NANCY WYNNE ATTENDS SECOND ASSEMBLY—BRILLIANT AFFAIR

Last But One Large Ball of the Season Was Its Usual Success-Many Dinners and Theatre Parties Preceded the Dance

sons are in the South and at the rious resorts, a large number of ets attended the Second Assembly set night, which was held in the ballm of the Bellevue-Stratford, and was ally a magnificent ball.

To say the ball was wonderful is no aggeration. Of course, things began oing very late; it was well on to 11:30 fore the guests began to go down to he ballroom floor. Mrs. Cuyler was ot present, as she has not returned to he city, but the other patronesses were sere and looked very stunning. I do link Mrs. Vaux is beautiful, but for hat matter they are all good-looking nen this year. Many of the debiantes attended. Elizabeth Griffith, no has returned from the South, where he has been with the family of her nce, was there with Neddy dancing itendance. The Myers girls were very mart in their dark blue tulle frocks, and Eleanor Cuyler wore a wonderful own of chiffon and silver lace over ricot satin. A decided innovation was the turning of the Clover Room into a ort of arbor, with trellises and rustic iches and chairs; when the ball was er many of us repaired thither, and rtook of bouilion, sandwiches, etc., until the early hour of 5. Supper was ved in the Palm Room and regular Sellevue Room, which opens on Chanilor and Broad streets, and it was in he latter that the patronesses supped,

Whether it is that the second Asably does away with the certain ermality and awe which the debs feel it the first, it is hard to say, but cerain it is no ball of the winter has en better than last night's. There re not so very many there, the floor was never uncomfortably crowded, and he music was wonderful.

I have seldom seen so pretty a conelt as the small fountain which was granged under the suspended stage; a stant shower played over a small and graceful Venus, and vari-colored lectric lights were turned on at inervals, giving a most novel and attracive touch to the whole room, which was ne mass of pink carnations, tiny esta and climbing tiger lilies, which ave for all the world an appearance of ink orchids. Every post in the main m was twined with a vine and differnt flowers; one was American Beauty es, another Killarneys, another rchids, and still another the pale yelow genesta, all forming a quite perfect whole. I noticed Mrs. Bob Montgomery, the I always maintain is one of the ery prettlest women in this city, wearng an exquisite gown of flesh tulle and liver sequins. Eleanor Pepper was jost attractive in blue tulle and silver, nd Mazie Graham looked perfectly veet in white tulle.
