Parisian Financial Expert Discusses Difficulties of the Moratorium

CHECK SCARCITY NOTED

Income Tax Criticised for Tendency to Withdraw Deposits From Banks

By YVES GUYOT Minister of Public Works, Editor L'Agenca Economique et Financiere.

By Cable to the Evening Ledger Jan. 18.-I have spoken of plans have been discussed for assuring resources necessary until the end of

One of the reasons it is necessary to have of the reasons it is necessary to have such a large amount in banknotes a the small use made of checks in france. The French people do not know france. The French people do not know have to use checks, and the plan for an accome tax, instead of making the use of checks more general, restrains it. Many persons, thinking the Government than a persons to the control of the co any persons and the number of decisions and in the course of the year, withdraw their accounts from banks and hire safe-deposit vanits, where they will keep their money, thus withdrawing from circulation large sums which must be replaced by new issues of banknotes. The question of the moratorium is almays under discussion, and that of the moratorium for renters of houses and spariments is particularly acute in Paris. The small renters having refused to pay, the large ones follow their example unthe large one pretext or another. The provision that no one called to the colors can be dispossessed before the end of the war has been greatly extended, and many renters say to proprietors, "We prefer to put our money into Government bonds, which will bring us interest."

All expect that at the end of the war the State will intervene to regulate the debts of renters and indemnify proprilarelle, member of the Chamber of popules, made a pig hit because he made them that promise. At a meeting of proprietors, M.

Promises of that kind cost nothing to these who make them and bring only deception to those who believe. But the entality of men who can take such a mentality of men who can take such a proposition seriously proves, the definition of Bastiat always exact: "A State is a great fiction through which each would great the expense of all others."

COFFEE MARKET QUIET

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Trading in the fe market continued quiet today with the changes narrow and unimportant. Underlyin, sentiment was a little more barish owing to the continued decline in Rio Grande, which was thought to indicate a poor trade with Europe and in evidences that Brazil is trying to sell office here at concessions.

There was a rumor that a steamship which had been chartered to carry coffee man Brazil to Scandinavia has been cancied and that the steamer will bring taffee to New Orleans instead.

PROSPERITY IS RISING AND SO ARE PRICES, SAYS HARDWARE MERCHANT

F. J. Semple, Vice President of Simmons Hardware Co., Predicts Wonderful Year-Why the Price of Silks Is Rising Explained-More Conventions Coming

"There is one thing I can't understand." he said. "and that is, how this wave of prosperity seems to have swept all over the country, and yet we find it has not yet reached the little dealer in the country town.

"I can't figure, for instance, why we should be told by dealers in such places as Bethiehem, where every one seems to be making money day and night, that collections are slow. And Bethlehem is not the only instance. We get it from other prosperous places, where ammunition is being manufactured. But about prices going up. There's a telegram just came in asking us not to make any more quotations on certain bits and drills as they had gone up 40 per cent. The fact of the matter is, high-grade steels are not only selling at a premium, but they are getting scarce. The demand for cutting steels, for machines for these munition plants and for many of the munitions, as well, has created almost a famine. Then the men who were experts in the manufacture of these steels went over to "I can't figure, for instance, why we manufacture of these steels went over to the ammunition plants for better wages.

"Nails," continued Mr. Semple, higher, but they are not high enough. I have figured out that the same weight of steel ingot or steel rod that goes into the manufacture of a keg of nails would bring more on the market today at pres-ent prices than the nails. The key costs steel company 14 cents, so I deduct that from the price and I can't see why it pays to through the three operations necessary to make the nails, when the necessary to make the nails, whe raw material, as you may call it, more than the manufactured article. export to every country in the world," said Mr. Semple, "and we see a big year ahead of us."

Velvet Ribbons Scarce

"We don't import much in the way of ribbons," said L. E. Chapman, of Bowen Dungan Company, wholesale dealers in ribbons, velvets and millinery. "Velvet ribbons come principally from the neigh-borhood of Lyons, France, and they are very scarce. There was an unprecedent very scarce. There was an unprecedented demand for them last year, and every dealer was cleaned out. We are expecting a similar demand this year, and are prepared for it. Most of our silk ribbons are made in this country in Paterson, N. J., and all over Pennsylvania. In broad eliks for dresses prices are going up. The demand for silk symmetry. going up. The demand for silk garments of every description in the United States is enormous. A few years ago silk un-derwear for ladies was a luxury only thought of by multimillionaires. Today silk underwear is almost common. Look at the young women going to work and show me one who is not wearing silk stockings. Silk for dresses never was n such demand, and the prices for raw silk are getting higher and higher. Personally, I believe there is some manipulation of the raw silk supply. As for arti-

Swiss cheese, in fact, every kind of imported cheese is advancing rapidly in price, and some kinds are not to be had at any price, according to Thomas Mar-tindale, of Thomas Martindale & Co., 10th and Market streets.

"Norweglan cheese cannot be bought today," said Mr. Martindale. "Requefort has advanced and is going up, and Bric is very scarce

"There has been an unusual demand this year for high-grade dried fruits and the quality is unusually good. Prunes long ago only came from France, Serbia and Bulgaria. We still get them from France, but none is coming from either Serbia or Bulgarla. The supply now comes mainly from California, where the crop has been unusually good this year.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.-In the market for outside securities today speculation was on a somewhat lighter scale, although at the outset strength developed on repurchases by those who were partly in-strumental in causing the upward turn yesterday. Around midday, however, considerable realizing set in, which brought about a sharp reaction, especially in the high-priced issues. Midvale Steel, after selling up to 72, declined 115 points. # A. V. JOHNSON DEAD; FAMOUS 'MOVIE' STAR MADE MILLIONS LAUGH

Death Claims Popular Actor After Several Months' Illness That Followed Nervous Breakdown

GREAT LOSS TO LUBIN'S

Tribute in Verse to Arthur V. Johnson

The curtain falls upon the play No more to rise in song. The last strain of a symphony Is lost in the weeping throng.

The calcium darkens on the screen. No more to brighten hearts. The master hand of a master craft Is lost to stage-set marts.

But the spirit still remains in song As the calcium dims its light. I hear the weeping throng all sob, O! master hand, good-night!
--Henry Malcolm Baker, 1916.

Arthur V. Johnson, "movie" star, made millions laugh and weep, is dead.

His final exit removes one of the most popular actors in the world of allent drama. But death will not remove him from the photoplay stage. While rela-tives and friends are mourning the actor's loss today at his home, 1711 Spring den street, he is entertaining multitudes in every nook and corner of the world where moving pictures are known.

The last scene of his eventful life was enacted as he wished it to be-quietly enacted as he wished it to be-ducks. His mother, Mrs. M. A. Johnson, was summoned from her home at Northampton, Mass., a few days ago and watched him night and day. Just a few minutes yesterday, when he seemed especially cheorful, she left him. When she returned to his bedside he was dead.

His collapse was due to a nervous breakdown brought on by overwork. He was ill for several months. News of Mr. Johnson's death came a great blow to the officials of the Lu-bin Company, who regarded him as their own particular son. Sigmund Lubin dis-covered his worth when he was playing unfeatured roles for other companies, and the "movie" star soon proved that the local producer was right. At the studio, street and Indiana avenue, Mr. Johnson was a familiar figure, all was quiet today. A feeling of gloom permented the various stages in this world of romance. The actors could not put their hearts into the work. The "ex-tra" boy, who was simply a part of the "atmosphere." as well as the other stars, all knew the departed actor intimately,

MADE MILLIONS LAUGH. His eyes alone frequently teld as much as the entire story. He made an audience laugh by the mere elevation of his eye-brows. The artistic touch was apparent in his liveliest comedy as well as in his most romantic dramas.

He sat on a chair with the unconscious grace of a Chesterfield. When he kissed a woman's hand it was like a chapter in history. It was a treat to see him enter and leave a room. He gave his hat and cane to a servant like a lord of the manor. His frown was a barrier and tell was a barrier and his order to a burner would be order to a burner. against intimacy and his order to a hire-ling was a command from an emperor. The spirit of romance radiated from his entire being, and it is small wonder that dominated every scene in which he

Evidence that his memory will be perpetuated is already forthcoming. The Lubin Company was besieged today for pletures of any kind in which he has appeared. It is figured that the public will be more eager than ever to see the man who has been their prime favorite for many years.

In speaking of the f mous s ovie actor. Mr. Lubin suid:

Mr. Johnson unquestionably held a unique place as a producer and an actor. He stamped the impress of his art on every photoplay he filmed for the Lubin Company. He could handle a delicate, complex situation with surpassing skill, and the next instant attain a climax with almost terrifying strength and passion. almost terrifying strength and passion. There was an ever-present virility and certainty of expression in a Johnson photoplay. There were never any slurred moments nor did he ever sink to the maudlin nor resort to the grossly sensational for his appeal; yet he projected his message unfailingly. This may explain why a woman, unable to read the captions well, declared that it didn't make any difference when the his man acted.

any difference when the big man acted.

"Mr. Johnson was prodigal with his time and patience when working. It was not an uncommon sight for him to devote 30 minute: to continuous repetitions of a bit of business which an 'extra' could not grass, rather than speak could not grasp, rather than speak bluntly to the beginner. It was this con-sideration of others which endeared him to the runk and file of Lubin workers. He had an inimitable sense of humor, which was almost impossible to record." BORN IN IOWA.

Mr. Johnson was 39 years old. He was Mr. Johnson was 39 years old. He was born in Davenport, Jowa. He ran away from college at the age of 19 and joined a traveling company which was producing Shakesperean plays. Then he drifted to the romantic drama, playing with Sol Smith Russell; Robert H. He responded to the call of the "movies" about seven years ago, and joined the Blograph Company under the direction of D. W. Griffith. He played opposite to Lillian Walker, Mary Pick-ford, Henry B.
