

THE NOVEL OF THE YEAR BY GEORGE A. CHAMBERLAIN

CHAPTER XXXV.—Continued.
Alix made a little gesture of despair with her two hands. "I don't know," she repeated. Then, quite quietly, she said: "I don't know."

CHAPTER XXXVI.

He tried to settle him in a hammock with many pillows, but Alan brushed from him. He said he would rather sit on the floor under the trees and Alan stretched himself out amid a riot of many colored cushions, while Clem sat on a low rocking chair and talked and read and talked.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Clem's was not the only troubled heart on the Hill. At the Elm Farm, Lansing moved restlessly from room to room and stopped often to read and read a crumpled note—Gerry's note to Alix.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Alix was still in town. Mrs. Lansing had written to her and then wired. Alix replied telling her not to come, that she wished to be alone. For hours at a time Mrs. Lansing replaced the nurse at Gerry, Jr.'s side. He helped her. She felt that she could help Alix.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

When Clem talked it was like a child dreaming about when she was silent one felt the presence of womanhood with the unconscious accumulations of generations and unshaken. When Clem talked Alan was at ease, but when she was silent he was moved, and with a woman's sense of the unconscious accumulations of generations and unshaken.

PACIFIC COAST'S GREAT PREACHER THINKS WAR WILL AID CHRISTIANITY

The Rev. Dr. James W. Brouger Thinks Mexican Intervention Necessary if Carranza is Failure

"The war is going to show that formal Christianity is a failure and that spiritual Christianity is the need of the world. I believe that real Christianity will make the Carranza Government in Mexico a success and that the Carranza Government will make the United States a success."

After expressing his views regarding the effect of the war on Christianity, he gave a rapid-fire sketch of his opinion on some of the most important world and national problems. He asserted that the Carranza Government in Mexico is the duty of the United States to intervene in Mexico, for the purpose of annexing the sister Republic to the south-west.

In dealing with the Japanese question, he declared that in his opinion well-qualified Japanese or Chinese were better than the United States Government to arrange a satisfactory settlement.

PROPER SERVICE FOR PROPER TIMES

By VIRGINIA E. KIFT

The Formal Breakfast

Arrangement of table after fruit has been served—Service explained.

VERY often, indeed, we have an important guest over night, and are just as anxious that the breakfast service be in good form as we were worried the previous evening over the course of the dinner.
