LOVE CAN BE AS CRUEL AS IT IS ENJOYABLE

Tiffs and Tantrums With One's "In-Laws" Will Often Destroy the Illusion of Love's Young Dream

By ELLEN ADAIR

THERE are some people who have a curious passion for falling out, and who wer seem to be happy unless they are ne more or less unpleasant quarrel. It isn't that they are really illnatured or that they bear a grudge against any one, but merely that they have a love for disputes and an inability to keep from their pet pastime.

Lovers' quarrels, of course, are as old as the hills. It does seem atrange that lovers of all people should find it necessary to But somehow or other they al-

Little Angelina can get on quite well with her people at home, so she argues, without either quarrels or sulks, and before she became engaged to Edwin the immaculate she decided that it would be a sheer impossibility to have any such hness as quarrels.

she speaks and so she thinks. what she does, that is a very differ-matter. For love is the great upsetter as well as the great leveler, you see. Litthe Angelina soon learns that love can be cruel as well as kind—that he is exacting as well as unselfish, that his claims often clash with other claims, and then there is trouble.

Perhaps Edwin does not care very much for Angelina's family, her mother espe-cially, And Angelina, being a girl of spirit and observation, soon notices this and resents the fact. Then comes a considerble amount of plain speaking on shoth able amount of plain speaking on shoth adea, which might be placed under the category "Tiffs and Tantruma."

For a while there is a very real danger of the two lovers drifting apart, despite the fact that they really do care for each other, and that the drifting is due to a reason which might be amended with very little trouble.

Perhaps nothing quite so serious is the cause of an untoward breeze amid love's young dream. But to all outward appearmes it has every evidence of develop-me into a magnificent storm!

GIRL'S LIVING EXPENSES OBVIOUSLY DEPENDENT ON POINT OF VIEW

Note the Difference Between Consumers' League Schedule and Miss Virginia Bruce Loney's Needs

$443.56 AND $25,500

MODERN GIRLS' EXPENSES FROM TWO STANDPOINTS

era Pennsylvania says the average girl must spend abnually to live decently: Food and shelter d and shelter $228.80 Laundry, health, insurance, What Virginia Bruce Loney, 16-yearsld orphan, flods it necessary to spend in Food bills and household sup-3,500 Three servants School, music, languages, books, etc.
Summer vacation and travel-Ing expenses
Automobile and chauffeur Recreation and amusements, including horseback riding eters, dentists, etc. surance and storage charges eldentals sharp contrast in how the other half is drawn in a comparison between he detailed items of the living expenses Miss Virginia Bruce Loney, a New ork girl, well known in Philadelphia, the has declared in court that she cannot live properly for less than $25,500 and atlatics compiled recently by the Conmera League of Pennsylvania.

Total $25,500

decording to the league it is practically perative for a girl to have at least 8 a week in order to live in decent roundings. This sum, of course, midn't pay for Miss Loney's maid, but me has been born with the pro-silver spoon in one's mouth and a on dollar inheritance, one cannot be the largest totals were those at 8th and teed to be an expert economist. Like—when a girl has been born with the Girard avenue, and in Tacony.

Edwin, like most men, has few but very decided opinions on such delicate topics as the dress and behavior of the fair sex. Unwhelly, again like most men, he ven-tures to lay down the law. Few men can do this safely, but as a rule a wise girl merely smiles tolerantly and goes on as

Not so the mistaken malden who stoops to argue with a mere man on matters out of his province. She becomes angry, and from being angry she goes on to be hasty. Things are said that hurt and rankle, and that had infinitely better be left un-

The stupid part is that all the while there need have been no anger at all little good-humored ridicule would have settled matters more neatly and expedi-

Some clever but guileful girls have gone so far as to carry out the masculine rul-ing so theroughly that the amazed author of the beheats has heartily wished he had never meddled with things beyond his ken, and his cure has, therefore, been

"The falling out of faithful friends re-newal is of love," says the proverb. Yes-but it might have been added, explanatorywise, that it takes tried and faithful friends to forgive and forget. The experiment is exceedingly dangerous, anyhow.

Proverbs and various footish sayings have much to answer for with inexper-ienced girls. They labor under the de-lusion that fallings-out made up with kisses are part of love's ordinary fare. So they deliberately look round for something to have a tiff about. Once or twice mayed to see unaccus-tomed tears and suiks, tomed tears and susand at once become duly penitent—frequent-many a disconsolate damsel has discovered to her cost. The tears that once upon a time moved her lover have become so familiar now that they merely breed conever again the part of cloud-dispeller.

tempt-and he learns better than to play sure knowledge that a winter suit must last for three consecutive seasons, she is pretty certain to have the sort of convolution in her gray matter that denotes economic efficiency.

LIFE'S SHARP CONTRASTS. Lots of girls, it is true, who are self-supporting do not receive $8.53 in their weekly pay envelopes. Some receive less than half of that amount. In the words of Miss Florence Pierce, general secretary of the league, "they don't live, they merely exist," and the fact that they manage to exist decently, though not in decent surroundings, is one of the marvels of In addition to the $25,500 that Miss Loney also needs $5000 in order to pay a chape-ron. Being an orphan and having a dis-taste for living with relatives, the girl has to maintain an establishment of her own. In order to appease Madame Grun-dy the duenna is as necessary to Miss Virginia as $4.40 worth of food per week is necessary to keep life in the working As against the $2000 the poor little rich girl has to spend for her automobile and chauffeur and the $1500 she pays out for horses and other amusements, to say the big city who has nothing but what she earns spends 60 cents a week for carfare, the cars being her only method of locomotion; 17 cents for recreation, which will take her to the movies three times, if she doesn't buy an ice cream soda, and leave 2 cents over for a postage stamp. When one has to count the pennies a postage stamp comes under the head of recreation, if not positive extravagance

MISS PIERCE'S VIEW. The application of Miss Loney received small sympathy from Miss Pierce, whos daily life consists in seeing the struggles of thousands of girls' efforts to make both ends meet.
"Nobody needs $25,500 to live on," she said. "What that girl needs is not more money, but more education. That's the best cure for extravagance.' As a matter of fact, Miss Loney is spending $2500 for her education, but her curriculum doesn't include economics.

FEWER BATHERS THIS YEAR Number of Public Bathhouse Patrons Shows Decrease

During the season just ended 3,973,131 During the season just ended a.05,181 persons visited the various public bath-houses of the city. According to the reports kept by the Board of Recreation this is a decrease of 25,071 over the 3,109,-202 bathers reported in 1914.

The list of bathers is divided as follows: Men. 628,848; boys, 1,812,240; women,

Frisky Cottontail Makes a New Friend

might know.

ht: I know exactly what my friends s likely to say; I know everything that likely to happen-and knowing everyis no fun! I mean to find some a new-so there!"

. as a matter of fact, Frisky didn't half as much as he thought he did. ad met most of the garden creatures, after. And he had had good talks all he had met. But he didn't know there was to be learned by a long

OF COURSE, this pretty garden is more to be learned! Frisky didn't know Mr. Spider, it would never have occurred to him to notice Mr. Snall, and as for the interesting Worker Ant—Frisky hadn't even guessed his existence. No wonder he was tired of the garden, when he missings! I know exactly what I can find

Mrs. Frisky shook her head thought fully when Frieky announced that he would find a new friend. Finding new friends was dangerous business, in her opinion, and she would much prefer that Frisky stay near home. However, she was a wise little mate, and made no special objection when Frisky, after talking a bit more about the stupidity of the garden, decided to take a short trip of

She bade him good-by very cheerfully and watched him as he scurried down the side of the road toward the country. "Maybe it will be good for him to get away a bit," she said, and very contentedly she went back to tend to her own business.

edly she went back to tend to her own business.

Frisky journeyed along in a very happy frame of mind. He followed the roads for a short way; then he turned into the first meadow he saw, and was running across at top speed when who should pop up right under his heals but a tiny brown striped creature who nearly tripped the clover Frisky. "Look out! Who are you to trip me that way?" exclaimed Frisky testily. "How did you get under my feet without my seeing you come?"

The little creature stopped and replied, "Oh, please excuse me, but I just came up from my hole to get my dinner."

Frisky looked, and there, sure enough, was a tiny hole right where the little creature had appeared—he wondered why he hadn't noticed it before. "Well, I guess it is as much my fault as yours." he said salisatily. "For I should have seen your hole. Will you please tell me who you are?" The little gobbs: (for it was br) accessed and immediately he and Frisky became friends.

Copyright—Care logges.

THE DAILY STORY

Delinquent David

David Greer had no idea, when ha rented a small villa in a Long Island suburb, that he was going to be tied down to restrictions. Certainly he would have looked further for his tiny cottage had be realized the disturbing fact.

David was not fond of gardening and could not assume an interest in his property, even if all his neighbors did glower darkly at him for his lack of concern resarding the bit of yard in front of his He knew that he was the black sheep in the suburb and that another tenant was far more desirable than he was David did not, however, worry his head over the shortcomings, nor did he feel in any way upset over the disgraceful aspect of his garden, when on every side of him were exquisite specimens of artistic home gardening. Flowers rioted in every available foot of the small properties in the suburb in which David had rented a cottage.

"Thornton cottage is a blot on our village," was the general comment among the suburban home owners, but neither David nor his old housekeeper did anything to remove the blot.

Mrs. McPherson felt that she had enough to do in looking after David's socks and cooking him tasty meals and keeping the inside of his house tidy without bothering about the outside,

It was not until the neighbors talked of signing a petition for having him ejected that Drucilla Everet took a hand in the affairs of David Greer.

"It is a shame," she said to her "It is a shame." she said to her mother, and there were red spots in her lovely cheeks, "that a man should be put out of his coxy little home merely because he doesn't take care of his garden. All people can't be expected mad about flowers. I won't sign the peti-

"Nor I," coincided Drucilla's mother. She did not think it necessary to inform her daughter that admiration of David Greer's statwart good looks was in a measure responsible for her antagonism toward the neighbors who would evict him. "He has as much right to his faults as any of us."

So it was over the back fence that Drucilla told David's housekeeper all about the suburbanites' intentions regarding her master.

"They'll no' eject my bonnie laddie!" expostulated Mrs. McPherson in righteous Scotch wrath. "He's that busy in his office the day that he's no time to be pottering about a garden."

"That's just the way I feel," said Drucilla, while she smiled her sweetest smile into Mrs. McPherson's motherly eyes. "I was wondering," she continued coavingt, "whether or not Mr. Greet coavingt, "whether or not Mr. Greet cyes. "I was wondering, she continued coaxingly, "whether or not Mr. Greer would let me plant his front garden for him. I love flowers so much, and our own space is very tiny." She waited breathlessly for her answer.

There was grave doubt in the woman's eyes, coapled with a desire not to thwart the charming sirl in the supponnet.

the charming girl in the sunbonnet.
"He'd no like to have a girl make his garden for him—that I ken," she said finally: "but if you could manage without him knowing who did it—" Drucilla did not allow her to finish, but smiled happily.

"That will be lovely! I can get to work when he leaves for the office in the morning, and when he returns! Oh—I will have a perfect bower of flowers to greet him.' "Mind you don't let him see you, cautioned Mrs. McPherson "He'd be that angry with me I'd sure lose my place." She well knew that David could not manage without her, since she had been with him since cradle days, but she considered it well to warn the girl into secrecy, Fortune favored Drucilla to a remark-horses and other amusements, to say nothing of the $2500 which goes for summer vacation and traveling, the average the cat was away the mouse did certainly play. The small garden was dug up and fertilized and planted with blooming flowers that were well nourished and flowers that were well nourished and tended before David returned.

Drucilia was standing behind the casement curtains of her own tiny cottage when the delinquent came back to his native suburb and saw the transformation that had been wrought. His eyes took on a hint of flame and his squarecut profile ascended. Drucilia watched these warlike signs and her heart beat tentily. She did not stop to realize that rapidly. She did not stop to realize that David would not know who had done the deed, and that his wrath would not find vent on her own head.

"Mag." he said as he entered the house and found Mrs. McPherson awaiting him, "what person has assumed the right to put my garden in order? Did you countenance such impertinence?"

The old Scotchwoman had never seen her master so angry, and she strove to pacify him in her usual wheedling manner, but for once David failed to respond. When she told him of the threat of evicwhen she told him of the theat of exi-tion and the kindiy interference of a neighbor he was only the more angry.

"I believe I am paying for this prop-erty. Mag, and no one shall dictate to me whether I have a garden or not. I will pull every one of those flowers up by the roots and fling them in the street. These people will see whether or not I can run my own affairs." He strode out of the house as if he would suit action But David Greer was not the kind of mann to pull up innocent flowers and de-stroy them, especially when those flow-ers exhaled delicious odors that calmed his temper. The pansies seemed to be gazing pleadingly up at him from their dewy beds and the nasturtiums clamored joyfully as if delighted with life over the fence that divided his garden from the one next door. While his wrathful glance traveled with unwilling admiration along the row of orange and red blossoms peeped over the fence David became aware of a most wonderful lovely head bobbing about somewhere behind the nasturthums. He caught a delighted breath. Neighbors were not so bad, after all. He looked again and found Drucilia's eyes fixed more or less wistfully upon him. Again David breathed quickly. "Are you frightfully angry?" David supposed he was dreaming, but he answered the sweet voice that had questioned him.

"I was." he said, "I'm not now,"

Drucilla smiled and David wondered whether it was the girl's smile or the ad-vent of flowers into his garden that suddenly made the world a glorious place to live in. "There is a most shockingly barren piece of garden at the back," he told her, "per-haps you would like to doll that up as well. We could cut a sate through the well. We could cut a gate through the fence and you could put some of those pink roses over the arch."

"Oh, I should love that," laughed Dru-

Inside Thorntnon cottage Mrs. McPher-"I'll be cooking for two before the roses bloom," was her inward comment. Outside Drumila and David continued to discuss the gates that were to make two gardens one.

(Copyright 1915.)

MALLIEN INTRODUCES NEW_

FUR-"PARISIAN CARCOLE"

FURS have assumed a most important part in the fashionable woman's wardrobe all during the summer, so It is easy to predict-and it is always easy to predict, anyhowthat they will be even more important during the winter. The cool weather has come to stay, and it isn't at all odd to behold fur scarfs of fox or lynx worn on the street with a serge one-piece frock. One feels the need for something warm, even if one is fashionably attired, and it is many a long season since fashion's devotees have had the chance to be comfortable and look well at the same time. Black plush is very popular this season, and, trimmed with white fox, promises to be decidedly smart for the dansant or for theatre wear. Another very smart fur novelty is the Parisian carcole, in-troduced by Mallien, of Paris, He is one of the most successful designers and has introduced rogue for ankle-length gar-

The very smart fur coat this season is beited. The very short models which were so much favored last season have been replaced my three-quarters lengths and short Eton Jackets. These, by the way, have made an immediate success over here.

Today's illustration shows a loose, full coat, with a shawl collar and rather loose sleeves. This last an adaptation of the bell sleeves which are so fashionable on gowns. The waistline is slightly defined by many of the bridge. by means of the braided belt, which begins half way around the side and fastens at the front of the coat. The front of the collar is reversible; it may be fastened close to the throat or left open, like the col-lars seen on The tailored suits this winter. Many of new fur coats have smart collars, cuffs and belt of a contrasting fur, or touches of velvet. The effect is decidedly new.

Shoe Fashions

The inside laced boot has certainly gained a victory over the back lace. One sees every well-gowned woman wearing them. The truth is that the back lace boots are very hard to make fit in ready-made shoes and not nearly as easy to lace and fit as the inside lace. Satin ones are promised for some elaborate frocks, but those of soft white kid are delicate enough to be worn with almost any gown. The careless way that some of careless way that some of them are laced is a pity, for it makes the ankler heavy to see kld wrinkling about them.

Low shoes are very slip-per-like in shape.

SMART FUR COAT

Little Benny's Note Book There was a kid with a bull daws down at the cornir today, the kid beeing littel but tuff looking and the bull dawg beeing big as enything and even tuffer looking eyes and 2 teeth sticking out in frunt, and | tro me and Sid Hunt and Puds Simkins stood as there looking at it, but not standing so verry close to it, and aftir a wile Puds sed to the kid, Hay, will that dawg bite.

He nevvir has yet, sed the kid. I aint afrayed of it, sed Sid Hunt. And he wawked rite up and stood in frunt of the dawg, and me and Puds Simkins wawked up and stood alawngside of Sid, and the buil dawg just kepp own setting there awn its hine legs looking at us as if it wasent verry glad to see us but dident care mutch weathir we stayed or look at the red in its eyes, I sed. Thats nuthing, that belowings there, sed Sid Hunt. And he startid to wave his hands erround in frunt of the bull dawg's fase saying, Look wat I can do to it. Thats nuthing, sed Puds Simkins. And he put his foot out and tickled the bull dawg in the buzzum with his toe, saying,

Look at wat I can do to him.

Wich the bull daws jest kepp awn set ting there looking up at Puds but not say-ing enything, and I sed. Thats nuthing. And I reetched down and got hold of the bull dawgs tale and startid to tern it erround as if it was the handil of a organ, and the bull dawg startid to make a fearse noise way down in its stummick or sumwares, and I quick jumped back, but no quicker than wat Puds and Sid did. Are you sure that dawg wont bite, I sed to the kid.

No, he nevvir bites, sed the kid, he jest takes hunks out of peepil without biting them. And the dawg kepp awn growling in its stummick and looking at us as if it thawt we dident have eny rite standing there and me and Puds and Sid wawked away slow as if we was tired of beeing thare and wunted to be sumwares elts out not as if we as afrayed of the bul

Two Wills Probated

Among the wills probated today were those of Dora Schellhase, late of 908 Gil-ham street, disposing of effects valued at $7704, and Ann Keegan, 2630 North 11th street, which, by private bequests, disposes of $2500 worth of property. The personal effects of Edward T. Maguire, Jr., have been appraised at $38.732.40; John E. Norton, $5264.70, and Matilda M. Holshaus, $3590.61.

MARS THEORY GETS JOLT Dr. J. A. Brashear Doubts Existence of Life on Planet

The theory that Mars is inhabited by than wat the kid was, with red in its DAY SEPT 27-26 Revised proofs to Eaton A. Brashear, the eminent Pittsburgh asnomer, named by Governor Brumbaugh one of the three most distinguished Pennsylvanians to represent the State at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, at Francisco. Doctor Brashear spoke before the Engineers' Club, 1317 Spruce street. He was the guest of the Philadelphia Association of Members of the American Society of Civil Engineers, which held its annual meeting last night.

Doctor Brashear said that if there was life on Mars it existed only at the equatorial regions. The atmosphere on that planet, he said, was rarer than at the top of the Himalayas, where no life existed. The canals, so called, he said, were a source of mystery. No one knows what they really are. Doctor Brashear is a believer in the popularizing of the science to which he has devoted his life, and he believes that it would be advisable for every city to have a free observatory, just as it has free libraries.

Suffrage Song

(Tune of Dixie.)
Ah wish Ah wus in de land o' votin'
Whar men an' women is both wuth notin', Look away! Look away! Look away! Suffrage Lan'.
In Suffrage Lan' whar we'll soon live in,
Women, too, dare votee'll give in,
Look away! Look away! Sufrage Land. CHORUS.

Den Ah wish Ah wus in Suffrage Lan,' Hooray! Hooray!
In Suffrage Lan' Ah'il take ma stan',
To live and die for suffrage,
Away! and here! In Suffrage Lan' forever

It's nothin' new dat Ah'm proposin'; Open yo' eyes an' stop yo' dosin', Leok away' etc. De women votes in many a 'an' An' things goes better fer dare han', Look away' etc. (Chorus.)

But tain't our business ter inquire Ef we'd be lower or yit higher. Losa way' etc. One human hein' is as good as anudder, Yo' daddy ain't no better'n yo' mudder. Look away' etc. (Cherus.)

"Tis just fer women to have de vote Just as Just as men, you note. Look away! etc. Taxation without representation Is not fit fer our great nation. Look away! etc. (Chorus.)

But you iss work an' don't chu worry, Dam votes is comin' in a hurry. Look away; etc. We needs de women's votes, we do. An' women needs de votes, dat's true, Look away! etc. (Chorus, Look away! etc. (Chorus, Look away!

LUIGI RIENZI 1714 Walnut Street

Dresses Suits Coats Beautifully Tailored and Ultra Stylish American Made

Garments

Importer and Ladies' Tailor

Gowns

Millinery Furs

French Hats and Original Rienzi Creations Everything New and Fashionable in Strictly Reliable Furs

Prices Extremely Moderate

"ANGEL OF HELL'S HALF-ACRE" FINDS DAYS NOT LONG ENOUGH

Wife of Founder of Inasmuch Mission Hasn't the Time to Give Big Sunday School

Down in the southern part of the city. in that part known as "Hell's Half Acre," there is a woman who thinks nothing of spending 18 hours out of every 34 actively engaged in the cause to which she has pledged her life.

This woman is Mrs. George Long. To hundreds upon hundreds of Philadel-phians she is known as the wife and co-worker of the man whose conversion to Christianity Inspired him to found the Inasmuch Mission. To hundreds of downand-outers, both men and women, she is spoken of affectionately as "The Angel of Heil's Half Acre."

As she hurried out of the noon-day service yesterday, hastily to snatch some lunch before her afternoon duties crowded in upon her, she stopped a little while and told of the mission and her work. "I don't see how I am going to find time to re-establish my large Sunday school,"

she said. "Every minute is chock full of work; the only time I get to rest is a little while Sunday afternoon." As she spoke of the children who swarm to the mission and beg her to begin the Sunday school again, there appeared on her expressive face a look of sad weariness which bespoke more eloquently than words her mental struggle to attempt to baffle a physical self, which had warned her that there is a limit to endurance.

"So much good work is accomplished through the little ones," she said. " made my Sunday school a rescue mission within a rescue mission. And the little tots loved to come. I did away with the regulation Sunday school lessons and tried instead to tell them simply of Jesus, to make Jesus a reality to them. Each day every little child did at least one thing for Him. And each one was then allowed to teatify, just as the adults do in the mission."

"One sturdy little negro stood up one day and said, 'The thing I did today for Jesus was to help an old man keep his goat." Mr. Long and I thought he meant that he had helped some poor fellow to stay sober or keep his temper and we had stay sober or keep his temper and we had to suppress a smile. A few days afterward our hearts were quite touched when we ran across the litle shaver leading a day siready too full.

And again the sad smile played over her features because of the physical impossibility of crowding more work into a day siready too full.

$400,000 ASKED FOR SUPPLIES Mayor and Director Cooke Show

Urgent Need to Councils Mayor Blankenburg and Director Cooke.

of the Department of Public Works, have called attention to the urgent need for Councils to provide funds for the purchase of foodstuffs and fuel for city institutions and to tide the various departments over the year. As a result, the members of the Finance Committee of Councils will on Thursday report a transfer bill calculated to care for the most pressing needs of the city.

The Mayor, in his letter to John P. Connelly, chairman of the Finance Committee, asks that some information be given him by tomorrow as to whether or not Councils intend to provide approxi-mately $400,000 one half of which is needed to buy fuel for the filtration pumping stations and the other half for other supplies that are badly needed.

According to Director Cooke, Councils not only have been marking time on financial questions, but on many ordi-nances that deal entirely with public con-venience and comfort as well. Among the many bills introduced a long while ago, but never reported out of the vari-ous committees, is that which prohibits the keeping of pigs in South Philadelphia. the keeping of pigs in South Philadelphia; that which provides for the city's paying for bonds for city employes, and that pro-viding for the study of a design for a municipal garbage disposal plant, Jewish Carnival Continued The street carnival at 32d and Berks streets, in aid of Jewish war sufferers, will be continued tonight under the auswill be continued tonight under the aus-pices of the Hebrew Central War Relief Committee. A feature of the event is the dancing in the yard of the William S. Stokley school. All articles for sale at the various booths, presided over by pretty girls, have been donated. D. Ar-thur Magaziner is chairman of the com-mittee in charge. mittee in charge.

whom the children will accept. When I have someone else teach them they are ead and feel that I don't love them WOLF BANISHED FROM poor old blind man and his goat across

MRS. GEORGE LONG

"What will become of the children who beg so hard to have their Sunday school if begin again if you don't have the class." was asked her.

"Oh' I shall continue to teach my own children, here in this part known as 'Hell's Haif Acre.' The mission is almost home to them. It is the largest Sunday school, taking in the children of the surrounding neighborhoods, that I feel unable to conduct this coming winter. The trouble is that I cannot get a helper the street."

Blind and Infirm Actress Profits by Will of Her Brother-in-Law

DOOR OF CLARA MORRIS

NEW YORK, Oct. L-Clara Morris, whose work as an actress is a delightful memory to theatregoers of a generation ago, but who in recent years has suffered from blindness and other infirmities, has come into a legacy of $2000 or more a year, under the will of her brother-inlaw, Samuel W. Harriot, of Whitestone, L. I. He set aside $50,000, the income of which is to be paid to Miss Morris for An accounting of the estate was filed yesterday with Tax Appraiser Henry C. Johnson, Jr., in Long Island City. The bulk of it was devised to the widow, Mrs. Josephine T. Harriot.

In private life Miss Mouris is Mrs. Frederick C. Harriot. She was married to erick C. Harriot. She was married in 1874, in her profesional heydey. Her fall-ing sight and other illness and misfortunes reduced her means, and stage folk relieved her by benefits which paid off the mortgage on The Pines, her home in Yonkers. In 1913 she sold the Yonkers place to a moving picture concern and move to Whitestone. Mr. Harriot died last year. Miss Morris is 66.

Planning Mardi Gras Carnival The North Philadelphia Business Men's Association will hold a Mardi Gras car-nival during Halloween week, Tentative plans were drawn up at a meeting last night in the Nicetown Boys' Club, Hunt-ing Park avenue and Clarissa street, Judge MacNeille, of the Juvenile Court, delivered an address on "The Conduct of Boys on the Streets."

STATED MEETINGS AT CLUBS OPEN REGULAR SEASON

I the resumption of the regular business at the woman's clubs, and the season will soon be in full swing. The Philomusian and the New Century Club are quite energetic, their program for the month of October including many interesting features. The club year at the Philomusian will open today, as usual, with a stated meeting, at which the new members and old will be received by the committee in charge. This includes the president, Mrs. Benjamin F. Richardson, assisted by Mrs. Edward W. Mumford, Mrs. J. Clark Moore, Jr., Miss Sara C. Collins and Mrs. William H. Shoemaker. Tea will be served after the business of the meeting has been concluded. Mrs. George W. Smith and Miss Mary E. Roney will preside at the tea table. Mrs. William H.

THE first week in October brings with it | ern District of the State Federation, recently held at Pottstown.

Tomorrow at 2 the stated meeting of the New Century Club, 124 South 12th street, will take place. Mrs. H. Prentise Nichols, president, will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg, Mrs. Alfred Lowry, Mrs. F. S. Whittaker, Mrs. W. E. Lingelback, Mrs. Frank Miles Day and Miss F. Arline Tryon. At the close of the stated meeting the club will have the honor and pleasure of hearing its distinguished fellow member, Hon. Rudolph Blankenburg, Mayor of Philadelphia, speak on "Our City."

The International Committee will be at the club every Friday morning from 16 cently held at Pottstown.

The International Committee will be at the club every Friday morning from 10 until 1 o'clock, to receive the hospital supplies, garments and materials to be made or knitted, or money for the purchase of materials, which the members of the New Century Club may give toward meeting the needs at home and abroad. These are sent at once to the Emergency Aid Committee of Philadelphia, in the name of the New Century Club. Shoemaker will read a report of the East-

New Table Linens Cloths and Napkins to Match

And despite disturbing conditions abroad, we are glad to be able to announce our usual critical selection and abundant choice of the latest foreign productions. Prices are advantageous.

Table Cloths and Napkins at Special Prices

TABLE CLOTHS: 2x2 2 x 21/4 yards $5.00 each

234 × 234 2 x 3 21/2 x 21/4 yards $6.50 each $6.00 $6.00 NAPKINS to match these cloths, 22 and 25 inches, $5.00 and $6.00 the dozen. SPECIAL NAPKINS: 22-inch, about six patterns, at $3.50

15-inch hemstitched damask Tea Napkins at $3.00 the dozen. Linen Sheets and Pillow Cases Because of the increasing scarcity of hematitched liner sheets and pillow cases, we suggest an immediate purchase. Libers

