MILLIE AND HER MILLIONS

THE DAILY STORY

Rummage! Rummage!

Signaler Knox was spending the day in a small village on the north shore of Long Island.

The town did not promise to offer much excitement, but the wanderer took a turn along the shore and then returned to the village square.

Singular Knox then stepped across the street to read the sign, 'Rummage sale Friday and Saturday under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society.'

Trying to decide whether or not to go in and browse his knowledge of the ways and means of workers in village churches...

He wanted to linger, and the only excuse he could find was to pretend to be looking for something.

'Do you have such a thing as a—' an antique picture frame with a—well, with a French print, perhaps?' he inquired, with hesitation.

'I'll see,' the girl said in a most charming manner. 'We have almost everything I think.'

'You're Gerry, you?' cried Florence Moore, catching her friend by the arm.

'Father,' Geraldine began, but Florence clapped her hand quickly over her mouth.

'I'll not even know nothing of it. I'll put in that picture you gave me. I can easily have another one.'

'I'd like the frame and I'd like the picture to put in it. I'm a stranger in the village. It's a fancy I've just taken.'

'He did not know how best to get in personal touch with the girl, it was a delicate situation, and he did not want to jeopardize his opportunities by plunging headlong into the wrong method of procedure.'

On the ferryboat a dapper beaver of its kind sat in the cabin. He picked it up and read it out of sheer curiosity.

'It is, indeed,' Sinclair said earnestly. 'And I'm the one to whom it has blown good today. Do you remember that I was to have another picture?'

'Never mind conventions,' the man interrupted. 'We'll just let me tell you and we'll spend friends,' he said.

But they were more than friends before they had really begun to know each other.

GOWNS MUST BE TRANSPARENT TO BE TRULY FASHIONABLE

The girl who finds herself in the midst of a most exacting social season, sartorially speaking, may feel the need of an extra afternoon gown when her fall wardrobe is over.

It is almost impossible to make use of the tulle, one-piece frock which Milady had for late summer and early fall wear.

Two shades of brown are featured in the little frock shown in today's illustration. The sheer material is of light, coffee-colored Georgette, with beaded sequettes at the shoulders in military style.

The wide skirt is made of golden-brown velvet, shot with color. A marvel of artistic design is seen in the skirt, which is fastened entirely of Georgette, with nicot-edged panels.

Did you know that nearly 500,000 birds are brought into this country every year, of which canaries, parrots, and game birds are the most numerous?

Mr. Caterpillar's Queer Plight

A nice, furry, brown and gold caterpillar crawled up toward the blossom on a goldenrod plant and settled himself down for a nap.

'This goldenrod is surely the nicest kind of flower there is,' he said to himself sleepily. 'I'm so glad I'm here!'

Now, it happens that folks admire goldenrod quite as much as do caterpillars, though, of course, Mr. Caterpillar would never have guessed that!

So it does not surprise you one bit to hear that soon after the caterpillar had finished his nap...

There's a funny place for a caterpillar, isn't it? He went to sleep a very nice little girl came riding by with her father and mother and saw that very stork of goldenrod.

Her father obligingly stopped his automobile and climbed out with the little girl and with his big knife helped her pick that goldenrod. Then they both climbed back into the automobile and rode on.

What became of the caterpillar? Just wait and see!

Now of course the little girl didn't know the caterpillar was sleeping on the under side of the goldenrod bloom though if she had been a very wise little girl she would have shaken it sharply before she picked it, just to be sure!

'I'll all of a sudden the automobile went over a jolty bit of road and the caterpillar waked up and stuck out his head to see what the trouble was. The...
