NANCY WYNNE ATTENDS RUSSIAN BALLET AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Brilliant Performance of Serge de Diaghileff Ballet Is Largely Attended by Society-Wonderful Weather at Seashore Yesterday

ML of Philadelphia society still in King street, Lancaster, has returned to Aand about the city attended the sallet last night at the Metropolitan opera House, and it was a wonderful net performance, let me tell you. Most of the boxes were occupied by the regslar holders, who entertained quite a number of persons from out of town,

Mr. and Mrs. James Francis Sullivan were in their box with Frances and Lets. I declare Frankie looks younger ach day. She and Leta and Mr. Sullivan have just lately returned from Bavana, Cuba, where they had quite a conderful time, I understand, Mrs. walter Brooks, Jr., was with Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury and Mr. Stotesbury's daughter, Mrs. Mitchell, was also in their box. A most exquisite gown of relden yellow was worn by Mrs. Randal Morgan, which just blended in with her splendid titian coloring. The Henry Briston Coxes came home last week from the South; Mrs. Coxe was looking very well in black lace and satin. The whole Tower family was en evidence, Mrs Tower in pale blue, Helen in a rose pick and Gertrude in green tulle, with a land of silver in her hair.

Mrs. Edgar Scott, in an exquisite cown of gray tulle and embroidery, looked very charming. Her sons were with her, and Mary Stewart, the second daughter of the Antonio Stewarts.

It was really a wonderful house, in spite of the fact that so many were away, still in the South or down at the shore, and the audience was most en-

I do not think I have ever seen such wonderful weather as that on Sunday and yesterday in Atlantic City. Loads of people went down over the week-end and stayed on for a few extra days. Indeed, the Boardwalk yesterday was almost as full as on Sunday afternoon. About this time of year next season's buds come conspicuously to the fore, and I should predict that among the most popular will be two I saw in Atlantic City. Mary Brooke is one of them, and she is a stunner. She and her father and mother and Eddle were down for the day on Sunday. I saw them as they were leaving the Traymore after dining there. Mary is a decidedly out-of-doors type of girl, wholesome and very pretty. She had on a fetching suit of light blue tyrolienne wool and silver fox furs.

Another coming deb is Lorraine Graham, who, with her younger sister, was down also. She is decidedly artistic, Harry Fishman, of 1739 South 9th street. and has quite a bit of histrionic talent This little future deb was wearing a mart suit of dark blue gabardine and 1841 South 2d street, last week, a small straw toque. A bouquet of yellow jonquils was most becoming to her dark hair and rich coloring.

Saturday night was very gay. They have opened the new Peacock grill room, next to the wonderful Submarine Cafe at the Traymore, and I never have seen such a peculiar effect as the ceiling of mirrors produces. Imagine danc ing on one's head, so to speak; it really was fascinating, to say the least. The floor is made of polished red tiles, and is wonderful for dancing, and everybody one knew was there. The Ned Buckleys are stopping at the hotel, and so were the William Rowlands.

Mrs. Charles Edward Ingersoll and the youngest Ingersoll boy I saw on arday, and Jack Potter was with his

Tommy Robinson is a happy looking person walking along by his little flancee, who is most attractive. She is Eloise Orme, of Washington. It came to me with quite a shock how very little we had realized what a real hero Albert Kennedy was, in the and accident which happened to Catherine Cassard before the Bal Masque, mearly three weeks ago, when I saw him on the Boardwalk with both hands still bandaged up. Just think, he has been Virtually helpless all that time, and to hear that with his hands as badly burned as that, he was the one who ran over to the Rittenhouse, where there was a convention of doctors, and brought some one back with him to poor little Miss Cassard, who, by the way, was only pronounced out of danger last week. They tell me she is most wonderfully brave, though suffering intensely a great deal of the time, and

To return to Atlantic City, I was so glad to see Mrs. Bob Large on the Casino pavilion taking a sun bath from my comfy chair in the Traymore sun pavilion. Mrs. Large has been so ill that her friends feared at first she might not recover, but now she is almost on the well list.

The Gustavus Remaks, with Margaret and Caroline, were down over the week-end, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Clay were stopping at the St. Charles. Altogether, there was quite a colony of Philadelphians drinking in the salt air. NANCY WYNNE.

DIAGHILEFF'S BALLET OPENS ITS SEASON AT METROPOLITAN

Famous Corps of Russian Dancers Seen in a Notable Program of Classic and Modern Ballet

COMBINATION OF 3 ARTS

After all the glowing things that have been said, and after all the silly things that have been done in connection with Sorge de Diaghileff's Ballet Russe, the first performances by this wonderful group of dancers at the Metropolitan last night routed to have night tended to have something of the atmosphere of anti-climax. The nature of the ballets and their personnel, the of the ballets and their personnel, the details of costuming and scenery, the music and the choreography, were all set out with much circumstance in the EVENING LEDGER of last Saturday, and two of the ballets danced last night were reviewed from New York performances more than a month ago. The higher censors of art have sat in the police courts of other cities and found this strange importation offensive or inofensive, according to the dictates of their infallible judgment. The dilettante has waved his judgment. The dilettante has waved his ands and the stolid man of affairs has een captivated. The Russian ballet has been captivated. The Russian ballet has been called a new philosoppy of life, which it probably is not, and an outrage to public decency, which it certainly is not. And now for the week before the return to New York it is ours.

Yet it is in the nature of this singularly energetic and magnetic blending of three and that it returns a freedom.

larly energetic and magnetic blending of three arts that it retains a freshness and an appeal in spite of the ravages of time. Last night the representations ranged from the gnomes and genii of a fairy story through the fantastic perranged from the gnomes and genii of a fairy story through the faniastic personages of a commedia dell' arte to the sensuous and bloody characters of a tragedy of love, and at each moment there was the impress of a clear and moving reality. It was, to be sure, not the reality of every day; that is what saves the ballet from discussions and problems. It was the more significant reality of an artistic illusion.

Of the three sets two were by Leon Bakst and one by Gelovine, and of those

Of the three sets two were by Leon Bakst and one by Golovine, and of those by Bakst, the second, for "Carnaval," was undistinguished and ill lighted. For "L," Olseau de Feu" (The Firebird), Golovine designed a set as whimsteal, as variegated and fantastic as the music of Ligor Strawingky for the same ballet Cein. Igor Strawinsky for the same ballet. Grinning faces in the gates and in the windy clouds, arabesques towering into the skies, carmine turrets, which flashed into scarlet, as the light of an uncarthly day sprang upon them, and out of such details a scene which grew with the progress of the fairy drama from the exotic to the dnister and then into joyous and exuitant actuality—these were the achievements of Golovine. For the "Scheherszade" there was the new decoration of Bakst, no longer in the soft yellows and contrasting blues. Instead the harem was in green, dark and with brownish splotches, and four scarlet pillars burned at one side. For this the costumes were transposed to another key, yet with the same harmonies and the same dissonances. They were pink and green and blue, and the indescribable investiture of the faithless queen all beautiful to the eye, and, in the weaving of the dances distributed. eaving of the dances; dazzling.

With the eye and the car so disposed of, there should have been another faculty which could attend to the dancing and the drama of the ballets. Actually the appeal came through the vision and was blended, as said before, with the glorious settings devised. There was much glorious settings devised. There was much in this modern dancing which stemmed from the older, the now unfairly despised five positions ballet. Indeed, the "Carnaval" was a bit of this exquisite ancient dance remade with a new passion, yet restrained and delicate as it must be. In the other two it would be more just to speak of mimicry, of pantomime, first and dancing afterward. For essentially the "Scheherazade" and "L'Olseau de Feu" are dramas enacted in posture and line and movement and gesture and expres-sion. Whenever these elements fit into the scheme of choreography they are so utilized, but they have their place apart.

It was impossible as one sat before the ballets to separate them into their components. It is equally impossible, when one is away from them, to give any sense of their unity. Even to catalogue the emotions portrayed were not easy, for they ranged from the childlike simplicity of faith in the first piece to the mid riot of lust and death in the last. In each, the suggestion of love or death was made through beauty—of line, of color, of light, of movement. To be touched by the eloquence of It all was inevitable, but it was an eloquence beyond translation. an eloquence beyond translation. The passion for beauty, the fervor of energy, are a little ill-at-ease in our lives and the overwhelming of the senses which they bring we are inclined to fancy unnatural, or, if we be humorists, immoral. But we recognize the higher power, and even our protests are homase to it. even our protests are homage to it. G. V. S.

Washington, March 28.—In spite of the fact that the Mexican "situation" has hit society rather hard at the national capital, Washington has had a particularly gliddy week, with a masquerade dinner-dance, a skating and dancing carnival and a Russian ball, with a number of official dinners, and, of course, the usual weekly—at least, Lenten weekly—musicale at the White House. Designating some of the more frivolous of these festivities as "mi-careme" may have soothed the social conscience, but it was, to put it mildly, rather rushing the season, since Lent was barely two weeks old.

The White House musicale Tuesday night was made the occasion of presen Leopold Stokowski, conductor of Pulladelphia Orchestra, and Mme. kowksi to the President and Mrs. Wilson. The orchestra had given a wonderful con-cert—the last of its season—during the afternoon, at which the Chief Executive had entertained a box party, and the counselor of the State Department and Mrs. Polk had entertained at dinner for the Stokowskia, who were their guests for the night, and brought their party to the White House that evening, merely as guests, of course. The program was furnished by leaser lights in the musical firmament. But after it was over the Stokowskis became decidedly the lions of the

The concert of the afternoon had brought out one of the most distinguished audiences of the winter, and one that packed the theatre to the doors. The President and Mrs. Wilson were there, with Miss Wilson, Miss Bones and, as usual, some of the Bollings in their box. The German Ambassador had a box full. General and Mrs. Croster had a dis-General and Mrs. Crozler had a box full. General and Mrs. Crozler had a distinguished party in their box, including mambers of the British Embassy staff. The latter do not seem to share Mme. Halthmeteff's fear of exp. sing themselves to German munic. Lady Spring-Rice and Mr. Thomas Spring-Rice and unless memory is at fault, the Ambassador himself have gone bilitair to consert during self, have gone bilithely to concerts during the winter at which they were pretty sure to hear German music, but Mme. Bakh-meteff is quoted as rejoicing in the op-portunity offered by a McCormick recital of hearing good music without running the fatal chance of having to patronize Teu-

The fact that the much-discussed St. Cyrs had taken the Luttrell house had almost been forgotten, so quiet had they cept themselves since their arrival, when was announced a few days ago that r. Rhinelander Stewart, Mrs. St. Cyr's son, would stop on his way up from Aiken and make them a visit.

The Mitchell Harrisons, of Philadelphia and Virginia and Washington, apparently do not find March in the country entirely pleasant, as they are up here every few days. They came up about the middle of the week, expecting to stay over Sunday at the Willard.

Miss Dorothy Aleshire is spending sevenseral weeks in Philadelphia, while her parents, Major General and Mrs. Aleshire, are down at Hot Springs. She was to visit Miss Katherine Gage and expected later to be the guests of Mrs. Thomas ater to be the guests of Mrs. Thomas A. later to be the guests of Mrs. Inomas A. Scott Thropp. The latter, with her hun-alge band, has been visiting her parents, Dr. has and Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, here in Washington, and has been gladly welin Washington, and has been gladly wel-comed by her many old friends, for Rebekah Wilmer was one of the most opular of Washington's younger set.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Thropp, senior, is entertaining her daughter, Mrs. Huger, from New York, and the Thropp family seems to be gathered in Washington.

Roxborough Miss Estelle Sacks, of 6937 Ridge avenue, will give a luncheon and shower tomorrow for Miss Bernice H. Block. whose marriage to Mr. David B. De Many will take place early in April.

The members of Roxborough Lodge No. The members of MOXDOTOUGH LONG NO. 56. Independent Order of Odd Fellows, are making elaborate preparations for the celebration of the 75th aliniversary, which will take place in May. There will be two banquets, one for members only and the other to include wives and friends.
