REINSTATEMENTS

Reclaiming Delinquents, as Good as Enrolling New Members, a Good Principle.

The law of the national body has fixed the fee of admission at such a rate that with the competition of other beneficial palefaces. To overcome this it has been deemed advisable to try to reinstate the members who have been suspended for compayment of dues. Some years ago a dispensation was issued by the national chieftain granting permission to reinstate suspended members at a low figure, and through this means more than 2000 membern were reinstated in Pennsylvania. Under the present rules, tribes have the right to reinstate suspended members for the sum of one fathom, and at this time the great chiefs deem it advisable to call the attention of the tribes to the fact that they can reinstate their sus-pended members for this sum. The ac-tive workers in the tribe know whom it would be advisable to reinstate, and would be advisable to reinstate, should exert their energies toward the
