The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia was founded through the initiative of Mordecai Bawson Lewis, a widely known Quaker business man and philanthropist, of Philadelphia. It was in Mr. Lewis' home, at the southwest corner of 12th and Chestnut streets, upon the site now occupied by the Beneficial Savings Fund building, that the moneys for the hospital were originally sub-scribed early in 1855, Mr. Lewis donating the largest amount of the foundation

The original site was a purchased building at 408 Blight street, a small thoroughfare between Pine and Lombard streets, east of Broad street, the hospital opening its door to the poor sick children of Philadelphia on November 23, 1855. Within two years the adjoining building, No. 410, was added. For 12 years the hospital remained at this site, when it removed to its present quarters on 22d street, near Wainut. It has long since outgrown these quarters, and in the early winter of this year will be compelled to remove to the only completed building upon the new site at 18th and Bainbridge streets.

TOM' SMITH PILLORIED AT NOONDAY RALLIES

Assertions of Franklin Party Speakers Applauded at Three Meetings

Three noonday Franklin party rallies were held today at as many different points in Kensington before enthusiastic crowds that loudly cheered attacks on Thomas B. Smith, Republican candidate for the mayoralty: Senator Penrose, State Senator McNichol, John P. Connelly and the Vares.

One of the largest crowds assembled at Lehign avenue and B street, where 500 workers men and women from the John Bromley & Son lace mill, heard Dr. Harry P. Rhoads, Franklin party candidate for magistrate; C. O. Pratt, labor leader, and Palmer Watson, an attorney.

Meetings also were held by another squadron at the Surpass Leather Company's plant, 10th and Westmoreland streets, and at the Philadelphia Tapestry Mills, Mascher street and Allegheny avenue. In this squadron were William Biggerstaff, an attorney; Albert H. Coggins, former assistant city solicitor, and Rob-Bonner, Common Councilman from the 43d Ward.

SMITH RIDICULED. Thomas B. Smith was ridiculed at the Bromley meeting for challenging George D. Porter, Franklin party mayoralty candidate, to a public debate and then refus-ing to participate in it when Mr. Porter accepted the challenge.

"Smith made one big mistake," said
Palmer Watson. "It was a fatal error.
He challenged Mr. Porter to a debate without first asking permission from Dave Martin. After making the challenge he went to Dave, but the damage was done. went to Dave, but the damage was done. Dave was peeved. He gave the little office boy a scolding for not asking before he talked. The whole city is laughing at Smith. He is called Slient Smith. It should be Wishy Washy Smith."

FRENCH GAIN FOOT BY FOOT IN CHAMPAGNE

BERLIN, Oct. 26 .- The War Office today reported that German positions 250 yards long, north of Le Mesnil, in Champagne, which the French had captured on October 24, were retaken by the Germans.

PARIS, Oct. 26. The great battle in Champagne precipitated by the French assault resulting in the capture of the German defense work known as "La Courtine" still continued today. The War Office communique issued this afternoon characterized the conflict as one waged "foot by foot," and stated that the French troops had gained another trench. The text of the communique follows:

"The battle continues fost by foot in Champagne at the centre of the work of La Courtine with slight fluctuations. The obstinate resistance of our troops and their counter-offensive immediately shattered the counter-attacks made by the enemy (reported in last night's communique). 'A sharp attack to the northeast of Massiges made us masters of a German trench near the positions which we had recently captured."

TRENTON, Oct. 26.—"They just made up their minds that the work in their husbands' plant was not going to be held up," declared Clifford H. JE IS the humorist-humanist, The poet laureate of the Italian emigrant, the student of child life and the writer of verse that is born in the heart-upon whom many believe the mantle of Eugene Field has fallen.

To the everyday things of life Thomas Augustine Daly gives a touch that endows them with the Charm of the New.

And purely as a poet, his work undoubtedly ranks higher than that of most humorists, not excluding Eugene Field.

In the "Lyric Year" competition instituted by Mitchell Kennerly, the New York publisher, in which 10,000 poems were entered by 2000 poets, Mr. Daly's ode, "To a Thrush," was awarded the second prize of $250.

Recently Mrs. Katharine Typan-Hinkson, the famous Irish literary woman, made Mr. Daly the subject of a lecture, "The Poet of the Dago," before the National Literary Society of Dublin; and in the very learned "Dublin Quarterly Review" for July, 1914, W. M. Letts, another Irish poet, contributes a lengthy appreciation of the American poet, with many citations from his work.

In the fall of 1910, when Mr. Daly was the guest of the cities of Bristol and Exeter, in England, he was received with a degree of enthusiasm little short of that accorded to the late Mark Twain a few years before.
