Tony, you know, is no respecter of classes." He is the absolutely original social democrat, and he is just as happy apparently-even more so perhaps-when he's chatting with a handful of men on some slum mission as he is at a debutante reception or afternoon tea around Rittenhouse afternoon tea around Rittenhouse Square. Thursday night Tony talked religion to several hundred workmen, and when he finished he sat down with some of them and listened to their sorrows as well as their Joys. It was rather warm at the works when the the works will be used the colors will be used the colors of the works will be used to the colors of the works Rev. J. W. Howard Gray, of Wilmington, opened the meeting, so the powder workers simply divested themselves of their coats, rolled up their sleeves and sat back in apparent contentment to hear Tony expound Biblical doctrines and tell just how to walk the path of rectitude; and he handed out some knockout truths a la Billy Sunday, let me tell you, and what is more they undoubtedly struck home, for when he finished there were shouts of "Hand 'em out some more, Tony"-"That's the boy," and "Right-o." Combining the spiritual with the physical, as he usually does, our strenuous friend offered to put on the gloves with any of them, but no one volunteered. apparently deciding it were best to take his word for his prowess. At any rate when the meeting came to a close the men shouted themselves hoarse for Tony and voted him the most popular visitor to the Point since the war
