NANCY WYNNE CHATS ABOUT MANY THINGS OF SOCIAL INTEREST

The Chestnut Hill Fortnightly Dancing Class Will Hold an Extra Meeting at the Philadelphia Cricket Club This Evening

AN EXTRA dance will be given to-night by the Chestnut Hill Fort-guests will be present. About 50 of the Philadelphia Cricket Club. This dancing class was started about three years ago and has been most popular nightly Dancing Class in the ballroom ever since with the exclusive set of Chestnut Hill. A number of dinners will be given before the dance. The Harry Price Wrights will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Strawbridge and Mr. and Mrs. Barker Mellor. The William Lord Sextone will entertain, and the Howard E. Seavers. Mr. and Mrs. Hollinshead Taylor will give a dinner at their home, and Mr. and Mrs. Evan Randolph will entertain at their home on Seminole urday morning with his mother in an open victoria. Both were well bundled up in furs, and he wore a soft brown felt hat. It was very windy that morning, but all went well until the victoria turned into ——th street, where, with a mighty blast, the wind met them and removed that nice brown hat from the young man's head!

Of course there was a delay before he could stop the carriage and get out, and in the meantime the hat went spinning gaily down the street, flirting outrageously with every muddy pool and rubbish heap and nearly frightening a poor old horse to death by flapping against his knees before it was finally captured by a kindly passerby, when he put a large and determined foot upon its once immaculate crown.

Fortunately a hat shop was just around the corner, and when the young man emerged from that shop a neat black and white check cap was pressed firmly about his ears.

Friends of Mr. Howard Shelley are missing his genial countenance in their daily rounds, because he has left the City of Brotherly Love for the Land of Smoke (in other words, Pittsburgh). Mr. Shelley is a direct descendant, you know, of William Warner, a captain in the Parliamentary Army under Cromwell, who settled in Blockley before William Penn landed on these shores, and who was not only a Provincial Councillor, but one of the nine Justices appointed under Deputy Governor Mark-

He is also a grandson of William Warner, who was one of the founders of the "State in Schuylkill," one of the oldest social organizations of this country, founded in 1732. The Colonial hall of the Fishing Company was built upon ground donated by Mr. Warner, I have been told.

His friends are sorry to have him leave Philadelphia, but are all wishing him the best of luck.

Another incident which shows the trend of the age was whispered to me the other day. A friend of mine was dining out for luncheon, and one of the invited guests failing to appear they were kept waiting till every one was half starved. No word nor sign of the young lady. Later I learned that she had lunch in town and went to the movies. It seems that her engagement for lunch had completely slipped her mind. This was rather hard on the hostess. From the way this young person has been teased I feel very sure she will not forget an engagement very NANCY WYNNE. soon again.
