

CANT GO TO HEAVEN WITHOUT PRAYER, SAYS DARBY EVANGELIST

Nicholson Begins Fifth Week of His Campaign With a Stirring Sermon

CLAIM 1000 CONVERSIONS

"If you never pray you'll go to hell!" was the declaration made this afternoon by the Rev. William P. Nicholson before a good-sized audience in the Darby Tabernacle when he was preaching on "Prayer, Its Power."

The Nicholson-Hemminger party, with Nicholson as the preacher and Prof. J. B. Hemminger in charge of the music, today began its fifth week in a six-week campaign.

The campaign leaders and members of the 18 churches in Darby, Philadelphia and neighboring Delaware counties are enthusiastic over the results.

More than 1000 persons have professed conversion in the tabernacle, and the ministers assert that the influence of the revival is being felt in many homes.

Prayers will be given at 7:30 p. m. each afternoon this week, with the possible exception of Friday. His sermon this afternoon was introductory of the series.

In speaking on "Prayer—Its Power," Pastor Nicholson said in part: "Prayer is more important than prayer, it is the most important thing in the spiritual life. We are apt to become so familiar with it as to lose our sense of its importance. There are three reasons why I believe in prayer."

"First, it is the doctrine of the revelation of God. You don't learn prayer from the law of nature, but in the Word you learn that God is love and that He desires to communicate with His creatures."

"Second, I believe in prayer because of the teachings of Jesus. Christ prayed. He needed it, why, surely we do. By example Christ taught the need of prayer."

"Third, I believe in prayer because of the experience of God's saints all through the ages. Moses prayed and divided the sea. Elijah prayed and bottled up the winds for three years. Muller prayed and millions came to him to support the cause in England. Christ prayed, and is praying now."

"There never was a revival without prayer. You may say, Here, Lord, is ten millions of dollars, give me a revival. You can't get it that way. But pray God will give us a revival and God throws it at us. The trouble is we want to carry on this business as Christian gentlemen independent of God. The biggest power in the man who can grip God in prayer."

"If you never pray you'll go to hell. On a certain ship there was a parrot that prayed as beautifully as any priest and the next morning would curse until the air was blue. You can get your minister to record a prayer on a graphophone, but that is not a prayer. Praying is not saying words. But, whoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."

Tonight's service promises to be one of the most interesting held in the tabernacle during the campaign. It was announced today that it would be "family night," and that the "glory bars" would be fittingly decorated with flags, bunting and signs such as "Home, Sweet Home," and popular old-time hymns would be sung.

PRESIDENT ASKS HOUSE TO SPEED UP NAVAL BILL

Padgett Says It Will Be Ready Probably by April 1

WASHINGTON, March 14.—President Wilson today urged Chairman Padgett, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, to speed up the naval bill as much as possible. Mr. Padgett told the President the bill would be ready to report out probably by April 1. He said there were sufficient members of the committee favorable to the kind of a bill the President wants to insure its containing the navy increases deemed necessary.

There will be no shortening, however, of the hearings preparatory to the introduction of the bill. It is Mr. Padgett's belief, and also that of the President, that the more free the hearings the more satisfactory the bill in its final form.

Tomorrow Thomas Edison and a number of other inventors, who are advocating a Government laboratory, will appear before the committee.

Police Court Chronicles

Two homeless horses were found at Broad and Wood streets by Mike McCormick. The animals were standing near the corner apparently with no destination. They neighed Mike a welcome as he patted their heads, and one of the horses rubbed its nose on his coat sleeve by way of being sociable.

Mike's sympathy was awakened and later his commercial instinct. He concluded that the animals were worth at least two dollars each, and started to auction them off, beginning at this figure.

Bidders were soon attracted, and as the prices started to go up Mike felt happy. In a short time he was offered as much as $7.50 for one horse and $6.25 for the other. One bidder offered to give him $12 cash on the spot for both.

While Mike was considering this bid, Policeman Titus chanced along. He questioned the auctioneer as to where he got the horses, and when Mike admitted he found them, Titus informed him he would be obliged to go to the 19th and Buttonwood streets station.

Mike ran down the street with Titus on his trail. McCormick stopped when he came to a pile of dirt, and grabbing a laborer's shovel, tried to stop the policeman by burying him alive. But Titus dodged the dirt fusillade and eventually landed Mike before Magistrate Beaton.

The prisoner said he saw a man desert the horses after buying them at a bazaar. "I wanted to see that they were taken care of," said Mike. "That's why I tried to sell them to some one who would be good and kind."

But the Judge was skeptical and held Mike in $600 bail for a further hearing. The horses were sent to the van stables.

THUNDER CLOUD

THUNDER CLOUD DEAD; FAMED INDIAN MODEL

Well Known to Philadelphia Visitors to Dingman's Ferry

DINGMAN'S FERRY, Pa., March 14.—Word was received here today of the death of Thunder Cloud, the well-known Indian model who was a striking figure in the life of Dingman's Ferry for the last 29 years. News of his death will undoubtedly be received with genuine regret by the hundreds of Philadelphians, who remember his picturesque personality as well as his home and business place during the summer.

Thunder Cloud manufactured and sold many novelties and curios which helped to spread the name of the resort. Unlike most braves, he was usually in happy frame of mind and was a veritable encyclopedia when it came to the things of interest in and around Dingman's Ferry. Often, too, he added to the life of the place by holding summer carnivals which provided a good time for visitors and their children.

The face of Thunder Cloud adorns the walls of many of the best art galleries of the world. For years he was a familiar figure at the leading art schools, and was used as a model for the true type of Indian by such well-known artists as Frederick Remington, John Singer Sargent, Edwin A. Abbey, MacMonnies and F. D. Millet.

A painting by the latter artist adorns the Governor's room of the State Capitol at St. Paul, Minn. It is called "The Treaty of Traverse des Sioux." The Indian seated in the foreground is Thunder Cloud.

Thunder Cloud died in Rochester while there on a visit. His body was sent home and will arrive at Dingman's Ferry tomorrow.

The Indian was born in northwest Canada in 1850 and was in the party of Indian guides who took the late King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, on his famous hunting trip through that wild region.

From 1872 to 1874 he was a Government scout under General Stanley, during those stirring times when the gallant Custer lost his life at Little Big Horn. He was with the Government troops when they rounded up Red Cloud, and Red Cloud's square's shawl was among his collection of Indian relics.

SHOOTS MANICURIST WHEN SHE 'DARES' HIM

Salesman Finds Woman Talking to Another Man on Phone

BOSTON, March 14.—After he had accused her of being unfaithful to him, Irving E. Olmstead, a wool salesman for William Whitteman & Co., of 78 Chauncey street, loaded an automatic pistol and fired several shots at Mrs. Violet Mooers, a manicurist, in her store, at 47 Winter street.

The woman is at the Boston Relief Hospital, where the physicians say she may recover, and Olmstead is under arrest, awaiting the result of her injuries. Olmstead, who has a wife and three children living in Newtonville, where Mrs. Mooers has been prominent in social life, had known Mrs. Mooers for three years. She was talking over the telephone when he entered her store at 8 o'clock last night.

"Tell him," shouted Olmstead, "that you can't meet him tonight, because you are going out with me." Mrs. Mooers finished her conversation and, turning to Olmstead, said: "I don't see why I shouldn't go out with him or any one else."

"Are you going to throw me down after three years?" Olmstead asked. "Yes, if I want to," Mrs. Mooers replied. "I have also given up three years of my life."

When Olmstead had loaded his pistol Mrs. Mooers dared him to shoot. He immediately began firing.

Unidentified Man Hit by Trolley A man who was struck by a trolley car at 51st street and Woodland avenue today is in a serious condition in the University Hospital. He is unconscious and no marks of identification have been found on him.

Judge Staake's 48th Anniversary

This is the 48th anniversary of Judge Staake's admission to the bar. A number of lawyers extended congratulations. Since 1906 the Judge has been a member of court of Common Pleas No. 5. He is an indefatigable worker and last night toiled until 12 o'clock in the preparation of an important opinion.

MAN STABBED ON TRAIN DYING IN A HOSPITAL

Wounded in a Quarrel With Fellow Passengers on Lehigh Valley R. R.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., March 14.—The mystery of a stabbing affray on a late train from New York Sunday night was solved early this morning when William Luke, a civil engineer, employed by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was brought to the Allentown Hospital in a dying condition. Luke and William Molander, a fellow civil engineer, were returning from New York on an excursion train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which arrived here about 1 o'clock Sunday morning. This side of Easton, when they left their seats in the car to get a drink of water, the seats were taken by two men supposed to be foreigners. A quarrel ensued in which both engineers were stabbed. Molander in the hand and Luke in the abdomen.

All hands started to hush up the matter of a fight on a train. Luke bled so profusely yesterday that late last night he was compelled to go to the hospital, where the surgeons found the knife had penetrated his stomach. An operation was hastily performed.

Cornelius Felton Injured Cornelius C. Felton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar C. Felton, of Haverford, has been brought home from Boston, suffering from a fracture of the leg. He was thrown from an automobile when it crashed into another. Mr. Felton, who is a student at Harvard, was accompanied by his fiancée, Miss Maria Dallas Agassiz, of Boston, on his return yesterday.
