

WILSON REPUDIATES MEXICO POLICY; NEW 'DOCTRINE' OUTLINED

President Now Opposes Equipping Revolutionists With Arms, Reversing Course on Carranza-Villa Rebellion

ADDRESS TO SCIENTISTS

The Wilson Policy of 1913; The Wilson Policy of 1915

President Wilson in 1913—Embargo on war munitions lifted, permitting the Carranza-Villa revolutionists of Mexico to equip themselves in the rebellion against the constituted Government of that country, headed by President Huerta.

President Wilson in 1915—Advocates guarantees that no country will allow revolutionary expeditions to be fitted out in its territory to move against another country, and that the shipment of munitions will be prohibited to the revolutionaries of neighboring nations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Metamorphosis of the Monroe Doctrine impends, if the declarations of President Wilson before the Pan-American Scientific Congress are accepted by the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

It is recalled that, in 1913, the President lifted the embargo on arms, imposed by President Taft, against the Carranza-Villa revolution in Mexico against the then-President, Victoriano Huerta, might be equipped.

The President's open declaration that while the Monroe Doctrine exclusively was the affair of the United States, a general agreement should be reached supplementing it to provide for pacific handling of all matters affecting the nations of this continent was accepted as the proclamation of a new American policy which may have a far-reaching effect on the future of every nation of the Western Hemisphere.

THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN

Summed up, the President's suggestions provide: That the United States and Latin-America will guarantee to each nation territorial integrity and political independence.

That all pending disputes shall be settled by arbitration.

That a general plan of arbitration, to affect any difficulty that may arise, shall be provided for by treaty as soon as possible.

That no revolutionary expeditions shall be permitted to be outfitted in one nation to proceed against another.

That the Monroe Doctrine shall be maintained, but that it will be supplemented by this Government's promise that its power will not be used to coerce any other American nation.

It is expected that the suggestions made will be worked out in the form of treaties with the various nations along the line of the so-called Bryan peace treaties now in force.

FEAR OF EMBARGO

The only suggestion which Senators were criticized today was that referring to munitions shipments. Carried out to the limit suggested, it would result in an embargo on munitions shipments on this hemisphere.

G. ALBERT LEWIS, ARTIST, LEAVES ESTATE OF $125,000

Property Left to Children—Other Wills Probated

The will of G. Albert Lewis, 1321 Delancey place, artist and at one time a figure in the city's financial circles, was admitted to probate today.

George Draper Lewis, a grandson, receives a collection of seal rings, coat-of-arms, coins, medals, music and manuscripts containing a history of the Lewis family.

Other wills probated today were those of Henry C. Harvey, 647 Germantown avenue, which in private bequests disposed of an estate valued at $6500; Mary A. Murphy, 2112 Delancey street, $4750; Emilie Rieger, 1855 North Marston street, $500; Louisa Mauter, 223 East Dupont street, $250; Elizabeth Clark, 624 21st street, Germantown, $2000, and Ellen O'Keefe, 614 North 28th street, $2500.

BUSINESS CLUB TO BANQUET

Compensation Act and Child Labor to Be Discussed Tonight

The Business Science Club of Philadelphia will hold a reception tonight at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, followed by a dinner.

Prof. Francis H. Bohlen, of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, and former of the compensation act, will talk about the administrative features of the bill and the duties, requirements and privileges of both employer and employee.

Two Held for Bohm Killing

Two men today were held without bail by Coroner Knight to await the action of the Grand Jury on suspicion of having caused the death of Charles Bohm, 43 years old, 106 Deal street, Frankford. Bohm was held up and beaten so seriously that he died on December 28. The suspects are William H. Dawson, 39 years old, 2221 South Franklin street, and James P. Smith, 272 Frankford avenue. The men are accused by Charles Haas, Bohm's neighbor, who was with him at the time of the killing.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION FORCES ON AGGRESSIVE IN PUSHING THEIR FIGHT

Representative Webb Seeks Right of Way for His "Dry" Resolution in the House

EAGER FOR EARLY VOTE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Immediate action in the House on an amendment to the Federal Constitution for national prohibition was sought today by Representative Webb of North Carolina, author of the "official" dry resolution.

An attempt to force the fight for prohibition has been described today by the dry forces. The dry resolution introduced by Representative Webb was referred to the Judiciary Committee, of which Webb is chairman.

Two books of verse recently received show the widely divergent forms poetry may take. "If Love Were King," by Dr. Edward Willard Watson, of Philadelphia, Pa., Fisher & Co., Philadelphia, has the real poetic feeling, but does not attempt to state any definite philosophy.

Richard Wightman, on the other hand, in "Ashes and Sparks" (The Century Company, New York), has less of the poet's expression. His verse, to borrow the title, is mostly ashes, with a few sparks.

"Friendship, Love and Marriage," by Edward Howard Briggs (B. W. Huebner, New York), is a little book that is worthy the attention of all persons who believe in any or all of the three.

"Travel in Alaska" (Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston). John Muir's posthumous book, is the chronicle of the "wanderer with a medicinal predilection" than John Muir was oppositely in large and fine amplitude of devoutness to the serene lineaments of nature's countenance.

The present volume contains the account of his journey of 1879-1880, and 1890, covering the prime of his active career as an alpinist. The glacial quests, the scientific researches into cleavages and the rock which the aurora, the stupor, the marvels of the auroras and the visions of nature seen by her rapt communicants—all these are in the transcript of his redoubtable years of toil and attainment. Valuable as the book is as a contribution to the physiography of our northern possessions, it is even more vital because it lifts the spirit of the reader to the heights.

The last volume of the Little Princess series for girls, which begins when Alice Cleveland Higgins presented her "Little Princess of Tonahap," is recently published under the title, "A Little Princess of the Stars and Stripes" (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

RARE SATIRE FOUND AMONG HOST OF WINTER VOLUMES

Freeman Tilden Gathers Delightful Short Stories Into "That Night"

OTHER TIMELY BOOKS

At last a real satirist! The publisher who induced Freeman Tilden to compile a volume, "That Night," has a less than a vote of thanks. Of course, Freeman Tilden is not a new author; his works have appeared in magazines for several years.

Two books of verse recently received show the widely divergent forms poetry may take. "If Love Were King," by Dr. Edward Willard Watson, of Philadelphia, Pa., Fisher & Co., Philadelphia, has the real poetic feeling, but does not attempt to state any definite philosophy.

Richard Wightman, on the other hand, in "Ashes and Sparks" (The Century Company, New York), has less of the poet's expression. His verse, to borrow the title, is mostly ashes, with a few sparks.

"Friendship, Love and Marriage," by Edward Howard Briggs (B. W. Huebner, New York), is a little book that is worthy the attention of all persons who believe in any or all of the three.

"Travel in Alaska" (Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston). John Muir's posthumous book, is the chronicle of the "wanderer with a medicinal predilection" than John Muir was oppositely in large and fine amplitude of devoutness to the serene lineaments of nature's countenance.

The present volume contains the account of his journey of 1879-1880, and 1890, covering the prime of his active career as an alpinist. The glacial quests, the scientific researches into cleavages and the rock which the aurora, the stupor, the marvels of the auroras and the visions of nature seen by her rapt communicants—all these are in the transcript of his redoubtable years of toil and attainment.

Valuable as the book is as a contribution to the physiography of our northern possessions, it is even more vital because it lifts the spirit of the reader to the heights.

The last volume of the Little Princess series for girls, which begins when Alice Cleveland Higgins presented her "Little Princess of Tonahap," is recently published under the title, "A Little Princess of the Stars and Stripes" (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia).

Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

INSCRIPTION FOUND IN BOTTLE BURIED IN INDEPENDENCE SQUARE

This little cat was for six years my very much loved friend and comforter. Deal gently with her, you who find her bones.

This piece of writing was discovered 18 feet underground, but there was no sign of the bones referred to.

ETHEL BARRYMORE ALLIED WITH FERBER

"Emma McChesney" Does Nicely in Drama Form—Other Book Notes

When it comes to a really fashionable audience in New York, Miss Ethel Barrymore, who is now acting as Emma McChesney, is the most powerful magnet of the day.

The many readers of "Dear Enemy" and "Daddy Long Legs" will be interested to hear that the author, Jean Webster, has publicly avowed that the interest in orphan asylums displayed in these two books is not merely a literary interest, but a real passion.

The identity of Ian Hay, author of "Scally," "A Knight on Wheels," "A Safety Match," etc., is announced by his American publishers, Houghton-Mifflin Company. He is Captain Ian Hay Beth of the 10th Battalion of Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

"Divil we have been busy with the Boosh during the last three weeks. Our division led the way to action on September 23, and was in it for three days and nights, after which they took us out for a rest and sent another division in. You can imagine we were pretty well reduced in numbers by the time we came out, but the men behaved splendidly, and were thanked by their corps commander for what they had done.

The fifth of "The Boy Scout Series" of tales from the pen of Thornton W. Burgess has been issued (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). The narrative deals with the adventures of Walter Upton and his two friends, who spend a winter vacation in the forest with Malone, a young woodman, as guide.

The earlier period of our country's history, the days when the Creek Indians were behaving with embarrassing frankness in their incursions into the backwoods territory, forms the background for the tale of the early life of Andrew Jackson, in a volume for boys which the author, John T. McIntyre, has titled simply, "On the Border." With Andrew Jackson as the hero, the story is told in a simple, straightforward manner, as a guide to the young reader.

It is interesting to note that "Freckles," "The Rocky Mountain Wanderland," has just been issued in raised print type for the blind in England, where it will be especially appreciated by the blind soldiers and sailors.

Enos Mills, who has described the beauties of Western America so vividly in "The Rocky Mountain Wanderland," is lecturing now in the East, expounding the familiar slogan "See America First," with the equally pertinent "Get America First." There are 14 national parks, areas which have been set aside as national reserves by the United States," said Mr. Mills.

The last volume of the Little Princess series for girls, which begins when Alice Cleveland Higgins presented her "Little Princess of Tonahap," is recently published under the title, "A Little Princess of the Stars and Stripes" (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

"Nancy Lee's Lookout," Margaret Ward's fourth volume of this interesting series, brings the little reader to Nancy's new home on the seashore, where the little girl breaks her ankle and is prevented from participating in the sports of the other children.

The volume is packed with her playmates (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia). Jean Kingsley, the little heroine, becomes a "Flower Doctor" and creates gardens out of back yards and rubbish heaps.

CAT'S NOBLE SEPULCHRE LOCATED BY WORKMEN

Letter, Found Deep in Independence Square, Asks Gentle Handling of Bones

It may have been a century ago, but the owner decided to make sure that the bones should be handled gently. He had a premonition that the bones would become visible at some future time.

Therefore, when the cat was buried, a message, written in ink on white paper and placed in a little bottle, with the message, which speaks of the cat's "very grave beloved friend," was placed in the bottle with the bones.

For several days Francis E. Marney, a paving and concrete contractor, at Sanson street, had a squad of men digging in Independence Square, where the concrete walk is to be constructed in the place where the cat was buried.

The message in the bottle read as follows: "This little cat was for six years my very much loved friend and comforter. Deal gently with her, you who find her bones."

After the message was read by the Markland and his workmen a search was made for the bones. In the concrete was not in the grave. Instead, a set of old United States coins, some of the date 1860, were found near the spot.

"It must have been," said a little boy who was walking through Independence square and who took a "peep" into the excavation where the bottle was found.

MAYOR VISITS BYBERRY

Examines Plans for Installation Heating Plant

Mayor Smith, accompanied by Director Krusen, of Health and Charities; Director Damesman, of Public Works, and Assistant Philip H. Johnson, this morning made a tour of inspection of the farms at Byberry.

The Mayor had a two-fold object in mind. He not only wanted to inspect the heating plant, but also to see the power plant designed by Architect Johnson. The power plant, which would relieve the congestion at Byberry as it would make possible the buildings erected, but not heated, is estimated that 500 additional families could be housed if the extension of the present heating plant is approved.

HALLAHAN'S A Sale of Women's Shoes At 1/3 Less than Usual Prices

$5.00 Bronze Kid Shoes Buttoned or laced, the best style in shape and making for immediate wear. 1200 pairs that should have arrived in time for December selling. On Sale Saturday Morning (All sizes and widths)

P. T. HALLAHAN 919-921 MARKET STREET

Published Today Robert H. McLaughlin's great emotional novel, dramatically setting forth in lines of fearless realism a question that confronts every citizen, a question that none dare overlook—presenting a problem of vital import to every man, and which cannot be of indifference to any woman.

THE ETHERNAL WAGDALENE A story of power and insight, as fine in its handling as subtle in its implications, as it is strong and daring in its theme. It is neither sensation nor romance—its drama is that of real life, honestly portrayed; its poetic element springs from the depths of human hearts. It is a book which demands the attention alike of thoughtful people and of the lovers of forceful, realistic fiction.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY, New York

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW A Brief Analysis by WM. A. SCHNADER, Esq. Now Ready for Distribution

MANN & DILKS 1102 CHESTNUT STREET Tyrol Wool Ladies' and Misses' Sport Suits Street Suits Skating Suits $18.50 $22.50 $25.50 Top Coat $21.50