NANCY WYNNE WONDERS AT THE WORLD'S ATTITUDE NEW YEAR'S EVE

Many Gay Parties Will Take Place—Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Pepper Will Give Large Ball for Their Daughter and Niece—Mr. Heckscher's Costume Party

erene, think it absolutely essential to dance the Old Year out or to watch it out in some hilarious fashion, ofttimes quite foreign to their nature? But so the world wags on, and the last day of have been sent out. the year is ended by many in this most enseemly fashion. I know of numerous very young girls, not to mention many stald and respectable matrons, whose mothers gaze on placidly while their daughters imbibe champagne or the more deadly cocktail until when midnight arrives they, while not actually intoxicated, are very silly and slightly maudin in their behavior. And then, naturally, the next day they have that uncomfortable feeling with them; probably to this are due the many good resolutions which are annually made and as consistently broken.

to the George Wharton Peppers' ball tonight at the Bellevue-Stratford for Eleanor and their niece, Frances Scott. It is sure to be a success, for both girls are thoroughly well liked and will make charming hostesses. Frances Scott's mother is a sister of Mr. Pepper; she was Frances Pepper. Both Mrs. Pepper and Mrs. Scott will receive with the debutantes.

There will be a number of dinners before the dance. Mr. Willie Hopkins and his half sister, Miss Nellie Hopkins, who are as inseparable a pair as it is possible to find, will give a dinner for Rosamonde Fisher, and Aimee Hutchinson will entertain at dinner for Eleanor Cuyler, who is her cousin. Then the Alfred Clays will give a dinner for Emilio Kennedy; the J. Franklin McFaddens will also entertain, as will the William Townsend Wrights.

Then, too, Gee Heckscher's party will come off tonight, also at the Bellevuc-Stratford. This is to be a costume affair, and many and weird are the frocks that are to be worn. Most of the younger married folk will attend this party, and I hear Gee has planned all manner of surprises and spectacles for the magic hour of midnight. The Ned Crozers and Albert Francines will entertain at dinner before the dance.

Billie Welsh has come up for the Christmas holidays. You know he is the manager of the Bureau of Fisheries and became quite famous several years ago for discovering a bank of scallops in some unusual place. Billie is one of the best liked men in town, and every one is delighted to see his gental countenance and Apollo Belvederean physique in our midst.

It is rather pathetic, I think, in passing through Rittenhouse Square to see the tiny Christmas tree, all decorated with bells and balls, at the foot of Tom's grave. The man who guards the Oak Lane. No cards have been sent out. equare trimmed it there, for he says he can't get over Tommy's loss, over a year ago, how he wasted away before his very eyes; so every year he is going to dress the tiny tree in memory of the old cat which all the children loved so

Girls, be careful where you go to drive with the man of your heart and do not take the road which leads ment of their daughter, Miss Pauline Brinkman, to Mr. Edgar Wolf, a wellmantic the Wissahlckon may seem, for alas! there is a law which forbids spooning; and I hear one warm evening recently a lass and a lad were motoring through and stopped the car a moment on the drive to enjoy the view as the twilight was coming on, when up came the guard in his heartless, matter-of-fact way and said, "Move on,

So take warning and don't go into the park for a ride or a stroll unless you intend to keep moving all the time.

The Charles O'Donnell Lee, Jr.'s, who are occupying the Henry Pleasants' house at Wayne this year, have sent out cards for an eggnog party tomorrow, and as the Lees are from the picturesque Needwood Forest section of Maryland, a true Southern atmosphere will pervade the affair. The young matron will be assisted in receiving by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Lee, who will be remembered as Mary Harris, a niece of the Hartman Kuhns and a sister of Mrs. Charlie Boone.

Sarah Fisher's ball in Baltimore Tuesday night must have been quite a Wonderful party, to judge from the enthusiastic accounts of it that I have heard. They do not often have late parties in Baltimore, but when they do they are very good. There was quite a crowd of Philadelphians there, among them Jean Bochman, who was Miss Fisher's house guest; Sarah Franklin, Theodora Lillie, Roddy Wister, Bert Bell, Reggie Hutchinson, Elbert Dent, Henny Geyelin, Brooke and Ted Edwards, Johnny Scott, Charlie Wetter, Harry Adams, Fred Spencer and Houston Woodward. The Belvedere ballroom was beautifully decorated with flags, and Louis Fisher, who seems to be the Meyer Davis of Baltimore, kept two orchestras going all the time. Breakfast at a ball is a decided rarity in Baltimore, and 6 o'clock found aimost every one still going strong and thoroughly enjoying scrambled eggs, sausage and most delicious buckwheat cakes. Philadelphia is now doing its share of the entertaining, as Amy Robinson and Helen Whitridge came up for the Neilsons' and will remain for the Peppers, while Eleanor Carey, of tennis fame, and the two White sisters, Suzanne and Beckle (who, they say, is Baitimore's most popular debutante), also several boys, will come up today for the Peppers. In accordance with the custom of many years Haendel's classic oratoric was given annual performance last evening at the Academy of Music by the Cheral Seciety.

The reverential rendition of an authentic masterpiece which has its text and content in the slories of the Messianic correlive is spiritually worth while at any time when the form is a master-piece of musical art, and is extraordinar-ily worth while at the season of the Nativity, when it serves as the medium of the Choral Society's year-end per-
