

ILLUSTRATED Evening Ledger

MONDAY
January 31, 1916

SIDELIGHTS ON THE NEWS OF THE DAY AS GATHERED BY THE EVER-PRESENT CAMERA MAN

SOCIETY MAN JUMPS HORSE OVER AUTOMOBILE TO DECIDE WAGER
To give proofs of his mount's ability, Ralph Coffin, a Washington (D. C.) horseman, accomplished this feat while Miss Edith Hitchcock, Mrs. Scott Bowen, Miss Edith Howard and John Allen sat in the machine and acted as witnesses.

CHILDREN OF PUBLIC SCHOOL FORCED TO TAKE RECESS PERIODS
Because a schoolyard has never been provided for the Campbell School, at 8th and Fitzwater streets, its pupils must take to the open streets at recess periods, where they are exposed to all the dangers that street life entails. Repeated efforts of the school heads to have this condition remedied have been in vain.

BAN REMOVED BY DEATH: TWIN GIRLS CAN NOW SPEAK TO THE MALE SEX
The Misses Genevieve and Cordelia Chaney, of Joliet, Ill., promised their father they would not speak to a man during his lifetime. His death has left them wealthy, and it is now reported they are having a "party" every night in the week.

THE LU LU PATROL TO BE SEEN IN ACTION TONIGHT
One of the features of the winter circus, which is to open in Convention Hall tonight, will be the appearance of this noted body of uniformed Shriners, whose drilling has earned them country-wide fame.

BULGARIANS COUNT THEIR DEAD AFTER A BATTLE WITH THE FRENCH IN THE DRIVE ACROSS SERBIA
The soldiers of Czar Ferdinand encountered little serious opposition in their sweep across southern Serbia till they met the French expedition, composed in large part of veteran soldiers. At Mitrovitza the quick-firing light artillery from overseas played havoc in their ranks and after the combat the field was quickly sown with fallen men.