

DAK HORSES HAVE GOOD CHANCE TO WIN 1916 PENNANTS IN MAJOR LEAGUES

ALL TEAMS IN BIG LEAGUES HAVE GOOD OPPORTUNITY TO CAPTURE FLAGS THIS YEAR

Poor Pitching Has Featured the Work of American League So Far - Phillies' Hurlers Are Strong

THE major league baseball campaigns are not quite two weeks old, but it already has become apparent that there is an excellent chance for "dark horses" in the two major league pennant races.

The American League race has been featured, or perhaps it would be better to say marred, by the miserable pitching of supposedly strong staffs.

In the National League the hurling has been even worse. The Philly pitchers are all in wonderful shape, and there has not been one poorly pitched game to date, the lone defeat being a 2-1-10-inning battle with the Giants.

With a pitching staff like Moran has there apparently is little chance for a long slump, but in the American League there is no pitching staff so well fortified with reserve strength unless it is the Browns.

Detroit and Chicago, the two most powerful teams in the league, if not in the entire country, barring pitching, still appear to be handicapped by the erratic and inferior work of the hurlers.

There is little doubt that both teams will be in the fight at the finish, but they will have a hard task overhauling a "dark horse" with good pitching unless their own pitchers strike their proper stride soon.

Work of Local Teams Pleasing to Fans The work of the Phillies and Athletics during the past week was most encouraging. The National League champions completed a perfect week, winning every game played.

After the Mackmen had lost five straight games on the road and had been "roasted" by the pessimists the fans expected to see a miserable aggregation resigned to its fate, with last place staring it in the face again.

President Tener Makes Ridiculous Claim President Tener, of the National League, declared that the shortstops of the senior league outclass those of the American League.

Manager Herzog, of the Brooklyn team, has been looking about the country for a shortstop to replace O'Mara, who he declares is hopeless.

Art Fletcher was a fine ball player for two seasons and then started to slide. His playing last season was not of major league calibre, and unless his work in this city was misleading Fletcher is no better this year.

In ranking Herzog, Bancroft and Maranville as the leading shortstops of the country Tener probably echoed the sentiments of the majority of fans, but there are many managers, including Connie Mack and Fielder Jones, who believe that Ray Chapman would outclass the field if he was given an opportunity to play with a winning team and one which is playing up-to-date ball.

Interest in Minor Cities Presages Wonderful Year Last spring we called to the attention of the fans that the pulse of the baseball public can be felt in the minor league field better than in major league cities.

This year conditions are just the opposite. There has not been so much enthusiasm shown or such good crowds in minor league cities since 1908, which was the banner year of baseball, all leagues considered.

Of all the old and established leagues there is only one which apparently is due for a poor season, and that is the International. This is entirely due to the poor policies of President Barrow.

Manager Herzog, of the Reds, may have solved his second base problem by accident. Needing a player to fill in for the Yanigans, who played Youngstown a few days ago, Herzog used Mollwitz at second, with a catcher filling in at first.

Another minor leaguer who was tied to a Federal League contract when peace was made may be purchased by a major league team if he continues to slug as he has in the first week of the American Association season.

The death of Firmin Cassagnol, the French billiardist, in New York last night came as a great shock to the many friends he made in this country.

Pennsylvania's victory over Swarthmore was nothing to brag about, as it was a poorly played game. It was, however, a tribute to the excellent coaching of Roy Thomas, who has a habit of turning out winning teams with poor material.

MAC K TO HAVE STRONG PITCHING STAFF FOR 1917

Crowell, Myers and Nabors Have Proved Worth as Good Hurlers

OTHERS SHOW PROMISE

By CHANDLER D. RICHTER

Local fans were greatly surprised at the splendid showing made by two of Mack's young pitchers in their first local appearance against the Red Sox.

Elmer Myers and Jack Nabors made great impressions on the fans by trimming the Red Sox in nice style and MI Crowell, the Brown University lad, is certain to make a greater hit.

When the youngsters were being bagged everything the heaviest platoon had to do to all parts of the field we ventured the prediction that Mack had three young pitchers who were going to be mainstays of the new year, and who would develop into hurlers almost as great as the leading trio of the famous 1910 to 1914 staff.

Nabors Is Surprise Crowell, Myers and Ray were the youngsters mentioned with Nabors as a wonderful prospect for the future. Nabors has surprised Mack, Davis and Thomas by developing much faster than was expected, and he will be permitted to gain the experience he needs so badly in regular games.

Myers also has made his debut and pitched a hit with the fans. Crowell pitched even better against New York than Myers and Nabors did against the Red Sox, but he lost his game, 2 to 1, through errors of his teammates.

Crowell appears to be further advanced than any of the youngsters, and he is looked upon as the successor to Jack Coombs, Ray's disposition is an asset in some respects, but it also is holding him back, as he is inclined to be lazy and does not learn fast enough to suit his tutors.

Ray has absolutely everything any other southpaw has, and a disposition which makes it impossible to worry or rattle. Ray's disposition is an asset in some respects, but it also is holding him back, as he is inclined to be lazy and does not learn fast enough to suit his tutors.

Sheehan Looks Good Tom Sheehan made an excellent impression last season and he probably will improve greatly. Tom is slow rounding into form and it is still a trifle early to figure just what are his possibilities.

Nothing disrupts a team or destroys its ginger and fighting spirit so quickly as unintelligent pitching, and there will be plenty of it at Shibe Park this season. The natural talent is there, however, and the fans can rest assured that Mack will have a young pitching staff which will rival any in the country when the 1917 season opens.

NEWS FROM THE ALLEYS

The Quaker City League teams have three more series to roll. The Underdown team, winner of the Section A tourney of the Artisan League, will roll off with Northwestern, No. 2 team, champion of the Section B series, next Wednesday night on Keystone alleys for the championship of the league.

The Color Press three-man team is leading the 'Cartle' League, a single game ahead of 'Frying,' having won 12 out of 20 games.

The members of the champion Quaker squad who won the National Association championship have received their diamond studded gold medal watch fobs.

Tigers, led by George Hill, have a chance to beat out Wyndham and Maneto in the second half of the Quaker City League race.

Liberty Bell again is heading the Philadelphia League tournament and unless soon stopped will very likely again win the championship of that league.

It will cost the bowlers who enter the city championships $1 a man in each event. The championship trophies and cash prizes, however, promise to be well worth striving for.

President Tom Jones, of the Atlantic Coast Association, expects to have many prizes to give the winning squads in the coming city championships.

Champion Is Slipping, While His Opponent Is Going Up—Kaufman and Tendler at Olympia

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

EVERY once in a while a big class boxer who is breezing along nicely and fattening the bankroll with receipts grabbed from battles with third-raters and has been, runs up against a tough customer, takes a clip on the chin and wakes up to find that he has lost out.

Harry Edwards, who is sojourning at Hot Springs, made a futile attempt to sign the boxers for a battle at the Olympia next month, but was halted by the weight question. Edwards guaranteed Ernie $2000 for his share and was willing to do better for Williams if he would affix his signature to the articles. However, the champion did not appear anxious to appear as a legitimate bantam and the stuff was off.

Next Friday night, Ferocious Ferdinand Fulton mixes with Al Reich in New York in the first elimination match to seek an opponent for Jess Willard. Al Ferdinand has to do is to knock-out Reich, Jim Coffey and Frank Moran and he will be selected as the champion's next set up. Fulton has been training in New York at two bits a throw and the cash customers report that he is in very fine shape. He has a good punch in either mit and hopes to dispose of his opponent in one of the earlier rounds.

Moran at Work Frank Moran has started work for his bout with Carl Morris at Tulsa, Okla., on Decoration Day. Francis Charles receives more $20,000 or more for his share of the purse, which goes to show that boxing isn't such a brutal sport, after all.

Adam Ryan, boxer, trainer, matchmaker, referee and club owner, makes his debut tomorrow night in the new Ryan A. C. at 11th and Spring Garden. A good card is billed for the opening performance with Young Jack Toland and Harry Smith in the windup. Adam is not superstitious and admitted it today. He says that the old Spring Garden and Douglas A. C. Jinx is ruined forever and now is the time to step in and make good. Ryan will do all of the refereeing.

Champion Rehig Shoots Koffroth SPRING VALLEY, Pa., April 24.—John L. Rehig, live bird champion of Berks County, successfully defended his title in a 20-bird shoot with Monroe F. Koffroth here. Rehig grassed all and Koffroth missed two.

Bill at Olympia Speaking of riots, there will be a small one at the Olympia tonight when Benny Kaufman and Lew Tendler put on their return engagement in the windup. The boys battled a couple of weeks ago and Benny won by a wide margin. He shook Tendler considerably in the first round and Lew did not recover until the sixth stanza, when he got home some damaging wallops. Tonight Tendler is out to make up for his first bad start and Mr. Kaufman should have a busy evening on his hands.

Johnny Mealey meets Mickey Dunley in one of the earlier bouts and should put on a good battle. Johnny has been training hard of late and is in good condition. William Jackson and Leo Roux are billed
