SING HO! FOR GRANDMA, SHE'S IN AGAIN, SAYS M'LISS

Even the Dancing Masters, in Face of the Modern Enthusiasm for the Old-fashioned, Have Reverted to the Waltz and Polka

TRESENTLY we shall be danging the minuet. I am quite convinced of it. Grandma did, you know, long, long Ago. And grandma is in tremendous Pogue again.

Grandma wore hoops and pantalettes and side-laced shoes and fingerless mittens and poke bonnets. She also carried a feather fan and sported a beauty patch,

How much at home the old lady would feel in the shops today! There is scarcely an article that she considered necessary to her toilette or house furnishing that has not its modern duplicate. Even the old Windsor chairs that she sat in and the hit-or-miss patterned rag rug that she put her dainty feet upon are here again.

But alas for the present-day grandma! Just when she had decided to kick up her common-sense heels and have a glorious and unrestricted fling, sans corsets and mans mid-Victorian impositions, along comes Dame Fashion with a prohibitory

And presto! before grandma had learned to inhale the smoke from her cigarette she found herself back again in the traces, hooped and stayed and beribboned-her new-found freedom snuffed out as suddenly as a burnt-out are light.

Even the dancing masters have realized the incongruity of teaching a primly garbed feminine world such hoydenish nity, not abandon, is the watchword. At a recent gathering of terpsichorean experts it was decided to hark back to the old days, the two-step and the waltz to be used as a transposition medium so that none might die of shock.

Only a short while ago we were bunnyhugging and turkey-trotting with a proxlimity to our partners that caused the Puritans to blush and governmental institutions such as the Naval Academy to lay down distance regulations.

"Partners must be at least six inches apart," was the rule put into effect at the forward marches. May we be endowed Academy hops.

"The Son of Targan," now running in the Beasts of the Son of the Company of the Targan and the Targan and "The Beasts of Targan"—which have appeared in this paper, are published by A. C. McClurg.

And sharp-eyed instructors did not hesltate to enforce the mandate when for getfulness or deflant dancers minimized the six inches to three or one.

But now that the pendulum has started to swing in the other direction, who is there to stop it? At a recent dance in Philadelphia I saw several of the guests deliberately execute an old-fashioned waltz to syncoputed music that was obviously meant for the lame duck.

For some of us there are rocks ahead After having limped and ducked and dipped in our own particular fashion for several seasons past, how are we going to achieve the easy grace of the old-fash ioned waltz, which in reality is based on a series of extremely intricate steps?

And the stately figures of the minuet. which is the logical concomitant of the beauty patch and the hooped skirt, how s that to be managed? When your partner has been permitted to clutch you in a sort of terpsichorean half-nelson it will be difficult matter for him to remember that the new dances, which are, of course, the very old dances, demand that he only touch you with the verlest finger-tip. How, too, after having jumped and trotted and wabbled, are we to acquire the equilibrium necessary for a deep and wellpolsed curtsey?

If only grandma had not temporarily succumbed to the modernists! Perhaps dances as the fox-trot or the canter. Dig- then she could have taught us these buried secrets. But alas! Even grandma herself is saving her pennies for the danc ing masters. We have got to learn all over again. The Vernon Castles and the Maurices are making ready to take our money. The strains of the Beautiful Blue Danube and the Virginia Reel will drown out those of the Ratchy-Koo and the Shindy Lou.

A bas the trot and the hug! Enter the waltz and the minuet. But heaven protect us from the lancers-that brain con fusing, foot-bemusing jumble of bows and with the strength to resist it. M'LISS, Thank you for your suggestion regarding my picture. Perhaps some day I'll act upon it.

The Corner has repeatedly explained The Corner has repeatedly explained to correspondents whom it would fain serve that it has absolutely nothing to do with the care of the skin and hair. Freckles are clean out of its province. I thought nobody minded them in this age of physical culture. Girls no longer swathe their faces in thick veils when they drive, ride or walk. A girl who should wind a double tissue veil about her head to protect her complexion while playing golf or tennis would be ridiculed unmercifully. What matter if a few freckles left by the sun's kisses dot cheeks tanned by the wind and made rosy by the sunshine so long as the complexion be glowing and clear with health? Lemon and salt or anything that makes the teeth sore is injurious to the enamel and ought to be avoided.

Dear Deborah Rush.—When a woman enters a car and all the seats are taken, should a man who has been working hard all day feel obliged to offer her his seat? I am a bricklayer and get very tired nights, and yet I have a feeling I should get up for a woman, I see lots of other men remain seated, and some of them look like these Styllshers who don't have to work.

HABRY. When paying visits it is a very neces when paying visits it is a very necessary thing to comply with the rules of the household in which one is a guest. One thing about which guests should be very particular is prointpness at meals. In some homes the hostess is not very strict.

According to strict effquette, a man should always offer his seat to a woman in a crowded car, but very many women refuse to accept the courtesy from a man who has been doing hard work all day. It should be left to the woman to refuse.

DEHORAH RUSH.

Things to Know

A small portable oven is a step-saver and a fuel-saver, too. If your stove—gas or coal—is going enough to heat up the top of it, but not the regular oven, you can put one of these portable ovens over the warm spot. This is enough to heat rolls or bread, and saves the extra coal or gas.

Then, too, steamer attached to the dish n which vegetables are cooked is a fuel aver. Two vegetables may be cooked with he same amount of gas and time that the one would take. There are many little things like this that the housekeeper can teach her cook. When a dish is boiling so hard that the water is bubbling, turn down the flame beneath it. Boiling heat cannot become any hotter; you will get the same results with a lower flame, and use less power.

Miss Emma Hanko, Noted Expert in Domestic Science, Tells of Waste That Can Be Prevented

"If the housewife is properly educated in the domestic science art she can do the family cooking—for the day—in two hours," is the reassuring news that Miss Emma Hanko gives Philadelphila women. Miss Hanko came all the way from faroff Wisconsin to speak at the Civic Expesition, and was glad to do so, for she feels that if her advice and experience is of service to women the trip is well worth it. A graduate of Fratt and of Columbia University, Miss Hanko is regarded by those who know as one of the most eminent cullinary experts. But she isn't all theory; in-says a thing she means it. And she means it when she says that the average housewife doesnt' know her business.

"Men aren't any more particular about their meals than women are. Every one enjoys good things. But the time will come when a man will require qualifications in domestic science just as they expect fineness and mental power in the women they marry. And they have a right to expect the woman they marry to have higher qualifications for wifehood and motherhood than they would for ordinary things, because these aren't ordinary things.

"I have been teaching domestic science

"I have been teaching domestic science for a long time, talking to 400 women a day, ranging in age from young matrons of 20 to old ones with white hair. They are very enthusiastic about learning be are very enthusiastic about learning because they realize that there is so much to know. It is such a delight to make one's own pastry, and to see the home run on a scientific, economic basis, It's as fascinating as any other hobby, only it's nobler. And when the American woman is brought to the realization of her culinary responsibility she is the most active person you ever saw. She is willing and anxious to work, she follows her lessons carefully and she develops into a perfect housewife ummer on one of the large piers in Atlantic City and is going to do so again this year. She is considered the foremost authority in her line, a teacher of teachers in the domestic science field. She carries her own cooking outfit along with her, and her makes on an average of six cakes a week, although the mysteries of puff paste, food values, chemistry, biology and economics are as A. B. C to her as well. She believes in the practical application of food theories "Social conditions are largely dependent on food conditions. Impraye the homes of on food conditions. Improve the homes of the poor, improve their food and you im-prove their standards," is the way Miss Hanko phrases it.
