The price of pork made Albert Platt and Bill Grove energetic. Each has a fondness for fried ham, bacon, sausage, scrapple and other tasty things of the pork family which require money to pos-

Platt and Grove were wondering how they could mobilize a breakfast of this yesterday, when they suddenly spied a pig in the barnyard of Hugh Coyle. The pig was grunting contentedly and evi-dently looking forward to many years of lazy happiness and eats. The men, it is said, coaxed it outside the barn door and tried to use it for a pin cushion. But the pig was suspicious and it darted along Ridge avenue.

The hungry hunters gave chase and tried to pin it to the ground several times by throwing a carving knife near the anireal's tail. Mounted Policeman Barthold saw the pig hunt and he started in to hunt But Platt and Grove were not frightened by the horse's hoofs coming in the rear and kept up the chase.

The pig became panic-stricken and even refused to stop when it reached St. Mary's Cemetery, which it evidently regarded as a bad omen. It darted over the fence and its pursuers were right after it. When the cop reached the fence he had to leave his horse and continue the chase. He scaled the fence and was not deterred when he left part of his trousers on some of the barbed wire. The hunters and their game had disappeared. He was about to give up the chase, when he heard a squeal and traced it to a clump of trees, where he found the two men engaged in stuffing the porker into a bag.

When they were brought before Magis-trate Price at the Manayunk police station the prisoners said they found the ani-mal roving and thought it had no home. But Hugh Coyle, owner of the pig, and the "Judge" himself were somewhat dubious. Coyle declared that many chickens had disappeared from his place recently, and he expressed the belief that Platt and

The hunters were each held in $400 bail for a further hearing.
