NANCY WYNNE GOSSIPS ABOUT THE DAY'S DOINGS IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury Will Give a Large Dansant This Afternoon to Introduce Their Daughter-in-law, Mrs. Oliver Eaton Cromwell

r COURSE every one is looking mally at luncheon on Wednesday at her home in St. David's. forward to the dansant which Mrs. Stotesbury will give for her daughterheld last night in the Rose Gardens of the Bellevue-Stratford, and was very enjoyable, though a number of the members have gone "up North" and "down South." It is pleasant to have some of the subscription affairs stick to the old cotillon, for the various figures make a diversion in the evening's dancing, and even though not spurred on to success by attaching numerous favors, as there are none at the Cinderellas, still it is something different, and that means a great deal. We go to parties and we one-step and fox-trot and waitz and even maxixe a bit; and, too, we go again and again and do it ever and over and enjoy it, but still we all like a change. The Cinderellas are about the smartest subscription affairs after the Assembly, which, of course, stands alone. They are distinctive in that no debs are asked, and they begin early and end at midnight, which is a soon for the business man. The Craig Biddles entertained at dinner last night before the cotillon, and the Stewart Wurts gave a dinner

The death of Mrs. D. Leeds Miller at her home in Haverford on Monday east the shadow of a great sorrow on her family and friends. Mrs. Miller, who was a cousin of Mrs. Clement A. Griscom, was widely known in this city and greatly loved as well. She leaves three daughters, all of whom are married. The eldest is Mrs. Fillebrown, who lives at Paoli, and with Mrs. Meredith has a small tearoom there and also all sorts of odds and ends which are curious or unusual

Mrs. Miller herself ran a delightful tearoom in Bryn Mawr, and her daughter Isobel, who married Steve Morris, has been actively engaged in moving picture work. The youngest daughter. Nellie Miller, married Charles D. Carey, of Wyoming. Mrs. Miller had the respect of many people for the way in which she took up her widowed life, and, having been left with very little of this world's goods, set about to support her family with great bravery and success.

The Ritz was gay with luncheon partles yesterday afternoon, but quite the most noticeable was that given by Mr. htes-Dumont for Frances and Leta Sullivan and Gladys and Robert Hinckley, of Washington. The table was delightfully decorated with spring flowers, and rather an interesting feature of the menu was the "Pommes Santos-Dumont," which were sent to the table as a reminder of the days when Mr. Santos-Dument began his career in aviation. So popular was he in Paris at that time that the maitre d'hotel in one of the smartest restaurants evolved a "souffle" which was known as the "Pommes Santos-Dumont," and which resembled an airship in shape. The noted aviator was delightfully surprised when the familiar dish was sent to his table.

It was rather amusing to note the expression on the faces of all the party after luncheon, when they reached their notor to find themselves facing a battery of cameras, but Mr. Santos-Dumont after a slight frown bowed courfeously to the photographers, and stood smiling while they snapped him, the rest of the party scurrying into the car for protection.

Others who lunched at the Ritz were Mrs. Craig Biddle, who was smartly sowned in black broadcloth and beaver; the Tom Ridgways, who were with Mrs. William Donner; Harry Tucker and Melliam Donner: Harry Tucker and Merlon, will be the sololat.

Merlon, will be the sololat.
