Never since the first championship, more than 20 years ago, have there been any two or three men who seemed to "have it so" the neld so overwhelmingly as Travers, Ouimet and Evans did this year. Travers, crowned king on all hands, was downed by a youth he easily beat in this diy recently. Ouimet, steadlest in the centry, was trimmed by the erratic play of smiling little Jimmy Standish. And for the sake of doing the job up brown, Anderson was finally put out when he was a slight favorite, on form, over Gardner. Anderson has been playing a great game this year, and few thought he would be disposed of so easily.

> Philadelphia women golfers are wringing their hands and waiting anxiously for the returns on the little band of experts from their midst who are attempting to qualify today in the national championship for women at Onwentsia, Lake For-est, Ili. For there will be seven Phila-delphians in the fray, and at least three of them are perfectly capable of making trouble right down to the last bell.

Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, Merion, is the leading light. She has been a finalist twice and was a semifinalist last year. So she is virtually due to come through Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck is playing almost as good golf. She was also a semifinalist last year, and is playing better this year than ever. Mrs. Caleb Fox has been a finalist for the national title, and her excellent, steady golf should put her well to the fore, as usual. Miss Eleanor Chandler and Mrs. E. H. Fitler are other dangerous nationalists from this city, while the golf of Mrs. West and Mrs. Liverisht is sure to earn them a good place.

Charles Williams, of Aronimink, has announced his intention of competing for the Geist Cup next week and in other tournaments here during September. This is welcome news, as it is felt that in Williams. lams is the making of a star if he gets the experience of a little tournament play in his system.

He went to Altoona against a fast field there, he tied for the medal, and in the play-off lost when his opponent holed out one of those pretty 40-foot putts. He lost out in the finals likewise when his opponent did the same trick, after Williams had been up all the way. Then he went to Williamsport, and retractions Then he went to Williamsport and missed out in breaking the course record on a short putt, and was trimmed for the championship cup when his man slipped over a near-furiong putt for the 18th and deciding hole. Williams feels, like many other golfers, that a long putt, by an op ponent, should not count.

A novel tournament was played last week at Maplewood, N. H. It was a hay fever handicap golf contest. Anybody that was liable to go off in a shower of sneezes was a candidate for the prize. Players were handicapped, first, according to the golf they showed, and, second, ac-cording to sneezes. Shots in the hay or rather rough-were particularly penal * * *

One of the mysteries of golf will always be why the player moans so muca before the start of a match about how poor his game is, and then when it is all is glad to spend hours telling Sawyer was once a national finalist and how good he is. And this even though in cases he has been seen in action

Wins Sprint and Tandem Titles at Newark Velodrome

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.-Frank Kramer won the short-distance professional championship and the tandem championship of the world at the Newark Velodrome yesterday afternoon.

Kramer was in his best form, and capured the individual title race with nuch difficulty from Iver Lawson, Salt Lake City, who was second, and Alf Grenda, of Australia, who finished third. In riding the final eighth of a mile in 11 3-5 seconds, the champion came within fifth of a second of his own world's Grenda made a bid to take the lead coming into the final lap, and his jump was strong enough to take him from third place to even terms with Kramer, who was leading. For 50 yards they rode neck and neck. Lawson following Kramer on the Heading into the back stretch Kramer put on more steam and pulled away from Grenda. Lawson beld close to the champion, and was a length back at the tape.

One of the main features of the govern championship was the work of Sherrill Sherman. No one had even figured him with a chance in his first match against Albert Seckel. Yet be continued to step along until he upset the conqueror of Oulmet and reached the semifinals-merely by playing steady, consistent golf without any particular thrills.

The time has passed in American golf when any one or two men, or even any three or four men, can rule the field. There are now 10 or 15 golfers who may beat any of the champions at any time. and as each season comes it is going to he harder and harder to win a champion

"you could always figure only one or two men to beat you if you happened to meet them in the draw. About one hard match was all that I ever worried about -knowing that in the other matches I had only to play steady golf to win. But those days are gone. You can't loaf on any match now, and this means that the golfer who wins must start in fighting for every hole from the first day,

The same condition will soon exist in two among many others. These involve the matter of preparation for such an event—the question as to whether or not most contenders don't play themselves out before the title stuff begins.

The West has now given up hope of neeling a world series set on Western soil. The Red Sox are conceded the pennant in the American League, while only three Eastern clubs have a chance in the Na-tional. Through the West among leading fans and ball players the opinion is general that the Red Sox and Phillies will be the two kale-sathering clubs-which, if it should so happen, would constitute another so-called world's record. Last year these same two cities were represented, but by different teams. Boston sent her National League entry to the scene, while Philadelphia was represented by the American League. To have the same two citadels on the big map with the lengues reversed would be something that has never happened before in the game-about the only thing that hasn't happened that we can think of

ROOTERS' CLUB PLANNING GREAT THINGS FOR PHILA.

If Moran Men Win Pennant Watch the Pyrotechnics

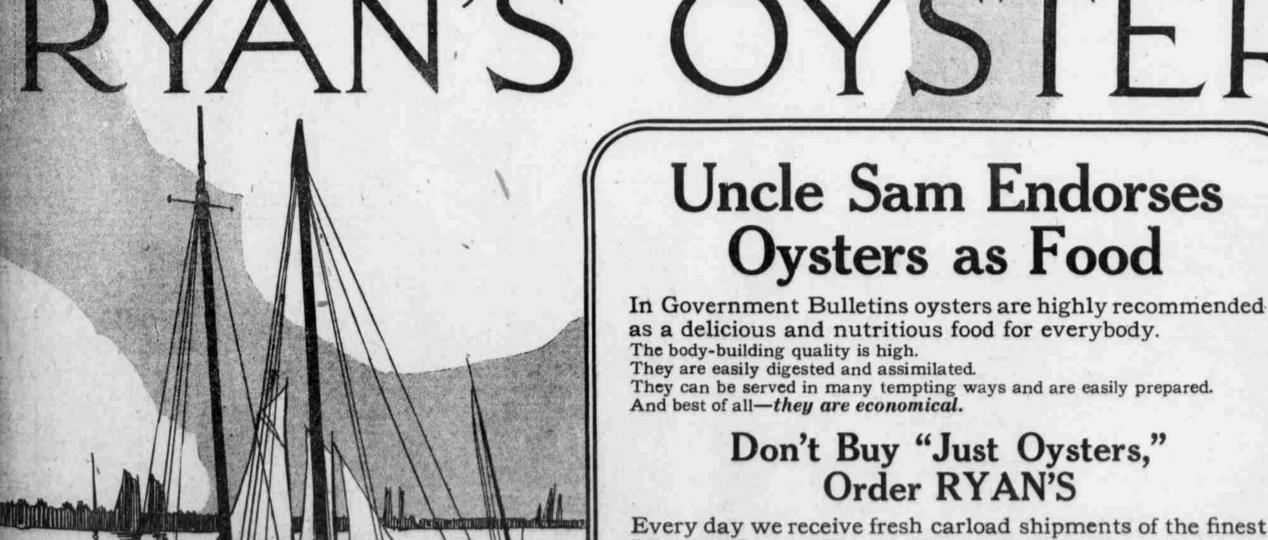

Great things are being planned by the Rooters' Club for the Phillies' baseball team. Five years of loyalty is about to be rewarded by the capture of the National League pennant by the home team, and the Rooters' Club members are preparing to celebrate.

Harry P. Sauers is the chief marshal of the Rooters' Club, which was organized in 1910 by Ralph Bingham, Grant Laferty, A. P. Witteman, James S. Mac-Cartney, Chester P. Ray, Fergus Mc-Cusker, Mr. Sauers, John P. Mulherin, James P. Nolan and Fred Dieck.

They were in the memorable parade in honor of the rejuvenation of the Phillies on April 15, 1916, and it was the club that christened the home team the "Live Wires," a name which stuck to them all over the big league circuit. Now that Pat Moran has piloted the team to a good lead toward Pennantville, the members of the Rooters' Club are planning to
