Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina, toward which the drive of the Russian left wing is directed, is reported evacuated by the Austrians. Lemberg is now so seriously threatened by both the centre and the right wing of the Czar's armies that it is reported that the civil population of the capital of the rich Galleia province has already been ordered to evacuate it. This is, briefly stated, the situation on the Austro-Russian front after a little more than a week since the Slavs' irresistible drive was begun.

While the Austro-Hungarians, utterly unable to stop the wave of invasion which again threatens the Dual Monarchy, are swiftly driven back toward the Carpathians, von Hindenburg is said to have attacked the Russian line north of Pinsk, evidently hoping to divert Russian forces from Volhynia and Galicia and compel General Brusiloff to abandon his southern offensive. Whether von Hindenburg's offensive, undertaken now with far smaller forces than in the summer of last year, will succeed in making any impression on the Russians and compel General Kuropatkin to summon aid from the southern army of General Brusiloff is to be seen. It may be safely assumed that the Russian Staff, fully expecting a renewal of the German pressure north of Pinsk, has prepared to meet the situation.

Germany has her hands full in France. Will she abandon the Verdun offensive again to check the Czar, as she did after the Marne? This is another interesting point in the present situation. What seems certain now is that Germany and Austria are beginning to feel the uncomfortable position of having to fight simultaneously on more than one front.

In the meantime, while the military situation on the Eastern front appears so serious, the Italians are pushing their offensive movement on the Trentino front, taking advantage of the withdrawal of Austrian troops and artillery. Advances are announced from the Adige to the Brenta rivers, which shows clearly that the Austrian pressure there has diminished.

A moment before he had said; "Undoubtedly, gentlemen, it is the duty of America to be prepared."

President Wilson promised in behalf of the United States to uphold the Monroe Doctrine. He promised, too, what he did not promise when he made the recent Peace League speech, that when the time comes America will be ready to join the other nations to see that "that kind of justice prevails everywhere that we believe in."

To be military does not mean being militaristic, the President said. He asked the West Point men not to forget that they are citizens first. Diplomas Issued to Large

OCCUPATION

By PE! . ARNOLD ST. LOUIS. June 13.—William Jennings Bryan arrived today and found the Demo-cratic National Committee ready to tell him "goodby and God bless you."

Nothing could be more indicative of how Democracy's times have changed than the Rowan's face was flushed a salmon color and he bent forward eagerly to catch every world. Martin's face was as white as chalk, his eyes were watery, the muscles of his face twitched continually and he snuffled like a man with a January cold. Frequently his eyes closed and he snored faintly. These cataspa would last only a few seconds. His hands would lerk up suddenly like a person's with a nervous affliction, and his watery eyes would open.

When Judge Thompson pointed out to the district attorney that there was no evidence of a sale. Rowan turned gleefully to Martin and whispered: "Bob, I think we are going to make it." Martin snuffled, but made no reply.

Nothing could be more indicated than the fact that the Great Commoner, four times a dominant figure in national conventions and three times Democracy's candidate for presidential honors, now figures in the councils of that party as a mere alternate from Nebraska and a reporter.

In all the platform talk heard today there was no indication that the former Secretary of State would have a hand in the hewing of the planks. He pledged himself several weeks ago not to inject the prohibition issue into the convention—and having done so, the Democrats were willing today to let Bryan alone with hopes that Hryan would also let Democracy alone and rates no discordant note in the harmony program. Internal Revenue Officere McDevitt and Beach testified that they had confiscated these articles from a room in which they had found both Rowan and Martin.

rates no discordant note in the program.

Twenty years ago the silver-tongued orator came to the 1895 Democratic convention as a reporter, thrilled Democracy with his eloquetice and departed its presidential candidate. Four years later he was reisominated. In 1994, his leadership was rejected and another candidate chosen, but four years later sit was William J. Bryan who made the race as Democracy's standard hearer. In 1912, it was Bryan who forced the nomination of Woodrow Wilson, Bryan who headed off Champ Clark, and Bryan who headed off Champ Clark, and Bryan who headed off Champ Clark, and Bryan who detailed the platform.

In the convention of 1918 William J. Bryan will be a reporter again, fust as he was 39 years ago. He is officially secredited also as alternate. Alternates caused address the chair from the ficer except with unatimous coment. Newspaper reporters of course, cannot participate in the proceedings.

Delegates Arrive at St. Louis With a Whoop-Set Pessimism Aside

Wilson Backs Marshall and Machinery Is Expected to Run Smoothly

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN

ST. LOUIS, June 13 .- For President-Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey. For Vice President-Thomas Riley Mar-

This will be the ticket named at the Democratic National Convention, which assembles at noon tomorrow. It will be named with the consent of President Wilson. And the Administration leaders on the ground are confident that at the last moment all of the opposition fostered here for the paying off of minor political grudges will be wiped out.

The suggestion of a "Donnybrook" still is in the air. But the Administration is determined that it shall not be pressed to the point that rancor and bitterness shall be engendered that may imperil the parry success in States which now are considered certainly Democratic. The Old Guard, in whose ranks are numbered the leaders of several of the big States, is all powerful to defeat Marshall for renomination if it so desires. It controls more than one-third of the delegates to the convention, being in almost exactly the same position that the Wilson followers were at the Baltimore convention four years ago. But following a conversation over the long-distance telephone between the President, in Washington, and the representatives here of the Indiana Democratic organization the word was passed along the line that the Président has squarely lined up behind vice President has squarely lined up behind vice President has squarely lined up behind vice President Marshall and that he will ask that he be nominated. This, it is admitted, assures his success unless the Old Guard wants a fight that will shatter the Democratic structure to its very centre.
