EVENING LEDGER-PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, APRIL 11, 1916.

Evening Hedger

PUBLIC LEDGER COMPANY CYRUS H. K. CURTIS, Passinger H. Ludington, Vice President ; John C. Martin, and Transurer; Philip S. Collins, John B. Directors.

EDITORIAL BOARD: CTAUS H. E. CUATIS, Chairman, H. WHALEY Fuldiabed daug at Pustic Laborn Bullding, Independence Square, Philadelphis.

Armathing Strategy Print Strate Armathing Strategy Strat

SUBSCRIPTION TERMS for, six cents per week. By mail, postpaid Philadeiphia, except where foreign postage 4, one month, twenty five cents; one year, ars. All mail subscriptions payable in Nonce-Subscribers wishing address changed must

BELL, 3000 WALNUT REYSTONE, MAIN 3008 Dedger, Independence Square, Philadelphia.

STARS NALL MATTER.

THE AVERAGE NET PAID DAILY CIRCULA-TION OF THE EVENING LEDGER FOR MARCH WAS 110,721.

PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, APRIL 11, 1916.

What the superior man accks is in himself; what the ordinary man seeks is in others .-Confuctus.

If we continue to drive Villa southward, first thing we know he'll be invading our territory again in the Canal Zone.

"Buy, Ship, Sell via Philadelphia" may not be so high sounding as "Maneto Philadelphia," but it means business just the same.

An imitation Burbank now announces an improved Georgia watermelon. But how is it possible to improve a Georgia watermelon?

How can we expect to capture Villa while such eminent "getters" as Roosevelt, Bryan and William A. Sunday are in the list of slackers?

Wouldn't the Republicans in Congress be a little more than human if they forbore to poke fun at the Democrats for taking sugar off the free list?

A thirty-day truce has been signed in China. At the end of that time the governmental "now you see it, now you don't" will begin all over again.

The Russian Government's reported order for 10,000,000 brass rings makes us wonder whether they think this affair they have on their hands is a war or a merry-go-round.

Doctor Waite has discovered that there is a difference between confessing guilt to the newspapers of New York and pleading guilty in the courts of the same State. He decided not to.

It will be quite a disappointment to those who expect the war to end by exhaustion of men to learn that only 681,437 Germans have been killed, according to British sources of information.

Eermer Governor Stuart comes back from Diles without a Rooseveltian discovery of new and strange birds. He may find Pennsylvania a more fertile field for research in this line just now.

Baron Astor of Hever has been assessed $2$0,000 in addition to the $1,450,000 he has already paid the British Government. It will be recalled that Baron Astor of Hever left this country and became an Englishman of his Germans were repulsed. But it is not to be supposed that either the withdrawal from Bethincourt or the repulse of the invaders which followed can have any vital effect on the entire battle. Both were nibbles, and the French system of defense has been since February 21 to allow such nibbles a temporary satisfaction. Each German advance is discounted by the murderous artillery which still commands every position leading to the city of Verdun. When those positions have fallen the German objective will be gained, and not till then. Whether they will fall before another action elsewhere on the front is prepared is the question which the German high command must determine.

UNDEMOCRATIC EDUCATION

The schoolhouse is being swept clean. Some rubbish is going out. Some precious stuff is being destroyed. In the change the political purpose of American education is being forgotten. A system of education is foreshadowed in these reforms which will create a class distinction between mechanics and cultured persons. It is undemocratic and un-American and unnecessary.

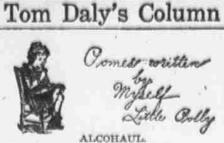

THE common, domestic broom is an instru-I ment for the sweeping together and, with the help of a dustpan, for the disposal of rubbish. No housewife, however pleased she may be with a new broom, fancies that it is just the thing for smashing pictures, tearing down draperies, or gouging the eyes out of the Apollo Belvedere in the front parlor. Not in the wildest flights of her fancy does she imagine that she will go riding on the broom over the housetops.

The exclusive reforming broom is a horse of another color. On it serious thinkers can ride to Armageddon and remake the world. The latest is the schoolhouse vacuum cleaner, highly scientific, guaranteed. It comes under the patronage of the Rockefeller Foundation and the inventor is Dr. Abraham Flexner. A little resentment has been manifested on account of the very superiority of the mechanism. But with the abundant enthusiasm of good Americans the Flayner plan has been halled as the salvation of the educational problem.

It ought to be fairly apparent, after nearly a century of experiment, that the informing reason for the American system of education is not that it makes scholars, nor proficient technical experts, nor business men, but simply good citizens. The public school is in actual fact the basis of our political system because that system presupposes the intelligence of every citizen. It is also the fundamental of our social system, because it offers a democratic springboard, from which every man may start, to finish his course in accordance with his abilities and desires.

We pay a heavy price for that equality of opportunity, for the universal basis of our existence. It is true that boys who will grow up to deal in bricks are taught a great deal about the beauty of Parlan marble. It is true that you can span the Delaware with a suspension bridge even if you do not know that Washington ever crossed that stream But it is equally true that the man who has looked on a picture of the Parthenon will build a better house, though it be of brick. And it is more important that the man who builds the bridge will vote more honestly and more intelligently if he knows why Washington once stood, with hope and resolution in his heart, where his bridge now stands.

The loss of cultural studies, of the habits and traditions of civilization, would be desolating to American life, but it would not approximate the loss to American democracy No resourceful person, gifted with a sense of history, honestly can hope to cling to our present elementary and secondary systems of education, in all their details, forever. No one questions the value of criticism and the benefits of change. But it is seriously a question for the American people to determine whether they have not been led astray, into methods and programs foreign to their very life. Has not something crept in which will corrupt the entire spirit of a democratic country? Let no man be deceived. If the modern school is to put its chief emphasis on science; if actual contacts and practical tests are to be the burden of our education, there will mevitably grow up a class which will be distinct in its habits of mind, superlor in its ability to think, because it will cherish and preserve what others discard. Behind every plan for "bringing the school into closer contact with life"-by which we mean "more immediate relations with commerce and in dustry and business"-there lurks the danger of class distinctions. You cannot hold the boy's face to the grindstone of mean fact and expect the man to walk, head erect, in the presence of great ideas. You cannot train a man to be a mechanic, giving him no inkling of other things beyond, giving him no training in the processes of thought, and expect him to sit in counsel with the mastering intelligence of men accustomed to the use of the mind. It might be thought that there is a conspiracy afoot to separate in the United States the workers and the masters. If there is, it is not the fault of our pseudo-aristocrats. It is the fault of our practical men, who are so bent on immediate results, on the cash in hand, that they are forcing another, and a superior, education on those who see greater things-see the future of America as a great international power, see education as a preparation not for business, but for life. The old system of education gives every citizen at least a chance to join this class of supermen. The new forbids it. It may sound like a vague abstraction, but the situation is the most serious problem in the social existence of the United States.

Wine is a mocker and that's all And wine is made of alcohaul So Alcohaul is just a sin Unless to wash the baby in Or in the perkolater use To make the coffee that it brews

And whiskey, too, is made of it And so no whiskey can be fit To drink and put inside of you If to yourself you would be true For alcohaul will make you wild And foolish with your soul defiled.

And what is more it makes your breath Like something that is stale in death!

THE New York Sun, says H. H. H., editorially laments moving-picture English and gives these horrible examples: "Neither mother nor I were fres to act as we

"I didn't expect to find her here. I only came "There is no man in all the world as good

All of which makes us wonder what the Sun would say had it seen a supposedly very fine movie, in which a (or an) European prince travel-ing in this country receives this telegram: "The King is seriously ill. Return at once.

"Sec. to King."

THE UNDYING PAST I've kissed a hundred girls since you, Chloc,

I've sworn to many I'd be true, Chloc;

But the kiss that I remember Was our own make, last December, And your little nose was blue, Chloe!

Your kiss will haunt me when I'm old, Chloc,

Altho' your hair's no longer gold, Chloc;

For I never shall fornet (Nay, I dream I feel it yet). Gosh! your little nose was cold, Chloat

WILL LOU.

LOST-A leather wallet, with Arthur Gray burnt on the back. Kindly return, etc. ---Classified Ad.

Sir: I'm sure you'll sympathize with Mr. Gray. It's bad enough to get lost, but to be burnt on the back is sort of heaping coals of fire; still if Mr. Grav means that he and the wallet got lost together, there's some compensation in that. McManus,

The Anagram Contest

O. I AM SECURE AND THE FITTEST Of all the nations that are; They pile up their armaments higher

- And drown in the carnage of war ; But nature intrenched me in oceans
- And set me from rivals afar; My hosts are the hearts of my people And they shall defend me from scar:

My arms are my master mechanics, Who will keep me as fair as a star. O, I AM SECURE AND THE FITTEST

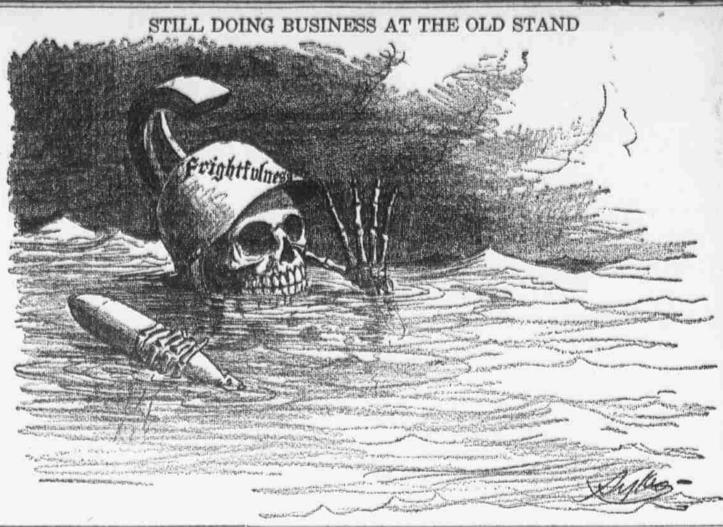

Of all of the nations that are. D. P. F.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S Deep in it. I see: call on T. R .- Presidential Elec-In it near ten years, pet-Eastern Penitentlary, To quiet run-Tourniquet.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S Con T. D., Momus' ally-'Tom Daly's Column

George Bernard Shaw Says

THERE has come into my hands from a quarter had as much to fear from England as from Germany, seeing that the rivalry between Germany and England was economic. This fear was demonstrated to have been well founded when, in 1910, the Dutch considered fortifying the mouth of the Scheldt. This could only be considered as a defense against England, and the proposal aroused a storm of wrath in England and Belgium. The Dutch had prospered through their economic alliance with

HOLLAND'S HOLD

ON INDEPENDENCE

Is Prepared, if Need Be, to Fight Off Both Sides in the Great

The Little Kingdom, Unlike Belgium,

War at the Same Time

Germany, said the English, and now they THE rising of Dutch wrath against Gerwere obeying German orders to make the river mouth impregnable. English newspapers I many over the sinking of several vessels went so far as to threaten the Dutch East has divided opinion into two extreme views Indies, the richest colony in the world. Long on the question, "Will Holland enter the before that the alliance between England and war?" One side argues that the Dutch have Japan had been a source of uneasiness to suffered nearly as much as the Belgians, have Holland, for the Japanese look with envious as much to fear from Pan-Germanic aspiraeyes upon Java and Borneo. tions, and will naturally take their place Within the last fortnight Yusaburo Take among the Allies. The other represents Holkoshi, former Minister of Education of Japan, land as greedily nursing its German market, has published an article seriously discussing so immensely lucrative now and under the the advisability of Japanese occupation of the economic alliance with Germany in the past, Dutch East Indies. "We Japanese," he says, "must devote our attention to the islands of the Pacific. Our fleet has, in consequence of the war with Germany, taken possession of island groups like the Caroline and Marshall Islands. But these are mere rocks. We cannot be proud of our possessions in the Pacific until we have Java and Sumatra." Such presumption the Dutch consider the direct result of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Prepared Against Both Sides So the Netherlanders have done what Bel-

The love of wealth has given Holland

Champions of Liberty

The Dutch are classed as a Germanic peo-English sources. ple in the same sense as the English are.

So we have the remarkable spectacle of a little nation with 500,000 men under arms gium did not do-prepared defenses against both English and Germans. The chief system of defense, the inundation of part of the country, is not so much a defense against Germany as it is a plan to make fighting of any kind impossible in that part of the lowlands. Holland refused to be a cocknit. And history proved her fears justified. The suggestions of a possible Allied raid at the heart of Germany through a sympathetic Netherlands came from

What Do You Know?

Queries of general interest will be answered in this column. Ten questions, the answers to which every well-informed person should know, are asked daily.

QUIZ

- 1. Who is Warren G. Harding? 2. In what general direction from Paris is Verdun?
- 3. What three nations took part in the partition of Poland? 4. Has America a "national flower"? 5. How many children did Napoleon I have by - his two wives? 6. What is the negro population of the United - States? What proportion of this is in the South? 7. What are "Mugwumps" and what is the - origin of the word? 8. What act of the populace started the French Revolution and what day is celebrated in
- France to commemorate it? At about what rate does sound travel?
  To what nation does the Island of Guam be-10. long?

Answers to Yesterday's Questions

- 1. David Garrick, an English actor, who was born in 1717 and died in 1779. 2. The consolidation of the towns in the county
- with the city took place in 1854. 35 The Fenians formed an association in New York in 1857 with the purpose of over-throwing English domination in Ireland.

4. Jerusalem. King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia.

- 6. Empire State, Jersey Blue State, Blue Hen State.
- 7. It is a river in Colombia, which has been considered as part of a proposed canal to connect the Atlantic and Pacifie Oceans.
- "Pyrrhie victory" is a too costly victory, the allusion being to the victory of Pyrrhus over the Romans, in which his losses were greater than his enemy's.

Wilson received 6,293,019 votes; Taft, 10, No. 3,484,956; Roosevelt, 4,119,507. The majority of all others combined over Wilson was 2,430,594.

Medical Celebrities

Editor of "What Do You Know"-Can you mention five doctors who were medical celebrities and so promising in the future whether Germany wids or loses. In a word, the Dutch are represented either as heroes or as misers.

ditch type and the canny clutch on riches. It is true that the Dutch have often seemed to need the stimulus of fear of financial loss to make them fight, but this does not explain their unconquerable tenacity in war, The man who is all merchant does not fight to the last ditch. He makes terms, fatty degeneration of the soul in more than one period, but the best proof of Indelible Dutch manhood is that the little patch of country at the mouth of the Rhine, composed of mud and silt brought down by the rivers from the highlands of Germany through the centuries, has never yielded its nationality in the 200 years of Prussian expansion.

The mistake in both cases is natural. No nation has developed in such an even balance insistence upon liberty of the die-in-the-last-

Not the least terrifying page for the Eng lish to read in "Hindenburg's March into London." the latest German book of prophetic fiction, is that which says the invaders will treat the conquered islanders with true German benevolence.

That non-magnetic ship on which some Carnegle investigators have circumnavigated the globe will not be in demand by candidates for the presidency this year. They want something which will be drawn irresistibly by the magnet in Washington.

There is more joy among English inventors over the capture of that new Fokker plane, Germany's latest contribution to aerial science, than over the loss of a hundred machines with their pilots. Men and machines are cheap compared with ideas.

My! Won't old Robert W. Chambers be mad when he hears about Meredith Nicholson's appointment as Assistant Secretary of War? As a writer of best sellers Mr. Chambers is vastly superior to Mr. Nicholson, 'He has not, however, progressed with the years, for his early work alone entitles him to consideration as a serious writer or thinker. Mr. Nicholson, after years of money-makers, at last attempted a novel of daily life in the Middle West, and wrote entertainingly on social and literary problems. As for the War Office, that is entirely another matter. Mr. Chambers has written the better stories of love and arms and the man.

The decision of the Storthing to amend the law so that women will have the right to sit in the Norwegian Council of State, or Cab-Inet, is another step forward in the hardcarned advance of the suffragists. No new group is thus added to the ranks of women who have the vote, but every victory of this rind, no matter whore it is gained, will have He effect in this and every other country in which equal suffrage rights are not granted to all women. Suffrage is in the realm of interintional politics-it is never merely a local islun. In this campaign an argument that holds good in Norway, or China, or Timbuotoo, can be used with equal effect in Massachusetts, Iowa or Pennsylvania.

The battle about Verdun began this week with what appears, in the ordinary strategy of war, a serious setback for the French. The exacuation of a sulient which bent the enemy's itnes sail which they had been holding at trumsadous cost was certainly unpalatable to the French command, and the efforts to explain it by French critics are not entirely satisactory. A better retort came in the swiftly folowing nows of a recoup and of another stumbling block put in the way of the advancing The Bethincourt salient on the west of the Meuse was a sharp angle on both they of which the flormans pressed heavily forfare they could crush in the sides or sursund the orien back of the angle the French - incuing an important actillary post, that and her manned speed to attank. There the

RUBBING IT IN

----

THE events of the past weeks have made a certain conclusion inescapable. It is that Germany's U-boat campaign is what it is in contempt and defiance of the United States. The proof of that has been somewhat distorted by conflicting accounts, but essentially it remains sound. When Germany temporarily gave up her submarine activity in deference to the views of this country, critics of the Administration gave it out that Germany had yielded only because England had destroyed all the German submarines. Now we know that England did nothing of the sort and is incupable of protecting her commerce from whatever U-boats Germany has built or may build.

The resumption of torpedoing vessels with out warning now is a direct answer to the United States. Germany found that she could not do without that weapon, not even for us. Hor pledges are waste paper and her denials, as in the Sussex case, sound strangely unconvincing from her lips. Day by day the danger to this country and to every neutral country increases. It is clear now that the German menace to the rights of noncombatants on the seas cannot be met by reason or Justice. It is for the Government of this country to devise another way,

It was not meant to reach a certain address "To the Men and Women of the Irish Race in America," which is so typical of the stuff which gives its title to this article ("Irish Nonsense About Ireland") that I feel moved, in the interests of my unfortunate countrymen in Ireland, to offer America a piece of my mind concerning it. As an Irishman I have been familiar with Irish patriotic rhetoric all my life. Personally I have had no use for it, because I always wanted to get things done and not to let myself go for the satisfaction of my temper and the encouragement of my already excessive national selfconceit. I have seen it going out of fashion with the greatest relief.

When something like an Irish national theatre was established in Abbey street, Dublin, and a genuine Irish drama began to germinate, I enjoyed the new Irish plays because the heroes always brought down the house by declaring that they were sick of Ireland, by expressing an almost savage boredom at the expense of the old patriots who were usually the fools of the piece when they were not the villains, and, generally, by damning the romantic Old Ireland up hill and down dale in the most exhilarating fashion .-- In New York Times.

> IT NEVER COULD HAPPEN. "As pretty as her picture," she By all her friends is known; And yet, of course, she couldn't be As pretty as her own.

Overheard at a Five O'Clock Tea VE received 85 per cent, of them already." "Well, what about the other 85 per cent.?"

"He was speaking in some foreign tongue that I couldn't understand at all. Oh, I caught a word here and there, such as 'Deo volente' -of course, I knew that was French!"

"I'll meet you in a quarter of an hour." "Let's see, that's only 15 minutes, isn't it?" -Hugh Merr.

FTHE Racquet Club, beyond peradventure, has the most varied assortment of athletes. active and mossback, to be found under one roof in this or any other city. They have heavy-weights, middle-weights, welter-weights and so on down to the tiniest, and they have one who is in a class all by himself. His real monicker doesn't matter; he is known athletically as "The Battling Birdseed."

COY THING. "And hast thou ever loved before?"

He asked; "I pray thee, speak!" She blushed. Her sweet eyes sought the floor; She answered: "Not this week." A Grouch.

Beautiful Snow The snowdrops of Spring Fall today from the skies.

Kind is April to bring The anoudrops of Spring, And from heaven! the thing Is the biggest surprise. The snowdrops of Spring Fall today from the skies Anna Graham Scoutz-W.

Racially they are probably closer to the English than to the Germans, if any one still cares to speculate about racial affinities after the dismal explosion of the Pan-Germanists' theory of where "Teuton England's" sympathies would lie. But from Friesland, the northern province of the Netherlands, comes our English sneech. In Friesland today they say "come here," "go on," "back," "on board." They construct sentences as the English speaking peoples do. They pronounce "bread," "butter," "water" and "cheese," fundamentals on which a man can go a long way without feeling faint, pretty much as we do.

But the greatest bond between the Englishspeaking peoples and the Dutch is the free institutions which both have been ready to hold to the last drop of blood. The great war of the pygmy against the giant, in which the pygmy won-the war against Spain at the height of Spanish power-was not a religious war, though the Spanish Inquisition played so important a part in it. It was a war for local self-government, against "taxation without representation." Following that the Dutch for 215 years maintained a republic to the loathing of all the autocratic monarchs of Europe. One William of Orange stopped the Spanish monarchy's menace to Europe in the sixteenth century. Another William of Orange broke the Stuart autocracy in England a century later and was at the same time King of England and President of the Dutch Republic. He formed an alliance which undermined and led to the defeat of the ambitions of Louis XIV of France, the Kaiser of his day. In no other individual could the spirit of Dutch national character he studied to better advantage than in the life of William III, Dutch King of England. For he not only carried personal heroism to the point of leading his troops (he was wounded more than once), but he also freed the activities of the commercial classes of England, which thereafter were to govern that country.

Effects of Too Much Success

In fact, in the 18th century the spreading trade of England robbed the Dutch of the commercial supremacy they had gained. At the same time the duiling effects of wealth had their effect on the governing classes. Luxury, extravagance and loose morals prevailed. Fat, pudgy faces appeared on the canvases of portrait painters instead of the strong, serious faces of the earlier heroic time. The office of stadtholder, or "president." became hereditary in the House of Orange and thus paved the way for monarchy. But all this did not taint the spirit of the people at large. The Dutch were the first to salute the American fing in 1776, and materially aided the American Revolution with loans aggregating $14,000,000. Four of our original 13 States were first settled by Dutchmen, and the principles for which Washington fought stirred the sympathy of Holland.

Today the Dutch are a fundamentally demo cratic people. They govern themselves. The great point about the so-called "self-control of the Dutch Government" in not getting into the war has been that there no government could make up the people's minds for them understood clearly at the time of Eng mad's anti-German panio of 1999 that they ready to fight off both sides at once. didly as Belgium has acted, what would not have been the effect on the history of the great war if the Belgian guns had been turned simultaneously against Germany and France? Could the other neutral countries have resisted such an appealing situation and withheld their armed support of such sincere neutrals?

FOR PEACE OR WAR

It has long been evident, though the fact has not yet made its due impression, that in-dustrialism is the modern training school for war or peace. It is there that men are actually thinking of one another in terms of war or peace. It is there that they learn to organize for or against one another. The lockout and the strike are distinctly warlike measures. Arbitration is a term of war, the most advanced term looking toward peace, but still presupposing a state of warfare. Co-operation, in some one of its manifold forms, is the only distinctive term of peace. It is such, not simply because it im-plies sympathetic action, but because it educates all concerned in "those sobrieties on which democracy must at last rest." As we recall how many persons are in the training school of in dustrialism, how early they enter it and how long they remain in it, and how various and how influential are the experiences through which they pass, we can see how far back the peace movement must reach in its educative work. What can we hope to accomplish in the training of our diplomats for carrying out the policy of universal peace, if we cannot train ou captains of industry, in the ranks both of cap-ital and of labor, to think and to act in the terms of peace?--William J. Tucker, in the Atlantic.

ANOTHER WAR MYSTERY

We observe that the Germans are using liquid fire against the French. What we want to know is, how do the North Carolina moonshiners man-age to get the stuff to the Germans through that blockade?-Houston Post.

A JOKE ON MARK

St. Louis burglars stole a statue of Mark Twain. How Mark would have enjoyed that!-Detroit Free Press.

NATIONAL POINT OF VIEW

Mr. Taft has certainly done more than his share, even as an ex-President. In educating Americans in the duty of preparedness.-New York Sun.

The man who "makes the selling of hats an exercise in transcendental philosophy" may be an amusing person, but he is groping in the right direction.—Taconga Tribune.

The Congress of the United States, at work upon a program of legislation for preparednass, may read into the dispatches from The Hague a meaning for America as plain as day. The Netherlands is ready, but the United States is not.—Cleveland Plain Dealer,

It is fortunate on many accounts that in the The forther matters the Japanese war scars has been forgotten. If the war in Europe is to be credited with no other service, it has at least distracted American attention from a jot of imaginary troubles in the Orient.—Des Moines Register.

Mr. Hughes is in a position in which he can-not directly let the people know what he thicks on the subjects concerning which a candidate's thoughts ought to be known to the people. But if his name is to go before the Republican con-vention it ought to so preceded by an announce-ment, made indirectly if need be but with au-thority, of what he believes and provid down Chinago Tribula.

n the world from olden times until the present century who are widely known and appreciated in medical science? Te are the best Tell also their nationality. I know only these: Baccelli, Italian; Olsen, Swede: Jacoby, American: Barrere, French: Hippocrates, Greek. What was the great-est work of some of the moderns? P. A. S.

Herophilus, Greek; Rhazes, Arabian; Leonicenus, Italian; Fuchs, German; Harvey, English; Boerhaave, Dutch. The 19th century was one of epoch-making discoveries. Laennee invented the stethoscope, and thereby instituted a comthe stemoscope, and thereby instituted a com-plete revolution in the methods of physical diag-nosis; Virchow founded modern cellular pathol-ogy; Pasteur, by his studies in fermentation and putrefaction, prepared the way for the germ theory of disease; Lister gave to surgery the antiseptic treatment of wounds.

Owen Meredith

Editor of "What Do You Know"-Will you kindly tell me the name of the poet who wrote the following lines:

a pleasure borh of every pain, There is a The grave of all things hath its violet ANON.

The line is, "There is a pleasure that is born of pain." It is from Owen Meredith's "The Wan-derer," Book I, Prologue.

Where Cents Are Coined

Editor of "What Do You Know"-I noticed re-cently in your column the statement that the Philadelphia Mint is the only one coining cents and "nickels." Although the case for many years, since 1909 the Denver and San Francisco Mints, at least, have also coined them. I inclose a rubbing of a cent from the Denver Mint, showing the letter D-the Denver Mint mark-just below the date. When the mint mark occurs on the 'Buffalo nickel" it is just beneath the words "Five Cents." COLLECTOR.

Cost of Stock Exchange Seats

Editor of "What Do You Knaw"--Will you kindly inform me as to the cost of membership in the Stock Exchanges of Baltimore and Cin-cinnati. the New Orleans Cotton Exchange and the Philadelphia Stock Exchange? What is the record high price for a seat on the New Stock Exchange? A. E o New York A. E. T.

The cost of membership in the Baltimore Ex-change is about $3500; Cincinnati, $2300; in the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, $2000, and in the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, $3900. The high-est price paid for a New York Exchange seat was $95,000, in 1905 and 1906.

Light-ankled Youth

Editor of "What Do You Know"-Will you please let me know who wrote the line, "Where art thou gone, light-ankied Youth?" Is it in a poem too long for you to publish?

It is the first line of "Where Youth Goes," by Walter Sayage Landor. Here is the poem:

Where art thou gone, light-ankled Youth? With wings on either shoulder, And smile that never left thy mouth

Until the hours grew colder.

Then some one seems to whisper near That thou and I must part; I doubted it, I fait no fear, No weight upon the heart.

If aught befell it. Love was by And rolled it off again: So if there ever was a sigh, "Twas not a sigh of gain.

I may not call thee back, but thou Returnsth when the hand Of gentle Sleep waves o'er my brow His happy-created wand.

Then smiling eyes band over ming Then line once pressed invite: ut Slasp bath siven a silent sign, And both, slass date diffet.