and even at the prices now obtained for it, it is very hard to get. These are some of the things the manufacturer starting today has to contend with. Then again, there are no standard designs for apparatus or plants, and few chemists have sufficient practical knowledge of operation to instruct the engineers in drawing up their plans. This is not their fault. The opportunity has just suddenly developed, and they will rise to the occasion. Coal tar products and dyes can be made
