

MARITAL MILLSTONES—THE WOMAN WHO STANDS IN HER HUSBAND'S WAY

She Not Only Cheats Herself and Her Children, But Will Find the Shadow of the Might-have-been Between Her and Happiness.

By ELLEN ADAIR.

MANY times the excuse is offered that it takes all kinds of people to make a world, and perhaps it does; but somehow or other I have to look very hard to see the reason why we need to put up with the women who stand in their husbands' way.

The other day I heard two women talking about a young man they had just met. She was exceedingly attractive, and looked as if she was a young high school miss, instead of the mother of two charming children.

Peer, foolish woman—jumping out of the frying pan into the fire. She is placing many unseen difficulties before her. She will have to contend with more than loneliness. First of all, she will have to act as comforter to her husband for the financial loss, to say nothing of the problem of making both ends meet.

Scarcities of learning a new business, especially if the men higher up are unyielding. And most trying of all, she must battle continually with an invisible but none the less mighty opponent—the wife of the might-have-been. She will always know that her husband feels that she has stood in his way. He may be man enough to keep it in his heart, or he may not. A great deal of her future happiness depends upon his chivalry in this respect.

Then, besides this, there is a problem of the children. A mother who deliberately takes from them their opportunities for education, culture and refinement on account of her own selfishness has much to regret. She is stealing from them what they cannot retain for themselves, and for what end? A doubtful happiness, innumerable financial worries and most probably a strained feeling in the home sooner or later leading to open discord.

A man will work and work hard for the woman he loves. He will ask nothing in return as long as he feels that she is sharing the burden and doing her part; but let her turn into a selfish, metaphysical, militant, egotistical, egomaniac around his neck, while he battles both at the office and in his home, and you can count upon two more victims for the divorce courts.

TRANSPARENT EFFECTS STILL FASHIONABLE FOR EVENING WEAR

HERE is a gown for an evening wear which has been designed by an artist for the stout woman. It almost seemed as if the "too, too solid flesh" of which Shakespeare spoke would have to be encased in tulle to be encased in tulle.

GOWN FOR THE STOUT WOMAN

Black began to make its appearance early in the summer as a most acceptable solution of the problem, and its instant popularity insured its success. The stout woman can wear it and look well—it shows the lines of her figure to the best advantage, without accentuating them.

The skirt is a marvel of well-managed drape. It is arranged in two tunics of varying lengths, made of the best fabric. The upper one is trimmed with an edging of ball trimming in jet, while the other has a piping of charmeuse.

A very wide band of jet heading outlines the underskirt, which is slightly shorter than the next tunic. It is really one of the most effective gowns I have seen for fall wear.

Tommy Tittle-Mouse Is No Hero

AROUND at the side of the house, quite near the coal chute, was a great wide flat door which led to the vegetable cellar. Through this door were carried the winter's supply of potatoes, of apples and of pears.

Tommy Tittle-Mouse had not lived very long in the garden till he had heard all the stories about the cellar, about what happened there, about the things that were done there, about the things that were seen there.

Every day some enterprising person devises some new and attractive article for kitchen use, and the latest one is the vegetable slicer. This is a small board, with a slanted arrangement on it, which slides back and forth. This is for making almost any kind of fancy shaped vegetable, such as the popular and artistic shoestring potatoes or bean for baked steaks, fancy carrots, peppers, etc. There is no gainfulness about this article, it hangs by a handle and can be bought for 35 cents.

NEGRO POET'S WIDOW TO DEVOTE HERSELF TO SUFFRAGE CAUSE

Mrs. Paul Lawrence Dunbar Says Pennsylvania Should Have Granted Women Vote Long Ago—Will Work in Negro Communities With Aid of Prominent Philanthropists.

Mrs. Paul Lawrence Dunbar, widow of the famous negro poet, who arrived in this city recently after a tour throughout the country, said, in an interview, that "it is not to the credit of the women of this State that the tried and proved principle of equal franchise is still being debated at this late day."

"The efforts of suffrage workers here are commendable," she said, "but the vote should have been granted before now."

A believer in the cause for many years, Mrs. Dunbar has been active in the movement since last June. Since that time she has been educating Negro women in the merits of female suffrage. Before deciding to devote all of her time to the propaganda, Mrs. Dunbar lectured on literary topics in schools, colleges and public halls.

HOW GERMAN KULTUR DESTROYED THE TOWN OF SENLIS, IN FRANCE

"Le Boches" Killed Innocent Noncombatants, Men, Women and Children Alike—Officers Refused to Listen to Pleas of Mercy and Carried Out in Full Policy of "Frightfulness."

By ELLEN ADAIR.

SENILIS, Northern France, July 11.—IT HAS been no easy task to reach this war-stricken town, 25 miles northeast of Paris, which has been so terribly wrecked by the Germans and where so many peaceful citizens have been massacred! And as I sit writing here I see before me a long street in ruins.

Only a few minutes ago I talked with a beautiful little French girl, Marie St. Jean, 13 years of age, who bears a great six-inch scar upon her leg as a witness of German "kultur." She and her mother with many other women were carried in front of the German troops in order to serve as a shield against the shells and bullets of the opposing French army!

"I could not help crying, madame!" Hoped little Marie, when she broke in upon me, "I was so large with fear at the recollection of all she had to go through at the hands of 'les Boches.' The soldiers were shouting whether the Italian bands on the pier are going abroad to enlist for Italy's sake just as soon as the summer concert season is over."

A Florida Sunset

There's a thread of silver through the sunset pines. A splash of crimson and gold; And the tropic twilight is close at hand As the day grows old, grows old.

A shred of gray lace 'mid the shimmering silk. The sun's last rays have spun, As it clings and blends with the velvet of night And the day is done, is done.
