

ILLUSTRATED Evening Ledger

WEDNESDAY
December 15, 1915

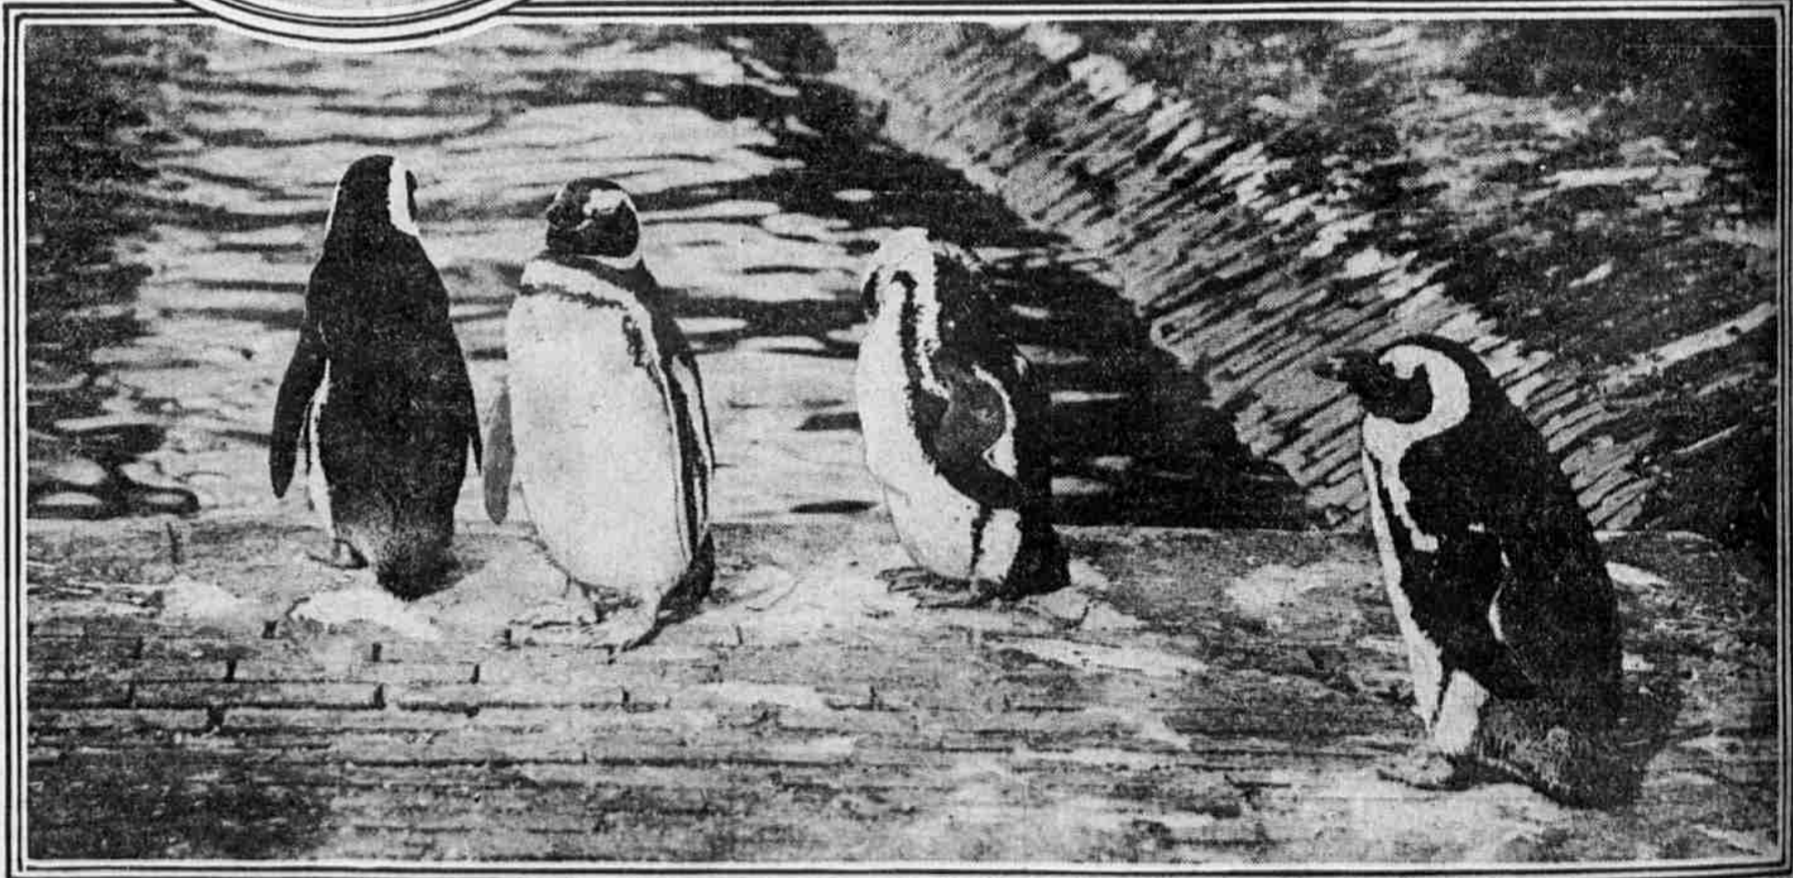

INTERESTING SIDELIGHTS OF A DAY'S NEWS GRAPHICALLY TOLD BY THE CAMERA

Photos by Walter Crall and Harry Hood.

THREE STUDIES IN ZOOLOGICAL EXPRESSION

"June," the lioness, is bored by the lack of excitement in Fairmount Park in the winter time; the lion-tailed monkey is irritable, but the phlegmatic hippo is merely pensive.

COLD WEATHER MAY BE DISAGREEABLE TO SOME PERSONS, BUT NOT TO THE HARDY OTTER OR THE MELANCHOLY PENGUIN

Perhaps you didn't know that there are otters in Fairmount Park, but here they are. Few persons ever see them, as they are of a retiring disposition and prefer fish to human beings. Otters become quite tame and may be trained to catch and retrieve fish. The penguins may look mournful as they stand around with drooping flippers, but to such Antarctic inhabitants cold toes are a trifle.

MAY BECOME BRITAIN'S QUEEN

Princess Marguerite, of Denmark, is reported to be betrothed to the young Prince of Wales, who, if he lives, will some day be monarch of the world's greatest empire.

THE MONSTER THAT LOOMS LARGE IN THE NEW PLANS FOR PREPAREDNESS

According to plans just announced by the War Department, 16-inch guns are to be used exclusively in all new coast defenses guarding the country's principal cities. This gun has just been shipped to the Sandy Hook proving grounds. So great was its weight that it spread the rails.

TWICE SAVED CAPITAL IN CIVIL WAR

James D. Gay foiled the Confederates who were planning to take Washington by great daring and clever ruses. He is now 85 years old and is almost destitute. He lives at 1518 Hazard street in this city.