Philip C. Lewis, of the Germantown ligh School, coach of the football team, suggested a plan by which teams taking part in interclass games should receive redits for advancing the ball to within 4 ertain distance of the goal and also for making good attempts to kick goals from the field when the ball falls short of the bar. His remarks on the subject have been favorably commented upon and the plan will undoubiedly be tried out at many of the schools next autumn.
