WHIRLING PUNCH EFFECTIVE FOR O'LEARY IN DROPPING AND DEFEATING SOL BURNS

Seattle Lightweight Springs New Wallop in Spilling Opponent into the Rosin

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

A BRAND-NEW type of boxer waded in on us at the National A. C. Saturday night, stuck around for some 25 minutes and put on an act which was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Johnny O'Leary of Seattle, Wash., who claims the lightweight championship of Canada, is the stranger in our ring.

He is the most likely looking lightweight seen around here for some time, and he will give it as soon as he gets a chance at the top-notchers.

His battle with Burns, O'Leary showed that he could hit with either hand, was a fast, willing boxer and could keep up a whirlwind pace from start to finish.

For an instant the opponent's back is turned, and when he gets back into his original position Johnny slams him with his right or left.

Solly hit the floor for a count of nine, the better fight, but after a few minutes he was whirled a second time, and again he took the count.

The audience began to shout and several "boos" were hurled at O'Leary. They thought that Johnny was taking an unfair advantage of his opponent, but Referee Jack McHughan ruled that it was according to Hoyle and the new staff was allowed.

It is a very effective punch, and it will take the others some time to find a defense for it.

O'Leary is a surprise. He surprised everyone in the first round when he rushed out of his corner, carried the fight to Burns and had him on the floor before the battle had progressed one minute.

There was a mix-up, a clinch and as they broke away Burns seemed to turn as if on a pivot. Johnny drove a short jab to the jaw and Solly dropped. It looked like the fight was over, but Burns gamely struggled to his feet and fought back even harder than ever.

He went down again, but stayed through the round and O'Leary became too anxious to put over the final knockout punch.

Solly Burns seems to have a mysterious jaw, which grows stronger as the fight progresses. In his contest with Wagon two weeks ago, Solly was dropped in the first round and was all but out. He recovered, however, came back and fought in the later rounds took punches on the jaw that would floor an ordinary boxer.

Saturday night it was the same. After the first round he stopped everything, but save in the fourth, when he was counted, but was in fair shape at the finish.

An effort is being made to match O'Leary with Benny Leonard, or some other hard hitter, and if it is put through the latter will have a battle worth watching.

Willie Kelly, manager of O'Leary, is willing to forfeit his end of the purse if his man is not declared the victor.

Herman in Debut Role. Another newcomer will be with us tonight. He is Pete ("Kid") Herman, of New Orleans. The Southerner has included this side of the Mason and Dixon line.

He proved his mettle as a leader by holding for "Kid Williams" crown by contending the champion to a draw recently, for the purpose of tying more scalp to his string—also adding more money to his bank roll.

Left-handed, "mysterious" bantam—awkwardly clever, left-handed and elegant—will be pitted against the scrappy Pete from the South at the Olympia tonight.

This match will be Herman's first experience in the ring opposed to a boxer who stands with his right foot out and left hand pulled back. Terence's style has puzzled all of his opponents in the past.

Mr. Herman may find himself in a quandary in an effort to cross his trusty right—the mitt that staggered the champion.

Less than a year ago Herman was a champion—best of the New Orleans boot-leggers. Before another 12-month roll by the little Italian he will be a battle shoo-in. To win the bantam title, so that there will be no flow in his crown, Pete wants to beat not only Williams, but also Johnny Ertle, who is claiming the title on the strength of winning over the Kid on a foul.

Benny Dorr, Herman's manager, has other plans—that Pete CAN lick both Williams and Ertle.

SCRAPS ABOUT SCRAPPERS. Tonight in New York two Philadelphia boxers will give a demonstration of the manly art. They are battling in the big-and-gone-away style.

EXPRESS CRUISER WILL BE LEADING CRAFT IN RACING

Three Yachting Associations Arranging Events for Coming Season

NEW BOATS BUILDING

The express cruiser will go to the front in racing events this coming season. Both in this section of the coast and elsewhere the express cruiser-type of boat is being built on a ratio of two to one to other craft.

Also the forming of the 16 or more divisions of the United States Power Squadron to add the Government in time of need has created interest on this type of boat.

In this section of the country Louis Burk, Colonel James C. Elverson, Jr., Mr. Charles Fells, of the Corinthian Yacht Club; Commodore Charles Longstreet, Charles Zerkow, Fred Scharf, James M. Rowland and others are having express cruisers constructed.

William E. King, fleet captain of the Corinthian Yacht Club of Cape May, is having a 35-foot raised deck cruiser built at one of the South Jersey ship-building yards.

Louis Burk of this city, is having a 40-foot cruiser built at the plant of John VanDerstee, of Camden.

Floyd Carter, of the Columbia Yacht Club, which has its headquarters on the Delaware River at Red Bank, is having a new express cruiser built at one of the local yards.

James M. Rowland, of the Ocean City Yacht Club, owner of the displacement racer, J. M. R. and the Mary Jane, champion of the South Jersey coast, is having a 40-foot express cruiser built at one of the local yards.

Local dogs made an excellent showing in the awards today at the Kennel Club Dog Show, 23d and Chestnut streets, which closed last night.

WITH GOOD PITCHING STAFF DETROIT WOULD BE FAVORITE IN AMERICAN RACE

Cobb's Presence in Line-up Assures Tigers Another Powerful Offensive Team

By CHANDLER B. RICHTER

JUST so long as Tyrus Raymond Cobb can continue at the terrific pace he has set for 16 seasons, the Detroit Tigers are certain to be more or less trouble-makers in the pennant race. Add to this asset the powerful Crawford, the greatly improved Veach and a well-balanced team, and it is easy to see that Detroit is the favorite in the American League for the coming season.

Detroit made enough runs per game to have won the pennant last season, but the pitching staff fell down badly. Had the pitching staff been anywhere near as strong as that of the Red Sox there would have been little to the race after the Tigers had overhauled the present world's champions late in July.

Jennings still has a powerful staff. It may not be as fast as it was two or three years ago, but it is more consistent, and barring accidents to Cobb, the Tigers are strong enough to win the pennant if they get good pitching. With good pitching Detroit is a better betting proposition than the Red Sox for the coming campaign. Without it there are at least three teams which look better.

When the 1915 season opened Jennings had three experienced hurlers who were looked upon as certain winners, while the rest of the staff consisted of men of unknown quality. Bernie Roland, a recruit from the Southern League, pitched beautiful ball for six weeks and then went to pieces. Reynolds and Boehler, two youngsters who were counted upon to develop into consistent winners, also failed to make good.

These disappointments, Jennings probably would have pulled through had it not been for the sudden collapse of Jean Dubois, who had been Jennings' mainstay for two years. Dubois became so undependable that he was permitted to start but one game during the last two months of the season, that contest being with the Athletics; in this city; and he was driven from the mound then.

Staff Will Be Stronger. Jennings did not realize until it was too late that he would not overhaul the Red Sox unless he strengthened his pitching staff. Finally he purchased Bill James and Grover Lowdermilk from the Browns for $15,000. Both of these stars pitched good ball, but unfortunately, could not get the breaks, and the Tigers lost important contests with them on the mound.

While James and Lowdermilk were of little use to the Tigers last season, their looked upon as Jennings' staff this year should send Detroit into the race a favorite, despite the addition of stars to other teams and the gradual improvement of the great young pitching staff of the Red Sox.

With Cavaselle and Dams certain to win a large percentage of their games, Ho-and a greatly improved pitcher, Dabie a possible comeback, and James and Lowdermilk, to say nothing of Erickson, recently purchased from the Reds, Detroit has the best-looking pitching staff it has had since 1909.

There also is a chance that Oldham or Smithson, southpaw recruits, may make good.

The work of the rest of the team depends largely upon Cobb. When Cobb is going good the Detroit team plays better ball. The offense is built about the wonderful Georgian, and he appears to be well able to carry it. Last year was one of the best in Cobb's sensational career, but 1914 should be even better.

Cobb is a trifle slower than he was several years ago, but he knows so much more now that he is often more effective on the bases, while his wonderful batting eye seems as good as ever. The coming season will find Cobb pushing himself to the limit.

The addition of Benny Hain and Benji Hain and the prediction that he would prove himself as great as Cobb have caused Ty to start training earlier than ever before, and he is determined to convince the fans that he is far superior to the Federal League star.

Experienced Team. The rest of the Detroit team probably will be very much the same as last season unless some recruit shows unexpected brilliancy. It is virtually certain that Harry Heilmann, recalled from San Francisco, will make the best looking prospect of the regular position at first base, with a possibility that he may be used on third base, with Oscar Vitt switched over to second.

Jennings' stand-pat policy is open to criticism just as it is that of Carrigan at Boston. The Tigers have a veteran aggregation, but it does not appear to need the new blood for another year or two. Jennings apparently is aware of this, as he has several promising youngsters planted in the minor leagues.

The wonderful slugging outfield of

Addition of Lauder-milk and James Will Strengthen Jennings Clan

Heilmann was with the Tigers two years ago, but was sent to the San Francisco Club for further seasoning. While in the Coast League, Heilmann was shifted to first base, where he made good at once. He has since been the leading hitter of the league and did not show a weakness against any particular style of pitching as Joe Getson did. He should be a great help to Jennings, even if he fails to earn a regular position.

Defensively the rest of the Detroit infield is wonderfully strong, but both Bush and "Pop" Young, another Philadelphiaan, will have to hit at least 30 points better than they did in 1915 or the Tigers will feel this weakness. Unless Young improves in batting, Jennings may switch his infield about to get more batting strength from Chattanooga, a position he handled for only two seasons, there is every reason to believe that he will improve his average this season. With Vitt at third, Bush at first, Young in second and either Heilmann or Burns, first base, Detroit will have a powerful all around infield combination, if Bush and Young hit better.

If Oscar Stange continues to improve with age, he will be a prospect better than the average of Del Baker is ripe for regular work, while Peters, a recruit who was recalled from Chattanooga, is a wonder. He may replace "Red" McKee as third catcher.

Jennings has a few other Southern League recruits, of whom great things are expected. The best looking prospect here is Cunningham, the former Duluth pitcher, who was sent to Chattanooga for further seasoning last spring and recalled in the fall.

All things considered Detroit looks as good as any team in the American League, and a trifle better if the pitching is consistent. It is a team which can average 4 or 5 runs to a game, has a wonderful fielding defense and needs only good pitching to present a strong all around defense and the most powerful offense in either league.

SCHEDULE FOR THIS WEEK

TUESDAY—South Philadelphia High School vs. Northeast High at Quaker City Athletic Club.

WEDNESDAY—Central High vs. West Philadelphia High School at West Philadelphia High gymnasium.

If West Philadelphia High School can stop Central High and win the league game scheduled for Wednesday afternoon of this week at the West Philadelphia gymnasium, then Northeast High or South Philadelphia High have a chance to lift the Dutch company trophy. Much depends upon the ability of the athletes across the river.

The final High School League basketball games are on the schedule for this week. Northeast High and Southern High clash at the Quaker City Athletic Club tomorrow. It is a home game for the Northeast players. Captain John Heidel's quietest must win this game and West Philadelphia would have to defeat Central High to bring about a tie in the High School League championship series.

The four high school teams played games on Saturday. The results were as follows:

Haverford School, 42; Central High, 29. George School, 41; Northeast High, 29. George School, 42; West Philadelphia, 23. Southern High, 24; Norristown High, 29. Central High, 29; Haverford School, 42.

If Northeast hopes to beat Southern tomorrow the Lehigh Avenue boys will have to show considerable improvement, for South Philadelphia beat Norristown High with ease and is out for revenge in the league conflict with Coach Keating's proteges.

Danny McNeel, star player on the La Salle College basketball team, was not in the game when Catholic High defeated La Salle College in the game of the Quaker City Athletic Club Saturday night. This estimated La Salle team, which won the Catholic school title, Donovan, the new man on the La Salle team, played a clever passing game and led the scoring with two field goals and 14 out of 23 foul shots.

True to prediction in this column early in the season, the Swarthmore High School basketball players carried off the Delaware County High School League title. Fifteen out of 19 games played were won by the Swarthmore High schoolers. Kennet Square, Haverford School, Darby and Media scored the only victories over Swarthmore High.

Temple University produced a winner in the game with the Drexel College team at Atlantic City. The Broad street athletes winning 22 to 12. Temple's former captain, High school star W. Johnson, Phillips and Scarby were members of the Temple quintet.

Still another basketball title was won on Saturday, when the Drexelton High School basketball players defeated Haverford High at Doylestown, capturing the Bucks county championship. Coach Edithman's quintet won 13 games out of a total of 14 played. Fritz, Hayman, A. Condy, Treas and Fox represented Doylestown High in basketball.

A Great Opportunity for Contractors PHILADELPHIA'S present era of prosperity presents a great opportunity for builders and contractors. Factories, mills and structures of all kinds are being planned and erected in every section of the city. Are you getting your share of this business? Are you using newspaper advertising as a means of putting you in touch with architects and those who have contracts to place?

Two of New York's largest contractors are proving the success of daily newspaper advertising. One of them reports 22 leads directly traceable to newspaper advertising during the past two months. Philadelphia contractors can secure equal results. The Public Ledger-Evening Ledger reaches 80% of the architects and nearly as large a percentage of big business chiefs—just the people whose activities employ contractors and builders.

The Champion. He was the Champion—and more. He was the Unbeaten King. He packed a kick in each big mitt. He was the bruiser. He was the fighter. He couldn't beat him with an axe. No other rival had a show. The moment he made up his mind to kick in with the closing blow.

He was the Champion—the prize. He answered them with lefts and rights. He swarmed them in the ring. And broke their hearts in every fight. He stood up with a guy like this. Who knew the straight road to the jaw. And never knew the way to win.

He was the Champion—but now. I saw him fall, round by round. I saw the grim smile leave his lips. Where body punches held him bound. I saw the blur that swept his eyes. I saw the champion look of one who is down. Who wonders what it's all about. A something new beneath the sun.
