Secretary Ridicules Colonel's Defense of Plattsburg Address

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.-Major General Leonard Wood replied today to the ke administered to him by Secretary of War Garrison for allowing ex-Presi-Roosevelt to deliver at the Plattsmilitary camp a speech in which the Administration was attacked in strong

The reply was as follows: Your telegram received and policy laid down will be rigidly adhered to."

nel Roosevelt's spirited defense of General Wood, which followed Garrison's reprimand, was taken up by the Secretary of Wat.

"I have just read Mr. Roosevelt's statement," he said, "I see he blames the whole thing on me. He takes the posi-tion that it is notorious that he has the habit of making indiscreet speeches and that it, therefore, was my duty to find out if he intended to go to Plattsburg, and if so, head him off and save him from

This was in reply to the Colonel's charge that the Secretary knew three weeks in advance that he was to speak in Plattsburg. It would have been a rather large order, complained Garrison, to find out what Roosevelt intended to may and prevent him from saying it.

"He's a very active man," continued the abinet member, "and I'm a very busy me. It's going to be a pretty hard job to keep my eye on him all the The Secretary likened the Colonel's at-niude toward himself to that of a Maine

Erwin Garrett Arrested at Cape May for Fighting With Street Car Man

Philadelphia society was interested today in a report from Cape May that Erwin Clarkson Garrett, son of Mrs. George L. Garrett, of 431 West Stafford lost their identity as students and be-came a portion of the 1st brigade, 1st division, of the regular army. Until a week from Sunday, in connection with 3000 troops of various kinds whose life work is military service, they will live under conditions as nearly like those in street, Germantown, had been arrested there following a fight on the beach with an employe of a street car company. Garrett is the author of several volumes of poetry. One of the most startling compositions from his pen is known as "The Dyak Chief."

The quarrel, it is said, started after a charged electric wire had fallen across the car track in the path of hundreds of bathers. An employe of the car company had been assigned to the spot to warn the public of the danger. It is said that he was some distance from the scene when Garrett appeared. Walking to the Garrett appeared. Waking to the employe Garrett began to remonstrate with him for falling to stand guard over the wire. Words followed and before the astonished bathers realized what had happened, the police say, the two men were fighting.

The incident caused intense excitement and it was some time before friends of Garrett could separate the men. They were finally overcome and taken before a Justice of the Peace. Garrett offered to pay the costs.

Garrett is well known in Philadelphia society circ es. He is a cousin of Mrs. William Warder Harper, of Germantown and is related to prominent members of Germantown society. He was also related to the late Miss Julia Garrett, and in-herited some of the Garrett money.

LETTER REVEALS MURDER OF AMERICAN BY MEXICAN BANDITS

Band of Outlaws Attacks Mine Where Work Had Been Resumed on Assurance of Safety

NEBRASKAN THE VICTIM

Two of His Military Escort Killed and Others Wounded When Ambushed

The murder of an American by Mexican bandits and the robbery of one of the largest gold and silver mines in that country is described in a letter received by Jacob Rothschild, an investment broker with offices in the Drexel Building. broker with offices in the Drexel Building.
Mr. Rothschild is the local representative of Makeever Brothers, of New York, owners of the El Favor mine, the stock of which is held to a large extent by Philadelphians. The communication was sent by James H. Nelson, an employe of Makeever Brothers, on May Il. Because of the inadequacy of the Mexican mail service, caused by the turbulent political conditions, the letter was just received. It tells how Glenn Parmenter, native or Nebraska, was held up by a band of outlaws, rebbed of gold valued at $6000, his body horribly mutilated and his gold teeth knocked cut of his mouth, that they could be converted into cash. Two Mexican soldiers, members of Parmenter's military escort, were also killed, and two military escort, were also killed, and two others were injured. Parmenter begged the bandits to take the gold and spare his life, but the robbers were unrelenting. MUTILATED BY MURDERERS.

When the body was returned to the mine and examined an explosive bullet was found in his eye, an ordinary bullet in his body and six explosive missiles in his arm. News of the murder was communicated to Major Riveros, and a hundred soldiers are now searching for the assassins. The unfortunate man was only 30 years old and was regarded by his em-ployers as a worker of unusual executive ability. He was engaged on April 4, 1915, as superintendent of the mill attached to the EI Favor mine. On March 1 General Villa issued orders according to the letter, that all mines not in operation within 90 days should be confiscated. In accordance with that command, Mr. Nelson made all necessary the El Favor mine having been idle for many months because of the risks to which American property was subarrangements for the beginning of work WORK RESUMED BY MINERS.

Mr. Parmenter and Mr. Nelson de-parted from Guadalajara for El Favor on April 4, arriving two days later. They were assured that a resumption of opera-tions would not be attended by any danger. Various supplies were needed so that Mr. Nelson was compelled to re-turn for awhile to Guadalajara. Mean-while, the work was conducted without interruption, the miners declaring that they had been starving and would be glad to return to steady jobs.

Word was soon passed about, however, that "Pollo," described in the letter as an "assassin" and a "robber," was in the vicinity. "Pollo," whose real name was Castellon, was wanted as a dewas Castellon, was wanted as a de-serter from the army and a report of his whereabouts was dispatched to Hos-totipaquillo. Troops were scarce then, so that the Mexican were unwilling to send soldiers to arrest him either as a menace to the Americans or as a deserter from the Mexican army. from the Mexican army.

BANDITS ATTACK CAMP. A night watch was at first instituted, but when it was reported that "Pollo" had left the district, all employes were had left the district, an employes were permitted to retire at midnight. The relaxation of vigilance was costly, however, for at 2 o'clock on the morning of May 17 several bandits made their appearance in the camp, armed with Mauser carbines, knives and pistols. The Americans were disarmed while the Mexicans departed, taking $342 with them.

A far larger amount, concealed in a safe, was not discovered by the robbers. Mr. Nelson was held up again several days later, and when his life was threat-ened he surrendered $7000 in bullion, which was carried away on the backs of mules. Five of the 17 thieves were later apprehended, and after a brief encounter be-tween them and the soldiers the handits escaped, with one of their number wounded. #### SOUTH RESENTS ALLIES' BANNING OF COTTON

Retaliatory Action When Congress Convenes, Says Next Floor Leader

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 .- That retaliatory legislation will be attempted when Congress convenes, should the Allies not revoke their decree making cotton contraband, is the opinion of Representative Claude Kitchin, who is to be Democratic floor leader of the next House. The North Carolina Representative made it clear here today that the resentment against the Allies is growing throughout the South, despite the extraordinary efforts being made by the Administration to finance this year's coton crop. If the situation has not been improved, by diplomatic measures, when Congress assembles, he said, the sentiment for retaliatory measures, such as arms embargo, will be very hard to over

The cotton contraband decree, he declared, was a direct violation of the promises made by England at the outset of the war. Kitchin said that the cotton situation very likely will precipitate a lively debate, at least, so soon as the lawmakers get down to business. He, however, does not believe that there will be an extra session. The State Department still declines to discuss the new British note or to say whether it is near completion.

Officials of the Philadelphia Metal spice Council declare emphasically that unless employers meet the demands of the metal trades workers for an eight-hour day and a $4 daily wage strikes will be called in the shops where munitions of war are being made. It is said that the profits are so large at this time that all the employers can afford to share some of their prosperity we the workingman.

James O'Connell, national president of the Metal Trades Workers, and Prot. Scott Nearing have been asked to attend a big mass-meeting of the workers, tentatively scheduled for next Sunday. It is possible, however, that this date may be changed to September 12, to accommodate President O'Connell. Thousands of men are expected to attend the meeting. Thomas L. Wilson, secretary of the council, says that the purpose of the massmetting is not necessarily to call a strike, but to show the employers that the workers are in earnest in their demands for a chorter working day and a higher shorter working day and a wage.
