"A thousand kisses," answered father, grimly, "and sixteen handkerchiefs, two waists and four batches of ribbons for you to wash and mend."—Kansas City Journal.

DID IT EVER HAPPEN TO YOU?
