

EVERY ONE DRINKS BUT THE MAN

Perhaps that is why Lewis J. Cody looks so peevish. The fact that his friends are Lillian Lorraine, Lucy Blake and Dorothy Dalton and that they have just finished a scene for "Neal of the Navy" (Pathe-Balboa) certainly ought to induce another cast of countenance.

THE PHOTOPLAY MAN-ABOUT-TOWN

Every Saturday and here and there through the week, the Famous Players Photoplay Man-About-Town, which is the most fun about the personalities behind the neighborhood theatres and the shows.

Realizing that she might never be able to again visit this country, Sarah Bernhardt consented to act before the camera, in order that a record might be kept of her work.

Blaise Janis, in "The Caprice of Kitty," which will be at the Frankford Thursday, has a little cottage in Columbus, O., where she spends her summer vacations.

Marguerite Snow does most of her own sewing. She appears at the Tioga on Wednesday in Metro's "Rosemary."

Mary Miles Minter, another Metro star, was known upon speaking stage as Juliet Shelby (her really true name).

"The Battle Cry of Peace" will be shown at the Lafayette on February 14, 15 and 16.

Theda Bara, in "The Galley Slave," comes to the popular Grand for Wednesday and Thursday. She recently received a letter from an Illinois man, unknown to her, who said that he would commit suicide on a certain date if she did not promise to marry him.

The showing of Triangle pictures at the Imperial is meeting with approval.

Four recent Triangle successes, two recent Paramount productions and a new Metro will be included in the week's offering at the cozy Luby Theatre, Monday comes Willard Mack in "The Conqueror" and Mark Swain in the comedy, "The Movie Star"; "Let Katy Do It," featuring Jane Grey and Tully Marshall, on Tuesday.

In "The Ballet Girl," coming to the Globe Wednesday, Miss Alice Brady, suspended on a wire, performs an aerial scene the lowering device stuck, leaving Miss Brady suspended 30 feet above the studio floor.

Valhalla, the Metro star, appeared before his Majesty, the late King Edward, by royal command on several occasions when she was a young girl. She appears in Metro's "The Turnoff" at the Jefferson on Wednesday.

A surprise to all who have witnessed the production in "Don Quixote," in which the Wolf Toppet is featured, and which will be shown at the Great Northern Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of next week.

The Triangle play which will be presented at the Girard Avenue Theatre will present Lillian Gish, with Rosika Dolly, in the new D. W. Griffith production, "The Lily and the Rose." The play is somewhat allegorical, retreating burlesque from the soul of the flowers, and it lends itself to the most beautiful there is in the line of motion photography.

A scene of thrilling intensity nearly to blood curdling is the mammoth landscape which is recorded as one of the features of the big Lubin five-act special feature, "The Great Divide," which Manager Lord, of the Orpheum Theatre, has booked for the attraction at his house for Thursday next.

The Fifty-sixth Street Theatre, West Philadelphia's latest and most modern photoplay house, will be opened to the public next Saturday, February 12. There will be a matinee at 2:30.

The first offering will be the Paramount picture, Geraldine Farrar in "Temptation." In addition to the star play, there will be Pathe scenic and educational pictures in color, a Hearst-Vitaphone News pictorial and a selected Mutual comedy, "Grace's Gorgious Gown."

On Monday and Tuesday, February 14 and 15, there will be a first showing in West Philadelphia of the Paramount picture, Mary Pickford as "The Foundling." The possibilities of up-to-date projection, together with the furnishings and appointments, spell comfort and luxury. Music will be one of the features; a Kimball organ, one of the latest and most improved, is being installed. Short concerts preliminary to the star picture will be a part of every evening's program. In addition to music of the masters, popular numbers at the request of the patrons will be rendered.

HOW THE SHADOW MOVIES MAKE MAIDS INTO MONSTERS

Here we have the three stages by which an actress in the silhouette movies, which C. Allan Gilbert and J. R. Bray make for the Paramount program, becomes a mythical monster. The trick is a matter of combining living actors and drawn figures in the same film. The accompanying photographs, taken from "Haunts for Rent," the second release of Bray-Gilbert Film, Inc., show the various stages in one of these transformations. The pictures of the actors are taken before a white background; by drawing across the outline and filling it in black, the artist is further able to pick up the thread of the story.

appears in Metro's "The Turnoff" at the Jefferson on Wednesday.

At the Alhambra on Thursday, Friday and Saturday the main attraction will be Wallace Reid in "The Golden Chance," which she portrays in "The Golden Chance," to be seen at the Regent Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, the greatest part in her film career.

Clara Kimball Young, the World film star, considers the role of Sonia Sokoloff, which she portrays in "The Yellow Passport," to be seen at the Regent Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, the greatest part in her film career.
