Athough the fundamental positions of hands and feet have been minutely described in preceding articles, it does not follow that slight variations are not permissible. This is so as regards the overlapping of the little finger, but it is most strongly recommended that this form of stripping the club be persevered in, until it is easy and natural to hold the club in this manner, for in this feature of the could use it comfortably if they would have the srips of their clubs made to fit their hands.

HARMONY IN THE CLUB

From a Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—When one looks back upon the Phillies' senson that is rapidly drawing to such a successful close, it is hard to believe that the team which was picked by the majority of alleged experts for last place and which was universally chosen as a second division club, has been at the top of the league practically all summer and has an even chance, at least, to capture the world's series from the Red Sox. To what is this remarkable turn of affairs due, is the question which many are a wonderful set of individual baseball players, or is it due to the fact that the breaks have been with them throughout the season?

To this question there is but one answer, to those who have been in close contact with the team—Pat Moran. Pat, himself a cast-off from the Chicago Cubs, has demonstrated that he is one of the game's greatest leaders by taking a bunch composed largely of cast-offs from other clubs and making them play winning and consistent ball during the seasons.

ning and consistent ball during the sea-

The Philly players themselves admit that their success has been solely due to Moran's efforts, to his baseball strategy and his ability to handle players who were never able to be handled. Take the team which has finished its triumphant tour of the West and which, barring accidents, will be in the world's series, one finds that the men are, for the most part, players whom other clubs thought had either outlived their baseball time or else would never reach the point where they could be considered real major

Nichoff was traded to the Phillies in the Dooin deal last winter; Milton Stock was not considered a high-grade player

John thought would never be of any par-ticular value to a good club, in the trade for Hans Lobert. Since Stock has been in the game regularly he has played far better ball than Lobert has with the Giants, while Demarce has hurled as well as any pitcher of McGraw's staff. Dode Pankert was released to the Phillies by Cincinnati and George Whitted wasn't good enough for the champion Brayes, so he was finally induced to come to Phila-delphia in the Magee deal, along with delphia in the Magee deal, along with Oscar Dugey

Jack Adams, the Phillies' third-string

Jack Adams, the Phillies' third-string catcher, came to the locals last winter in the Lobert deal. George Chalmers was thought to be absolutely "through," yet he is today one of Pat's most dependable hurlers and is apt to go into one of the world's series games. George McQuillen was let go by the Pirates and snatched by the Phils at the waiver price. Since joining the Phils McQuillan has proved to be invaluable. Heals Becker, who is now playing a utility role among the outfielders, was long ago passed up by the Glants as uscless, but he is able to hold his own now whenever he is called on to play the outfield or to pinch hit.

On the Phillies' team today are four players who have shared in world's series money. They are Beals Becker, as a member of the (Hanis; Al Demarce, also of the New York Nationals, and Dugey and Whitted, of the Boston Braves. Whitted and Dugey may be considered very lucky men, almost as lucky in fact as Johnny Lavan, who shared in the Athletics' coin of the series of 1918, because St. Louis gave him up on account of his poor hitting ability. The difference between Lavan and Whitted and Dugey is that the two Philly players can, have been and will continue to produce the goods.

The petry jealousies which are predominant in some baseball clubs between the pitchers, catchers, outfielders and infielders are entirely lacking in the Phillies (Tub. Eddle Burns, who has been putting up such an excellent brand of haseball behind the bat since Bill Killefer has been out of the game, is a constant companion of Bill. In some clubs the first and second-string ratchers are scarcely on speaking harms, yet Kithefer and Euros are also most inseparable. This, of course, is due to part to the men themselves, and partly to the spirit of harmony which horan has instilled into all of the Philly playors.

The great golfers, Vardon, Braid, Taylor, etc., are very careful to have the grips of their clubs fit their hands. Have the old-finshined calfskin grips on your clubs, the kind that is rather coarse, not the smooth, oll-finished grips on your clubs, the kind that is rather coarse, not the smooth, oll-finished grips. In the summer time, in very hot weather, the hands perspire, and unless the club is gripped tightly the result is that it slips. With the calf-skin grip a little shoemaker's wax and proper tension of the grip there will be no tendency to grip too tightly. It is tight sripping that causes sore and calloused hands. With the calfskin grip made slightly sitely with shoemaker's wax and proper tension of the grip there will not be the slightest danger of alipping nor of making the bands sore.

To go back to the size of the grips on your clubs, don't try to make your hands fit the clubs; have the clubs made to fit your hands—it is easier and more sensible. If you will do this you will find that the club can be gripped in the manner described as the Vardon or overlapping grip, and will be able to enjoy all its benefits. But if, after a thorough trial, or through long use and shillity to use the club efficiently with some other form of grip, the overlapping grip is not used, then at least adjust the hands in the position indicated, for any variation here will defeat the purpose I indicated this positioning of the hands served—that of placing the wrists in position to respond with correct action, without conscious effort, as the back swing is made.

in 1965 for Joe Pfeffer, a brother of the Brooklyn pitcher. This was one of the first trades engineered by Frank Chance after succeeding Frank Sellee and it proved the making of his famous pitching staff, as Moran play-ed an important part in the development of Overall, Brown, Lundgren, Ruelbach, Pfeister, Taylor and numerous lesser lights who aided in the construction of that staff. In the middle of the 1916 season Moran was sold to the Philites, and after one season as an active player was assigned to coaching the pitchers and other re-cruits. The release of Dooin gave Moran a chance to manage the team. What he has accomplished in his first season is now history. He is one of the few man-agers in the game to turn out a pennant winner in his first season.
