Lord, give me strength!" he panted.
"Deptford is miles away," said I.
Now, as I spoke, he lifted himself upon his hands and stared at me. I saw a haggard, hairy face, very thin and sunken, but a fire burned in the eyes, and the eyes seemed, somehow, familiar.
"You!" he cried, and spat up in the air toward me: "devil!" he cried, "Devil Vibart." I recoiled instinctively before the man's sudden, wild ferocity; but, propping himself against the bank, he shook his hand at me and laughed.
"Devil!" he repeated; "shade—ghost of a devil!—have you come back to see me die?"

"Who are you?" I cried, bending to look into the pale, emaciated face;

look into the pale, emaciated face; "who are you?"

"A shadow," he answered, passing a shaking hand up over his face and brow, "a ghost—a phantom—as you are; but my name was Strickland once, as yours was Devil Vibart. I am changed of late—you said so in the Hollow, and langhed. You don't laugh now, Devil Vibart, you remember poor John Strickland now."

"You are the Outside Passenger!" I exclaimed, "the madman who followed and shot at me in a wood—" TO LOAN ON REAL ESTATE security: immediate settlement: payable as desired. PIRST AND SECOND. exclaimed, "the madman who followed and shot at me in a wood—"Followed? Yes, I was a shadow that was always behind you-following and foilowing you, Satan Vibart, tracking and tracking you to hell and damnation. And you fled here, and you fled there, but I was always behind you; you hid from me among lowly folk, but you could not escape the shadow. Many times I would have killed you—but she was between—the Woman. I came once to your cottage; it was sight, and the door opened beneath my hand—but your time was not then. But ha!—I met you among trees, as I did once before, and I told you my mame—as I did once before, and you my mame—as I did once before, and I spoke of her—of Angela, and cried her name—and shot you—just here, above the brow; and so you died, Devil Vibart, as soon I must, for my mission is accomplished—"

"It was you!" I cried, kneeling beside him. "It was your hand that shot Sir Maurice Vibart?"

"Yes," he answered, his voice growing very gentle as he went on, "for Angela's sake—my dead wife," and, fumbling in his pocket, he drew out a woman's small lace-edged handkerchief, and I saw that It was thickened and black with blood. "This was hers," he continued, "in her hand, the night she died—I had meant to lay it on her grave—the blood of atonement—but now—"A sudden crash in the hedge above; a figure silhouetted against the sky; a shadowy arm that, falling, struck the moon out of heaven, and, in the darkness, I was down upon my kness and fingers were upon my throat.

"Oh, Darby?" cried a voice, "I've got him—this way—quick—oh, Darb—" My fist drove into his ribs; I strungled up under a rain of blows, and we struck and awayed and staggered and struck—trampling the groaning wretch who lay dying in the disch. "Anywhere, so long as you do start."

"Drop that stick!" said I, pressing the muzzle of the weapon lightly against his forehead as I apoke. At the touch of the cold steel his body suddenly stiffened and grew rigid, his eyes opened in a horrified stare, and the stick clattered down on the road.

"Talking of fancies," I pursued, "I have a great mind to that smock-frock of yours.

In a fever of haste he tore off the gar-mest in question, and, he thrusting it eagerly upon me. I folded it over my

"Now," said I, "since you say you can run, supposing you show me what you can do. This is a good straight lane—off with you and do your best, and no turning or stopping, mind, for the moon is very bright, and I am a pretty good shot." Hardly waiting to hear me out, the fellow set off up the lane, running like the wind;

whereupon, I (waiting only to smatch up his forgotten bread and meat) took to my heels—down the lane, so that, when I presently stopped to don the smock-frock, its late possessor had vanished as though he had never been.

I hurried on nevertheless, cating greed-ily as I went, and, after some while, left the narrow lane behind, and came out on the broad highway that stretched like a great, white riband, unrolled beneath the moon. And here was another finger-post with the words:

"To Sevenoaks, Tonbridge, and the Wells.-To Bromley and London."

And here, also, was another placard, headed by that awful word: MURDER-which semed to leap out at me from the rest. And, with that word, there rushed over me the memory of Charmian as I had seen her stand—white-lipped, haggard of eye, and-with one hand hidden in the folds of her gown.

slong the great nighton, out, wherever I looked, I saw this most hateful word; it shone out palely from the shadows; it was scored into the dust at my feet; even across the splendor of the moon, in jagged characters, I seemed to read that awful word: MURDER.

And the soft night wind woke voices to whisper it as I passed; the sombre trees and gloomy hedgerows were full of it; I heard it in the echo of my step-MURDER! MURDER! It was always there, whether I walked or ran, in rough and stony places, in the deep soft dust, n the dewy tender grass-it was always there, whispering at my heels and re-fusing to be silenced.

I had gone on in this way for an hour or more, avoiding the middle of the road because of the brilliance of the moon, when I overtook something that crawled
