HERZOG OF REDS PICKS BRAVES TO WIN PENNANT—"THE CAST-OFF," BY C. E. VAN LOAN

BOSTON BRAVES WILL WIN PENNANT IN NATIONAL LEAGUE, AVERS HERZOG

Cincinnati Manager Declares Stallings' Team Is Class of Circuit, and Is Now on Way to Victory-Working of Double Steals Recalls Trick of Old Catchers.

"The Braves will win the pennant again if Bill James gets back into shape, and I would not be surprised if they won it without him." Charley Herzog, manager of the Reds, made this statement just before the team left for the West Saturday night

"There is no team in the league in the Braves' class, with the possible exception of Brooklyn, and now that the champions have struck their stride there will be nothing to it," he continued.

"They are not as far down now as they were last season, and in the last series with the Reds they looked better than at any time in 1914. In 1914 they won because they caught the field napping. The field is better balanced and every one is fighting the Braves hard, but they are too strong to be denied. No club in the National League has been able to make any headway or stage a winning streak that would put them out in front, and this has given the Braves their chance. The Dodgers and Phillies have gone along in great shape for a time, but just as soon as they have a chance to take a large lead they slump. When the Braves go out in front they will keep on going. Remember what I tell you. The Braves will be in first place before the first of September and they will stay there."

Players Agree That Braves Are Striking Their Stride

Herzog's opinions are echoed by every member of his team, and Fred Clarke recently said that the Braves were the most dangerous club in the league. That Stallings' team has improved wonderfully in the last three weeks is borne out by the statements of players who have came here after a series in Boston.

The Reds' manager says that the Phillies' only chance lies in Alexander's ability to start the "iron man" act shortly, and for him to hold up to the terrific pace for the rest of the season. This is entirely possible,

If the Braves get within striking distance of first place, and have James, Rudolph and either Davis or Tyler working in order, it will most likely be necessary for Alexander to go to the mound every other day for a month for the Phillies to shake them off. Alexander is in the best shape of his career and declares that he feels capable of doing this, but it may be a larger sized job than

Poor Work of James Hindrance to Boston

James is paying the penalty for his actions this spring, when he held the Braves up for a new contract under the threat that he would jump to the Federal League. A new contract was given him after the world's series last fall and one that he signed at his own figures, but he changed his mind about his own worth during the winter and then held the club up. He reported late and was slow rounding into form.

A report reached the East before James went South that he had injured his arm in an exhibition game on the Pacific coast last winter. This was indignantly denied by both Stallings and James when the article was reprinted from these columns, but later developments caused Stallings to admit that such must have been the case, and James was turned over to a specialist, who discovered several badly strained ligaments.

Rudolph, Marvel of Baseball, Coming Into His Own.

The big pitcher has been of little use to the team and has failed to keep step with little Dick Rudolph, who is now on another sensational streak. Rudolph has pitched wonderful ball all year, but has been unfortunate enough to have little hitting and poor fielding aid from his team-mates. He is now working every third day, and intends to go through to the finish at this clip, beside doing

Rudolph is surely one of the marvels of baseball. It is almost unbelievable that a man with his physique can go to the mound so often and become more effective as the season wears on. If James were back in shape and working as he can when he is right, the Braves would still have a wonderful chance They are not very far back now.

How Catchers of the Old Days Broke Up Double Steals a Double steals, with runners on first and second, were worked twice Saturday, and in each instance the man going to third had such a tremendous lead that it was an impossibility for any living catcher to have thrown him out, but still the throw was made. It brings to mind a play that should have been made and one that was once seen often with Johnny Kling, Bill Sullivan, Lou Criger, "Doc" Powers and a few other stars of a few years ago behind the bat.

When those catchers were working and a double steal was started to third and second, with one man out, they invariably threw to second instead of third, and nine times out of ten caught the runner standing up. The man going to second invariably slows up, thinking that the catcher will throw to third to rest man to the plate and that is why he can be picked off so

By picking off the man going to second, two men are out and it still takes a single to score a run. There is less chance to catch the runner going to third, and if he is caught there is a man on second and he can still score easily on a single. Schalk, Killefer, Snyder and a few others are wonderful receivers, but they still lack the polish of a few of the old school.

Come-back of Mayer Gives Phils Big Chance on Road

The Phillies opened up their second Western trip in impressive style by defeating Cincinnati with a ninth-inning rally. Bert Niehoff, who was a mark for the Cincinnati twirlers in the series in this city, provided the wallop that clinched the victory for Moran's pennant hopefuls.

The victory was particularly sweet to the Phillies, as it marked the comeback of Erskine Mayer. The side-arm artist was hit rather hard, but always managed to tighten up in the pinches, while his support came to his rescue

Now that the team is on the road and needs victories badly, it is hoped that Mayer will be able to return to his winning stride. His lack of form in the last two weeks prevented the Phillies from getting a large lead in the pennant fight,

Cincinnati Players Begin Loafing and Are Fined

Manager Herzog, of the Reds, passed out a few fines and suspensions before the Reds left town, because his players have been loafing. Rube Benton, the big southpaw, was fined $100 and suspended indefinitely for looking at the bright lights in this city too long, and the same punishment was meted out to Lear, the former Princetonian, who was batted all over the lot by the Phillies in the second game on Saturday. Hernog would not say who were the other players fined, but intimated that several were included, and that they would play better ball and try harder or they would be suspended for the rest of the season

Athletics' Young Twirler, Knowlson, a Comer

Yesterday was one of the few occasions when both home teams were on the road at the same time, and today is one of the few days during the season when there is no game scheduled in this city. The Athletics have an open date, while the Phillies play in Cincinnati again. The Mackmen lost another doubleheader to Cleveland, but Manager Mack is evidently not worrying much, Two recruits, Knowison and Cone, were on the mound for the Athletics and the former gave another fine exhibition. Critics throughout the West declare that Mack has a coming star in Knowlson, who has pitched three or four excellent games.

"The Phillies are to recall Joe Oeschger from Providence in September. Charley Dooin once told us that he considered Oeschger one of the finest pitching prospects that he had ever seen, and Dooin certainly knows a twicler when he sees him."-Walter Trumbull in the New York World.

Ad Swigler, star pitcher for the Atlantic Refining Company, is not only a moundsman of ability, but a slugger of the Walter Johnson type. In his game Saturday against the fast Victrix team, Swigler not only held his opponents safe, but won the game with a home run drive.

Two small-calibre singles were all that the strong American Pulley Company team were able to get off Downs, pitcher for the E. G. Budd Manufacturing Company. The Pulley men did not even threaten seriously to score.

"THE CAST-OFF"

The Rise of G. Audubon Spencer, Alias Slug Hardy-Something He Lacked-His Encounter With Jaggs and the "Tin-can" Episode-What the Fans at Home Thought.

By CHARLES E. VAN LOAN The world's most famous writer of baseball fiction casionally the name of G. Andubon Spencer appears in magazines devoted to scientific pursuits, and he has been known to address women's clubs upon protective coloring as applied to lepidoptera. G.

Audubon Spencer has a small but highly interested following: Slug Hardy was frantically worshiped by a few hundred thousand corraining contiemen who thousand perspiring gentlemen who wouldn't know what lepldoptera meant and wouldn't care very much, either, Yet

G. Audubon and Slug are one and th

He called himself Hardy when he de-cided to become a professional baseball player, and he became a professional baseball player because he needed the money. There was a time when he played the national game for love. He began as the star pitcher of a high-school nine. and when he was 17 years of age he was whitewashing semipro organizations and letting real leaguers down with two and three hits. Then he went to a university, where he made baseball history, and was in a fair way to graduate with some letters after his name when Spencer, Sr. took it into his head to die. He left a large family and a larger mortgage, and young G. Audubon packed his traps and disappeared, to turn up a thousand miles away as Slug Hardy, the star pitcher of a professional team.

He was a sensation for two seaso partiy because he could wrap a ball around a batter's neck and partiy because he could hit at a .340 clip from one end of the season to the other, and walloping nitchers are are high pitchers are rare birds.

At 20, Hardy was a veteran pitcher and beginning to feel the effect of too much work. He would have been an exploded phenomenon at II but for his foresight. He knew that there comes a time to every pitcher when the atrongest wing weakens and the former star is left out on the hill with nothing but a glove and a prayer, so he prepared himself for a new position. Day after day "Dusty" Moles, his chum put in his spare time hitting up "fun-goes" to the outfield, and Hardy gal-loped after them. When Slug was ready to stop pitching he was a seasoned out-fielder, and it was as an outfielder that he joined the Blue Sox and entered the hig league. big league.

There was only one thing the matter

There was only one thing the matter with Slug. He was born without a sense of humor. On the other hand, John Henry Patrick Caliahan, "Jaggs" Caliahan of blessed memory, had too much humor. That was where the trouble started.

Jaggs was not the worst fellow in the world, and not the best, either. His humor, largely of the slapstick variety, often palled upon his teammates, but they endured him because he could pitch a baseball in seven different languages. His best joke was the one he saved up for best joke was the one he saved up for whiskered yokels at country stations.

When the train stopped Jaggs would spy out a bucole loafer with iong whiskers and besken him to approach, engaging him to close conversation about the town and the price of real estate. Still talking when the train began to move. Jaggs would lean far out of the window, entangle his iron ingers in the rustic's beard and hold on for dear life. The sight of the outraged citizen rucing along and acreaming with pain and rage was one which never failed to fill Jaggs with pleasure. Sometimes the pitcher loat his

He is not playing baseball now; oc- grip. Sometimes the yokel lost his lace casionally the name of G. Audubon curtains, but whatever happened it was a curtains, but whatever happened it was a

> The first encounter between Jaggs and Hardy shows what a small thing may put a ball player "in wrong" with his asso-ciates. When a player begins by getting "in bad" he nearly always gets out worse. Hardy got out worse.

Jaggs selected the big, red-faced, whiteeyebrowed stranger as the softest thing among the recruits, and scraped an acquaintance with him. One evening on the notel porch at the training camp Jaggs told his famous story of the goat and the tin can. Hardy, silent and thoughtful by nature, overlooked the improbability of the incident, and concerned himself solely with the baseball problem involved.

"Y'see, it was like this," said Jaggs. "I was playin' right field that day, an' thi blame' goat kept edgin' in an' edgin' inyou know how them country fair ball

He's not playing baseball now grounds are; no fences or nothin and he got in my way. I chased him, an' he picked up the can he was nibblin' at and started to run toward the diamond. Just then Maginnias hits a line drive right down over first, an' the bail hit square in the can an' stuck! Maginnias tried to make a home run, but I got him."

"Ball rolled out?" suggested Hardy.
"Nope," said Jaggs. "Had to git it out with a can opener afterward. I just picked up Mister Goat, run to the home plate an' touched the goat's foot to the rubber. Zing! The umps allows as how Maginnias is out!"

There was a deep silence, and then can and made it good for anywhere from two sticks to a whole column. Hard was angry. He reproved one of the re porters.

"But I didn't say all that stuff!" he persisted. "It makes me-well, ridiculous. It isn't fair!"

Then that reporter told his fellow workers that the new outfielder was a rube who objected to press notices and had threatened to punch the head of any correspondent who took his name lightly be respondent who took his name lightly oc-tween the bars of his typewriter. Hardy was already "in bad" with sev-eral members of the team; he was now "in bad" with the press. "If he drops dead on the field we'll print 10 lines about him," said the press gentlemen. "Otherwise, nix!" So it happened that all the home fans knew about Hardy was the incident of the goat and the tin can. It was not an auspicious introduction.

The season opened on the home grounds and Hardy, playing a sun field to which he was unsecustomed, dropped a fly ball which he should have "caught in his teeth," as Callahan reminded him, and the error lost the game. This was unfortunate, for a certain clique of leather-lunged rooters on the right-field bleachers decided that the new man would not do. If a dozen baseball fams select a fixed idea and their voices hold out they can do almost anything. By the end of the first game 300 "regulars" were after the new right fielder, and it pleased them to see Hardy resented their efforts.

Any ball player knows what it means to have enemies in the home town. He expects to get the worst of it on the road. but when he performs at home he ex-pects loyal support and encouragement. One hundred hostile rooters in the home town can hound a player out of the club, and it has happened in almost every city in the league, and will happen again so long as performers are susceptible to outside influence.

The constant chorus of "Tin can! Tin an!" got on Hardy's nerves and worried ilm. Every time the ball was hit in his direction there went up a sarcastic chorus. The boy was unused to this sort of treatment. In the town where he had previously played he had been somewhat of a local delty. A bad cigar had been named after him, and small boys followed him about the streets. He had never been a grand-stander, but it is one thing to play ball before a friendly crowd and quite another to do one's best when that best brings only joers and Hardy began to make inexcusable errors. He mislaid his batting eye and awung wildly at "bad bnes." Opposing pitchers quickly diagnosed his case.

"The busher is swinging at 'em." they Overanxious, and fretted until his nerves were raw. Hardy played like a school-boy, lost his stride entirely and brought down upon himself the wrath of those stern densors of the press who edit the most interesting page of the paper. The sporting writers began to howl for his release. Hardy wouldn't do, they said, and they said it in headlines.

Wise old Hen Daily, manager of the club

Wise old Hen Daly, manager of the club and team captain as well, a great infielder in spite of a dash of gray over his ten s, tried to put some heart into the re-with a can opener afterward. I just picked up Mister Goat, run to the home plate an' touched the goat's foot to the rubber. Zing! The umps allows as how Maginnies is out!"

There was a deep silence, and then Hardy broke into speech.

"Why, the rule rays."

That settled it. The new man was a farmer or worse. Hardy was anused when he saw the papers from the home

SIX POINTS SHOWING WHY PHILS ARE LEADING NATIONAL LEAGUE

Moran's Club Has Strong Catching, League's Premier Pitcher and Excellent Assistants, Good Infield, Slugging Outfield and One of the Best Managers, in Baseball.

By GRANTLAND RICE

The Game and the Piper (Re-entered as a warning to those who see only the gleam and glamour of it all.)
This is your Game, old pal—the Game that you loved so well;

that you loved so well;
That cravmed you King of the Field
through the sweep of a golden spell;
That put the world at your feet in the border of dreams-come-true.
But here at the end of the trail—well,
what has it done for you!

And rank at a tender age;
The thrill of the headlong clask,
A Name on the Printed Page.

Then jeers for the cheers of old It gave with a snarl of glee; It took your job in the fold— And you were but thirty-three.

At the age when most men start On the wide trail's upward sweep, It broke your grip—and your heart— In the rut where Hasbeens creep Acclaimed in the Big Corral, Loud cheered in the Buling Push-Say, how does it feel, old pal, To be bawled out in the Bush?

In the Bush with a wornout wing— Loud cursed on a tank-town lot— The Game—yes, it made you king— Has it made you pay—or not?

This is your Game, old pal-the Game that you loved so well; That crowned you King of the Field through the sweep of a golden spell; You've saved from the grip of Time, from the laurel that crowned your brow, A dream and a wornout glove-well, what is the answer now?

The Philly Outlook

Those who figure the Phillies a bad ball club, with no chance to maintain their clip, might absorb these few details of

1. In Killefer they have the second best catcher in the league.

2. In Alexander they have the game's

"Another Rank Counterfeit!" the morn-never did want me. They've been knock-ing me from the start. If it hadn't beer for that tin-can thing-" and Hardy broke off miserably.

"Tell me the truth," he said. "Are these fellows right about me? Am I too slow for this company?"

"You've slumped, that's all. If you could only get going once you wouldn't have any trouble. Quit reading the papers.

put some cotton in your ears when you

Hardy tried to follow the directions but met with flat failure. At the end of his first month he was hitting below .140, and the fire had been turned on Daly.

Day after day he was hammered for carrying a counterfeit on the payroll. The manager stood it for two weeks more and then he did something which he expected

(CONTINUED TOMORROW.)

Daly swore heartily.

Hardy shook his head.

of these days.

to regret.

the addition of Bancroft at short, who ne outranking the work of Mickey Docian. 5. With Cravath, Whitted and Beckethey have three good hitters, and as mad general outfield strength as any rival 6. And in Pat Moran they have a lead 6. And in Pat Moran they have a leads who inspires friendship and respect, as who will be able to keep club spir at full fire on through to the finish, the Phillies have a fair Western in these next two weeks—well, Philadelphi may have one section of a world's sense.

The World's Greatest Ball Club

NO. A.-FIRST BASE, VIC SAIER-Chicago Nationals In announcing this selection we stand braced for the loud roar emanating from various townships-Brooklyn, with Daubert; New York, with Merkle; Philadelphia, with McInnia; Boston, with Schmidt Daubert is undoubtedly a grand ball blayer—a fine batsman and a corking first baseman. Jake can hit and field—two of the main requirements of greatness. Fred Merkle, batting well over 300, is also playing brilliantly and deserves ex-tended praise for his swift comeback after two seasons of poor batting. Merkle and Daubert are both stars—and so is Stuffy McInnis, the Mackian athlete. But Saler has been something more this spason. While both Daubert and Merkle have led him a few points at bat, the Cun per-former leads his league in runs scores, runs driven across, extra base wallops.

total bases and is up at the front in stolen A ball player who excels in so many ways—and who leads his entire league at so many shifts of offensive play—who is also a hard, loyal worker—must be siven the credit he has earned. Hence its Saler selection.

Last Chance White Sox and Tigers have one forom chance left of smashing the Red Sox grip upon first place—and this can only come in a victorious march through the East.

Carrigan's club fought its way to the top upon the Western highway, and re-turning home so well fixed in the per-centage way is now the easy flag choice. greatest pitcher; in Mayer a young star, and in Al Demaree, a former star, who is romping back to his own, with more stuff than he has shown since 1913, when he won 16 out of 19 starts.

4. They have a fair infield—not a great one, but a steady one, bolstered up by centage way is now the easy flag choics. With Wood, Leonard, Shore, Ruth, Foster and Collins in shape, there doesn't sem to be a Tiger or a White Sox chance. As baseball dope travels, which is often in a zigzag direction, the Red Sox have only to make a normal showing at home to close out the race.

regular outfielder looks like. Buck up. BRITTON AND DUNDEE TO BOX Clash Will Be Feature Fight in New

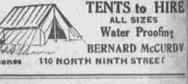

"I don't know what's the matter with e. I go up there to hit and I can't see York This Week. a ball any more."
"You only think so," soothed Daly.
"Don't you think I know a sweet hitter NEW YORK, July 26 .- Jack Britton and

Johnny Dundee will be the headliners at the pugilistic calendar this week, meeting at Madison Square Garden on Thursday when I see one? Why, I never saw a man show up better in spring training! You're just worried, that's all that alls Forget it! You'll get started one a match between them hanging fire for many months. A victory over Britten will eventually lead to a championship match with Weish, who has dedged the fast Italian since their meeting in New ing papers howled a few days later.

"These fellows don't/want me in this town." said Hardy to the manager. "They

Young Ahearn Beats Rodel

NEW YORK, July 26. — Young Abeam, e Brooklyn, defeated George Rodel, the Beer, their 10-round bout at the Brighton Bear race track Saturday night. In every our but the ninth, when Rodel put in several lar punches, Abeam cutboxed and cutfought his Ahearn weighed 159. Rodel 182 pounds.

BOXING TUESDAY NIGHT
DOUGLAS CLUB, 11th & Spring Garden S
Knockout Brown vs. Eddie McAndrews
FOUR EXCELLENT PRELIMINARIES
Prices 25c and 50c. Phone Keystone.

Increased

Has Compelled Us to Double Our Telephone Equipment

This necessitates a change in number.

Now Call Dickinson

and you will receive the same attention and service that is in keeping with Atlantic methods and Atlantic products.

THE ATLANTIC REFINING CO. 3144 Passyunk Avenue

EVENING LEDGER MOVIES-JUST TAKE IT AT THE FLOOD TIDE, PHILS, OLD SCOUTS, AND 'TWILL BE ALL RIGHT

