(Note.—It is needless to say that only those still living were picked for this game, played immediately after the one promoted by old Doc Lardner, the celeorated Hinger.)

The Battle

Michigan won the toss, and promptly at 2 p. m. Coy licked off to Heston. The burly back came smashing onward is yards before he was flercely tackled by Shevlin and Kilpatrick together.

On the first play Weeks sent Heston around Yale's right end, where there was no one in the way except Shevlin. No main. On the next play Craig whirled out around left end, where there wasn't a soul left except Kilpatrick. No gain.

Hammond then punted to Rockwell, who was thrown heavily by Redden, Benbrook and Schulz. Much in sport that is charged to brain and skill is merely knack that has come without reason and no great amount of intelligent practice. from the day's gosely, along comes old Honus Wasner leading the shortstops, well beyond Maranville and Bancrott, brook and Schulz.

Play by Play

On the first play Rockwell sent Coy burtling through centre. The only thing that stopped Coy was 216 pounds of Germany Schulz. When the two collided the spectators thought a mine had been exploded at midfield. As it was, the game had to be stopped until a portion of the field had been replaced.
