

MARY PICKFORD AS "T. A. DALY BOY"

Masquerades as an Italian Kid in Her Newest Film, "Poor Little Peppina"

By the Photoplay Editor

"POOR LITTLE PEPPINA." A Famous Players-Paramount production in seven parts.
Released today and playing all this week at the Stanley Theatre.

Not so many years ago there was a great deal of talk about the Camorra, or Mafia, the great secret criminal organization of Italy. Finally a traitor snaked out from this body and gave its secrets away to the Government. At last, the Mafia was made, and then came the famous Camorra trial. The organization seemed killed and stamped out, but public interest, once aroused in such matters, waned slowly, and there is still a universal interest in this dread society.

"In 'Poor Little Peppina,' the newest Pickford release, the Mafia holds the center of the plot. The villain, and there are many of them, who 'pussy-foot' around in the most approved movie-meladramatic style, are all members of this chaste organization of crime to society.
The story deals with the desire for revenge of the Mafia leader upon an American, who secured his conviction for a crime. The plot is, of course, the abduction of the only child of his victim, the usual method of acquiring revenge. However it is necessary to make a story.
He succeeds, and the little girl is taken to Italy and raised as the daughter of Italian parents. She is being forced to marry a padrone, whom she loathes, on her wedding day, she runs away, disguised as an Italian boy.

She becomes a stowaway on a vessel bound for America, and finally reaches here, only to fall into the hands of the American branch of the Mafia. Unwittingly she is the cause of their downfall, and the usual end follows.
It is not the story that is remarkable, it is rather the fine character work done by the players and the excellent atmosphere of Italy which is found in this picture.

The supporting cast is to a great extent made up of Italian actors. Their work throughout the piece is clean-cut and delightful.

The real gem of the whole piece is the Peppina of Mary Pickford. Not since that marvelous creation, Jean, the Jugger of Notre Dame, of Mary Garden was revealed, has as attractive and well acted a "boy" been seen. There is, of course, this difference, Miss Garden was a boy and Miss Pickford herself a girl, while Miss Pickford's Peppina is a girl masquerading as a boy and Miss Pickford herself merely a clever actress.
Yet for all that one finds the same boyish spirit, freedom of movement and assurance of art in both characters.

Miss Pickford makes you feel as if one of those delightful people, Mr.
T. A. Daly had suddenly taken life and walked out to meet you. She is a young, happy Italian full of the joy of life. She is wholly delightful.

Edwin Mordaunt, whose excellent work with William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes" a few weeks ago is remembered with pleasure, is very good in the role of the American millionaire who suffers the curse of the Mafia.

Jack Pickford does a nice bit of character work as Beppo, Peppina's foster brother. He is a worthy second to his sister in this cleverest of Pickford pictures.

The court scenes, the abduction, the fight with the Mafia and the confession scene are all thrilling pieces of action.
Many lovely settings are found throughout this film. "Poor Little Peppina" will play all this week at the Stanley Theatre.

Work on the final scenes of the new World Film feature drama, in which George Beban is to soon appear, was interrupted last week by a rainfall which led to the start. During the enactment of a scene in which Beban engages in a fierce hand-to-hand battle the star received a deep cut across the fingers of his right hand, temporarily disabling him.

In the scene John Davidson, who plays the role of the artist admirer of Beban's picture wife, was to raise a heavy Japanese jar, swing it over his head and bring it down with a smash as Beban closed with him. The scene had been carefully rehearsed and the picture taken up to the point where Beban, armed with a broken sword, forced Davidson against the wall. Here Davidson, under Beban's insistent orders, seized the jar and swung a heavy blow at the star's head. As intended, Beban met the blow with the hilt of his broken sword, but in shattering a jagged edge of the jar lacerated Beban's hand to the bone.

Among Germantown play-goers, the popularity of the Hattie Theatre long ago became firmly established and the success that it has enjoyed to date has been more than warranted by the excellence of the entertainment provided. One of the best and most varied programs of the season has been arranged for the forthcoming week. The main attraction will be supplemented by minor picture offerings, and also by splendid organ music of a character that has added and is adding much to this playhouse as a place of recreation and amusement.

It would seem highly appropriate that the week which contains the holiday dedicated to love, St. Valentine's Day, should be made the occasion for the reappearance of that dainty and prime favorite of the films, Miss Pickford, at the Stanley all next week.

It is, if anything, even more appropriate that the reappearance should be made in a brand-new play, written especially for the star by Kate Jordan, and breathing the very atmosphere of the old-fashioned Valentine Day, "Poor Little Peppina."

The list of next week's attractions at the Girard Avenue Theatre cover a wide range of recognized film masterpieces, which have heretofore been seen only at the higher-priced houses. Grace Elliott, who is featured in "Black Pear," a sensational Metropolitan production recently released and showing here Thursday, is one of a few women in this country who can operate an aeroplane.

There is plenty of action in Russian melodramas. "The Girl of the Year," with Clara Kimball Young, the new World release, showing Monday at the Ruby, is no exception to this rule.

MAN'S PLUCK SAVES HIM

Lineman Clings to Ice Pole Until Near the Ground

John Wilson, employed as a lineman by the Philadelphia Electric company, who had a remarkable escape from serious injury yesterday, when he slid down an ice-covered pole at 5th street and Haverford avenue to a point within 12 feet of the ground and then, landing on his feet, in the West Philadelphia Homeopathic Hospital suffering from shock.

Wilson, who lives at 1214 South 12th street, was at the top of the pole, when he lost his hold and started sliding. He slid easily until more than three-quarters of the way down, when he was forced to loosen his grip.

At 10th street he ran into the arms of Acting Detective Mitchell, and the chase was over.

"You're an idiot," said Magistrate Perch when Williams was arraigned before him at the 15th and Locust streets station.

"I've always been a lousy old art," said Sam, "and ain't tryin' no make," a collection of "fo' ma stee-dio."

But the negro's artistic sense was rudely shocked when the Judge said "200 bail for court."

Mme. Arian Jane Addy Arctowska to Speak at
U. of P. Tonight

Madame Arian Jane Addy Arcowska, author and opera singer, will lecture tonight at the University of Pennsylvania at 8 o'clock on "History and Heroism in Poland," describing the part that country is playing in the present war and has played in the wars of the past.

At 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon she will speak at the University on "Polish Literature." Philadelphia's remember the lecturer as Arian Jane Addy, who began her musical studies as a girl in this city under the late Del Puente.
After attaining noted successes in the musical circles of Chicago and Philadelphia, she prepared for a career in grand opera at Paris. In 1899 she married Dr.
Henry Arcowska, Antarctic explorer.

Since the beginning of the European conflict Madame Arcowska has devoted herself to relief work for Poland and Belgium. Her husband is a native of Poland, where he holds a Government commission. She has studied the history and literature and art of Poland and hopes to arouse American interest in its needs.
While in this city she will be the guest of Judge and Mrs. Robert von Mosch-kiser.

Police Court Chronicles

Psyche and Diana whose last names could not be learned were kidnapped by Sam Williams, a negro, who afterwards deserted them despite their beauty and threw both young women through a window.

They landed much bruised and humiliated in the store of a Walnut street merchant but did not utter a word of complaint. Psyche lost one ear and half a nose. While Diana lost both arms and cut her head for sister Venus de Milo.

After deserting the renowned beauties so ungraciously Williams continued out Walnut street without even pausing to see how badly the women were hurt. His speed was very necessary, for close on his heels was Bernard Abramowitz.

Philadelphia women, who have responded no nobly to the cause of the oppressed and suffering in Europe since the outbreak of the war, again are to be front in response to an appeal for additional support for the war orphans of France. A little committee has been formed which is striving to obtain funds to increase the insufficient French Government allowance of 10 cents a day to these unfortunate.

What the committee is aiming at is the purpose of the big General Committee, known as the Orphelinat des Armees, which is centered in France and has branches working throughout all of France and in many parts of this country. The Orphelinat des Armees is asking for 10 cents a day for each orphan, or $5.00 a year, to supplement the Government allowance.

The Philadelphia committee, of which Mrs. John Markoe is chairman, and Mrs.
Joseph Lohy treasurer, expects Philadelphia to take care of 10,000 orphans. It seeks out a general appeal, urging everyone who can make the small sacrifice pledge themselves for the small sum of 10 cents a day.

PLAN SOCIAL CENTRE TO AID CATHOLICS OF KENSINGTON

Three Churches of District Combine in Work of Establishing Much-needed Institution at 2016 North Hancock Street—Poor to Benefit

A Social Service Centre for work among Catholics of the district will be established in Kensington. The handsome brick building at 2016 North Hancock street has been purchased for the purpose, and after alterations the house will be formally dedicated by Archbishop Peters.

The work will be under the auspices of three churches—St. Michael's, 21 and Master streets; St. Edward's, 4th and York streets, and the Church of the Visitation, Front street and Lehigh avenue.

For years past the need of a Social Service Centre in this section has been apparent, but lack of resources has prevented the inauguration of the work. In each district there is a large population of poor where the need of workers was felt. With the agreement of the three churches to the plan and with a corps of young men and women to assist in the work, there promises to be a successful completion of the project.

Because of the varied needs of the poor in the district, the work of the centre will be most comprehensive and will include relief of the poor, the instruction of working boys and girls and a day nurse.

The house will be in charge of three nuns—Sister Mary of the Holy Child, Sister Mary of the Holy Child, and Sister Mary of the Holy Child. They will be in a convent in Baltimore. They will be assisted by lay workers from the three parishes. Each parish will be represented by several men, who will have the help of an auxiliary of women members of the churches.

The first work of the centre will be the establishment of a day nursery under the direction of the sisters. Here will be installed equipment for the care of babies over night or any short period while mothers are at work. Classes in darning, millinery and domestic science will be conducted for the young people. A dispensary will be established where medicines will be obtained free by those unable to pay for them.

It is expected that by the plans to be adopted the needs of the poor will be more readily met and help given to those most deserving.

ST. CYR AND FRIENDS LEAVE ON MYSTERIOUS ERRAND

Men Dash Off to Washington, but May Proceed to Palm Beach

Jean Harold Edward St. Cyr, his friend, Robert von Schwenn, and a third man dashed off to Washington this morning on an errand unexplained at the Belvue-Stratford, where St. Cyr and his wife have been stopping ever since they left Palm Beach, when the allegations concerning St. Cyr's identity were published by a New York newspaper.

It had been expected that St. Cyr would reply today to those allegations, which are to the effect that he has no right to the name St. Cyr, but is really "Jack" Thompson, of Waco, Tex., former newsboy, haberdashery salesman and chorus man. He married the widow of James H.
"Silent" Smith, who left her his many millions. She is a sister of Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, of this city.

The three men left the hotel at 10:15 o'clock in the $10,000 auto which Mrs. St.
Cyr gave her young husband. The auto went to West Philadelphia station, where the travelers boarded the 10:24 train, arriving at Washington at 1:35 o'clock this afternoon. Their tickets had been obtained in New York, and it was thought possible that the three were bound eventually for Palm Beach, where it was supposed St. Cyr, who is still in the hotel, would later join his husband.

of 60th and Spruce streets has been sold by C. Folk Klein for Michael Welstein to Giorgio Castelli and Angelo
