

THE BITTERNESS OF SWEETS

By RUPERT HUGHES

Little Mollie Finerman had just lost her job. It was not much of a job, but she was even less of a success...

The reporter had thought that Silver was making a fortune. The smart man had thought the stored-up money at the...

Silver had always been hungry. It was at this crisis in her soul that the sweet returned upon his steps and drawing...

She resumed her contemplation of the baker's paradise. She wept with craving.

A sniffling sob was set in half by a sudden remembrance of the world's "big money." His money meant big meals...

Mr. Brunl, seeing that she was wavering, pressed his case. "You come see my swallows, now—right here, huh?"

She found herself in a cave of gloom at whose farther end a Niagara of pictures was cascading.

SCRAPPLE

Husband (after smash)—Darling, something seems to tell me that in these times of national crisis we ought to make a sacrifice by—er—doing without the motor.

Too Proud to Fight?

The Sketch.

His Heirs

"Rich Mr. Brown married a widow with four children." "Gee whiz! He is fond of putting on heirs, isn't he?"

GOOD-NIGHT TALK

Dear Children—I am so busy getting ready for Christmas I will have to make my talk short. I am making it short because I know you haven't time to read what I write—I am considerate. Do you know what that word means?

—AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME

Do You Know This?

1. Correct the following: Jane gave my sister and I some books. 2. 1-6-7 spells row, 4-6-7 spells now, 5-3-4 spells bin, 1-2-4 spells ran. What does 1-2-3-4-5-6-7 spell? (Five credits.)

THE LEGEND OF SANTA CLAUS—Continued

The children ran to their homes and told the people of the North that Growly Grump had fallen in the street and the men and women ran to where he lay. They lifted him tenderly and took him to the nearest hut.

Then they went home.
