The Victoria Kimball

The Victoria Theatre, Market Street between Ninth and Tenth Streets, will inaugurate on Monday the newest and most complete of the many Kimball Orchestral Organs in Philadelphia-the largest theatre organ in the State.

All Kimball Organs are masterpieces, whether they consist in a carefully selected group of orchestral tones for a house seating less than 500 or whether they contain every instrument that can be utilized in playing the most exacting picture and enough of them to fill the largest auditorium with musical sound.

Besides the general eastern office in New York, there is now an office in Philadelphia, with complete service staff. Consult the Kimball representative before deciding the music question for your theatre, lodgeroom, church or residence.

Thomas H. Ince reminded her of the obstacles she had put in his way when he sought to add her to his collection of Triangle stars, and with pretty confusion the new film star reiterated her confession that she was genuinely sorry that "Peggy" was done. "I told you so," declared Ince. This feature comes to the Victoria on Monday and Tuesday. Monday and Tuesday.

J. Raymond Parke, assistant managing editor of the New York Journal, was in this city yesterday reviving the days when he and Abe L. Einstein were copy boys.

"Pudd'nhead Wilson," one of Mark Twain's Immortal stories, will be presented in photoplay at the Ruby Theatre on Monday, with the distinguished artist. Theodore Roberts, in the title role. Marguerite Clark, in 'Mice and Men," will be Theatre's feetings.

Vivid character drawing and a fascinating story of life in Normandy and Paris mark "The Pawn of Fate," the new World Film feature in which George Heban will appear as star at the Globe on Wednesday. Mr. Beban, as in the case of "An Allen," in which he made, his first great film success, is the author of "The Pawn of Fate" as well as the star.

Carter De Haven and his wife, Flora Parker De Haven, in the detective film, "The Wrong Door," which Mr. De Haven produced and directed for Bluebird photo-plays, will be the first screen work of the De Havens since they left vaudeville and missical comedy. Plays at Eureka on Sat-urday.

How the lust to kill is conquered by a woman's love is revealed in a series of startling scenes in the new World Film five-part feature, "A Woman's Power," in which Miss Moille King will be seen as the star at the Century on Tuesday.
