

NANCY WYNNE TALKS WITH KINDLY INTENT ON SOCIETY'S DOINGS

Large Ball Will Be Given This Evening for Miss Elizabeth Cushing Norris by Her Grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Dobson—Other Matters of Interest

LISA NORRIS will be the feted debut tonight, when her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Dobson, will give a ball at the Ritz-Carlton for her. Lisa is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Norris, of Chestnut avenue, Chestnut Hill. Her mother was Maria Dobson, called by her family and intimates "Baby." She is one of the five Dobson sisters, who are so remarkable for their smart clothes and extreme good looks. It is an odd thing in the Dobson family how for three generations two brothers married two sisters or vice versa. Mr. James Dobson and the late Mr. John Dobson married two sisters. Then Sarah and Maria Dobson, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Dobson, married the two Norris men, John and Dick, and in the third generation the two Jeffries girls, Mary and Amanda, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jackson Jeffries (the latter was Mary Dobson), married two Rosengarten men. Speaking of Mrs. Jeffries, I do think she is one of the very smartest and best gowned women in this town. I have never seen her but she is in the very last word for frocks or hats, and she is so good looking.

Lisa is having a wonderful time this winter and quite upholds her end of the family reputation for smart gowns and general attractiveness. She wore the loveliest frock at the Assembly, fashioned of flesh-colored chiffon and tulle and trimmed with tiny roses. At another ball she was gowned in a wonderful frock of cloth of gold.

Tonight her mother will, of course, assist in receiving, and all the good-looking aunts will be there—Mrs. Jeffries, Mrs. Dick Norris, Mrs. B. Dobson, Mrs. Arthur Spencer. I remember hearing a funny story once about Lisa and Pauline Diston, they both lived in Chestnut Hill at the time, I believe, and both had French nurses, so their English conversation was slightly mixed with strange French turns. Lisa had been to a party (she was about 5 years old then and Pauline 6) and, as often happens to small children, the party did not agree with Lisa and she was quite ill. Pauline went to see her and on returning home was asked: "How is Lisa?" "Oh," said Pauline, "she is all right; it is only—what you call it—an attack of bill." So biliousness was for a long time known by that name—in the Diston menage anyway.

The Lewis Neilsens will entertain at dinner before the ball for Elizabeth Griffith and the Howard Pancoats for Gertrude. Rachel Fitter will be given a dinner by Mrs. Washington Gilpin and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Grey will also give a dinner.

Certain it is that the huge bronze horses guarding the stately entrance to the Pennsylvania Museum in Fairmount Park have not for many years witnessed a scene such as yesterday's, for from 3 o'clock until after dusk motor after motor rolled up and deposited their precious burdens on the steps, where, if they were of sufficient importance and at all good-natured, they were subjected to a battery of cameras, and when the Stotesburys arrived it was amusing to see the rush which these same photographers made for them—they are so used to it I suppose that they are always quite resigned while a dozen shutters are clicked in their faces. Mrs. Stotesbury, who was the leading representative of the Americanization Committee in this city, wore a superb wrap of chinchilla which reached to her feet. Inside the hall the peace and quiet of the Egyptian mummies and the ancient Chinese gods were rudely disturbed by the chatter of many voices and the tinkle of tea cups. I saw quite the most amusing incident in the improvised tea room at one end of the large hall, when Mrs. James Francis Sullivan and Mrs. Samuel Meagher Wright came face to face, each wearing a hat the counterpart of the other's. The first moment of silence and consternation was followed by good-natured chaffing on the part of the ladies, one leaving the other with the rather paradoxical come-back—"Well, it serves you quite right, my dear, for going to New York to procure your hats!" As both women are extremely well groomed and wear the smartest clothes imaginable, the situation was most amusing. Any number of smart people were there, including the Towers, the Leas, the Coxes, the Boyers, the Gowens, the Stokowskis, the Deuners, Mrs. Converse, Mrs. Groome, Mrs. Tom Robins, Mrs. Scull, Mrs. Hartman Kuhn, Mrs. Leland Harrison, Mrs. Charlie Harrison, Mrs. Struthers, Mrs. Beath and Mrs. Standley Stokes.

The Wednesday Music Club held its first meeting yesterday afternoon at the Clifford Lewis' home at 39 South 25th street. I don't know any house better suited for receptions and musicales than this one, which belongs to Mrs. Clifford Vaughan. You know Mrs. Vaughan is Eleanor Lewis, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lewis, though she had several brothers. Her uncle, Mr. Edmund Lewis, was a wonderful collector of rare tapestries, paintings and curios. At his death some years ago he willed the house and all its contents to Eleanor, who had in the meantime married Clifford Vaughan and gone to New York to live, so she has asked her parents to live there, and she comes on very often to visit them. It is a large double house and has a wonderful art room and gallery. The Clifford Lewis' son David and his wife, the latter was Lena Green, live in the house next door. Another son, Clifford, Jr., married and lives in New York State.

The musicale yesterday afternoon was very fine. Mrs. William Hutton Greene sang and so did Miss Elizabeth Dickson, of Wilkes-Barre. Mr. Newell Albright, of Harrisburg, played and the Schmidt quartet, headed by Mr. Paul Schmidt, gave several selections. Mrs. Letitia Madeline accompanied and Mr. Clifford Vaughan also performed on the piano. Many of the foremost women in town who are interested in music belong to this club. This year Mrs. Luther Conrad is chairman and the other committee members include Mrs. A. J. Dallas Dixon, Mrs. Russell Duane, Mrs. Herbert Everett, Mrs. Henry B. Thompson, of Wilmington; Mrs. Clifford Lewis, Mrs. Robert Emmott Hare, Mrs. Austin S. Heckscher, Mrs. Harold Yarnall, Mrs. Charles Wood, Miss Nina Len and Mrs. Greene. Mrs. Abram H. Wintersteen is president of the club.
