WOMEN ROOKIES OF CITY TO LEAVE FOR CAMP TODAY

Twenty-four Philadelphia Recruits to Take Up Chevy Chase Work

200 "VETERANS" QUIT

By a Staff Correspondent. CHEVY CHASE, Md., May 15.—The first two weeks of the Chevy Chase Military Camp for Women, the first of its kind in the world's history, will come to a close tonight.

Tomorrow morning women from many States will begin to assemble for the second two weeks of the camp. Philadelphia is to have a much larger delegation during the second two weeks than it did during the first session. There were five the first half of the month, while 24 have paid up for the coming two weeks, and are expected here within the next 24 hours.

Among the women from Philadelphia who are expected here today to take up the work in the camp for the coming two weeks are: Miss Georgene G. Butler, Ryal; Miss Caroline R. D. Baird, West Chester; Mrs. Clarence Wyatt Biepham, 4220 Pine street; Miss Amy Develin, Overbrook; Miss Rebekah Ward Elliot, 5148 Hazel avenue; Miss Caroline English, 2108 Spruce street; Miss Katherine W. Field, 1818 Spruce street; Miss Marion D. Grant, St. James place; Miss Josephine Hayden, 5955 Woodbine avenue; Mrs. A. B. Hubbard, Jenkintown; Miss Emily G. Huff, 2027 Upland way; Miss Catherine M. Leung, 2304 Spruce street; Miss Alice Logan, West Chester; Miss Anne Lewis, Moreland avenue, Chestnut Hill; Miss Elsie Newbold, 2331 St. James place; Miss Sophie B. Norris, 2104 Locust street; Miss Dorothy Oberkupper, Haverford; Miss Sarah G. Parks, West Chester; Miss Elizabeth Smucker, Overbrook; Miss Marion Field Sharpless, Wyncoote; Mrs. Henry Miller Wolfe, Ogontz; Mrs. Channing Way, West Chester; Mrs. Carl Williams, School House lane and Greene street, Germantown.

WHAT THEY HAVE LEARNED.

Today 200 unburned feminine rookies from 15 States are packing their belongings and going back to their homes. They have finished their two weeks' course. They have learned to knit and learned the first rudiments of wig-wagging and telegraphy and wireless. They have learned the principles of caring for the sick, and they have learned how to bandage and many other things that they never thought they could possibly learn to do in two weeks.

One pretty little blonde, who two weeks ago had the time of her young life trying to learn how to manage a knitting needle to make a surgical sponge, is jubilant today because she has "acted" like a soldier in many things which she never felt herself capable of doing.

She is only one of many, and all feel that the two weeks have been for them of a deep significance for them. They have learned to know that clothes do not make the woman. They have acquired a new respect for the woman who toils. They have a deeper feeling of love and respect for the wonderful big nation, of which they are a part.

PLANS SIMILAR CAMPS.

Expression from the various rookies as they left the camp today bound for their respective homes carried without a doubt that the girls feel the camp was worth while. They are enthusiastic about the experiences of camp life. They say they are going home to tell their friends about the camp and the things they have learned at Chevy Chase, and they declare they are going to do all in their power to start similar camps in their home towns.

The girls who are arriving now for the second two weeks of camp are in marked contrast to those who have been here for the last two weeks. Those who are leaving today have well-tanned skins and they walk with a swing, which shows they have been in khaki uniforms and have become used to the low heels required in camp. But the new "rookies" still have snow-white necks and hands. Their manured nails have not lost their lustre and they still take a mincing step caused to a certain degree by the high heels to which they have been accustomed during their years of life in the social circles to which they belong.

CRISIS FIGHT; STARTS PANIC

Women Clash Over Theatre Seat—Yell Mistaken for "Fire"

NEW YORK, May 15.—When two women in the Lucky Star Theatre, a moving-picture house at 8th street and 1st avenue, got into an argument over the possession of a seat last night some careless person in the audience yelled "Fire!"

When the audience mistook the cry for "Fire!" and started rushing for the exits, the manager of the house, Joseph Kaufman, ordered order, but not before most of his patrons had fled.

On reaching the street rang a fire alarm, and in a few minutes fire apparatus gathered up to the door.

During the excitement Mrs. Dora Maslak, 64 East 11th street, was arrested on a charge of Deputy Sheriff Joseph Arnold of the women said to have been sitting in the seat controversy. She was taken up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Dynamite Storehouse Burned

MEDICANTVILLE, May 15.—Fire last night destroyed the warehouse of the J. S. Dynamite Company. More than 100,000 pounds of dynamite was stored in the building, but dynamite carried out the explosion before the flames reached it. The cause of the fire is believed to be a charcoal stove which was overturned. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

Father of Slayer Reads News of Tragedy in Morning Paper Here

Harry Ernst, 55 years old, of 1716 North Marshall street, for some reason arose earlier than usual today and went to a nearby store to purchase a newspaper. He put it in his pocket, strolled back to the house and started to read the latest news while awaiting his wife's call for breakfast. The first thing that caught his eye in the paper was the fact that his 24-year-old son, William H. Ernst, is under arrest in Pittsburgh, accused of killing his attractive young wife.

The father hardly could believe his eyes at first. He almost collapsed and hardly had recovered from the first shock when the door bell rang and a telegram from Pittsburgh with details of the tragedy was handed him. His wife realized at once that something was wrong. She became hysterical and is now under the care of neighbors. Her condition is critical.

"Can it be true?" she wailed pitifully. "Willie did have a bad temper, and I heard only recently that he and his wife had separated, but I cannot believe that he would do anything like that. They say even that he shot her five times while she was in her mother's arms." This is the second severe shock Mrs. Ernst has had in the past few years; her youngest son died of convulsions in New York on the street, only a year or so ago.

WAITED AT THEATRE

Young Ernst was employed as a freight conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad. His father works at the Reading coal piers in this city. While accounts of the shooting are not definite as yet, Mr. Ernst believes that his son was driven insane by the thought that his wife had gone to the theatre with another man. He bought a revolver, it is said, and awaited the couple at the theatre exit, but missed them in the crowd. He then went to the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Estella Walsh, 84 Estella street, Pittsburgh, and awaited his wife there. Young Mrs. Ernst had been living with her mother since leaving her husband some months ago.

As soon as he saw his wife coming up the steps, Ernst drew his five times as she was rushing into her mother's arms. He then tried to turn the weapon on himself, but his mother-in-law had grappled with him, and the weapon fell to the floor during the struggle. The police arrived almost

MARRIED SHORT TIME

The young wife is described as tall, vivacious and extremely attractive. Mrs. Harry Ernst, in this city, said she saw her only once, when they visited their parents at North Marshall street, last Christmas. Her son, Mrs. Ernst says, had a jealous disposition. The couple evidently had not been happy together. They had been married only a short time, but separated some months ago.

One of the pathetic incidents of the tragedy is the fact that young Ernst and his wife, before separation, had adopted a little girl baby. Mrs. Ernst, in this city, had welcomed the news by mail last March. A little later, she said, her daughter-in-law had written her that "Willie" was not well and had been unemployed for some time. Only recently, however, Robert Wilson, a plumber, of 7th street and Columbia avenue, a friend of the Ernst family, went to Pittsburgh with the Stenogram. Wilson said he met "Willie" on the street and that he had walked part of the way with the paraders. "Willie" looked fit as a fiddle, he handed him. She was well dressed and sent back glowing messages to his parents in this city.

Young Ernst's wife, before her marriage, was Miss Cora Walsh. She was 22 years old. The identity of her escort to the theatre has not been revealed. He is thought to have left her at the street corner near her home. The slayer's father is making arrangements to go to his son in Pittsburgh today. His mother expressed an ardent desire to go alone, but her condition is said to be too critical.

Wilmington Gets $1800 for Home

WILMINGTON, Del., May 15.—It was announced last night that the "Pousse Cafe," the most pretentious production ever given by Wilmington society people, would total a net profit of $1800. The production was given for the benefit of the Home of Merciful Rest. Prizes for the most popular participants were awarded to the nurses and keepers' chorus and the "nuts" chorus. The popularity cup went to the box trotters' chorus.

PHILADELPHIANS LOSERS IN U. S. COURT STRUGGLE

Fight Against Sale of Railroad on Judge's Ruling

PITTSBURGH, May 15.—In the United States District Court today Judge Orr, in Trust Company, trustee under the Bankers' gauge bonds of the Wabash Pittsburgh Terminal Railroad Company, said that the sale of the property would be ordered to take place within the immediate future, or, say, several months.

The Court will later set a date and direct the master to go ahead with the sale. This will bring about the reorganization. Alexander and Meeren appeared as counsel for the Bankers' Trust Company and Samuel C. Cannon represented the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, which holds the receivers' certificates.

The court granted a request that the upset price be reduced from the figure originally named, but the lowered amount will be determined later.
